"It was impossible for him to be neutral in the face of wrong. He believed in a free press, free speech, and pitiless publicity, and understood that a democracy resenting criticism, smothering the press and hampering publicity is a democracy in danger if not a democracy dying.

"He dreamed dreams and saw visions, he had strong likes and strong dislikes, he worked hard, played hard, put his soul into whatever he was doing.

"A voyage of discovery in the Brazilian jungle, a hunt in Africa, were rest periods. An omnivorous reader, he was never without his favorite authors even in the jungle or on the hunt. He loved a bout with the broadswords, a hard run, a climb over rough and dangerous places, or a good horse across country, stalking big game, all the sports of a healthy, strong-hearted man. He loved the wild places of the world, the birds, the animals, and understood them as few do. He saw the Creator in nature.

His Love of Children.

"He loved children, loved to be with them, adored to have them with him on walks, trying always to make them love the open and understand the things they saw. He saw and appreciated the efforts of those about him, and had a word of kindly cheer and encouragement for all who tried. He believed in the dignity of labor, and that the dignity came not so much from the character of the work as from the way in which it was done.

"A brave soldier, he was often almost reckless of his own safety, but most careful of his men. Always subordinate and loyal, yet he understood the distinction between subordination and servility. His men loved him and he could instill the best of all discipline, that which is founded on respect and confidence. When the situation required, he stood ready for the extreme sacrifice. On these occasions his words were come on, not go.

"A many-sided man, but four-square to all the world; Christian gentleman, author, student, lover of nature, wise statesman, soldier, builder of standards, writer of history, scholar, man with a clean soul and dauntless spirit, whose watchword was Duty, and whose life was one of service for God, for country, and the right. Such was Theodore Roosevelt. He was the most inspiring and hence the most dominant figure in American life since Abraham Lincoln.

"With him no man could be part American and something else. He must be all American. Along the fighting line in France and Flanders there were more inquiries concerning his opinion, his views, his probable line of action than concerning all other Americans combined. They saw in him an intense American, but also a citizen of the world, one who loved justice, whose sympathies were not limited by nationality or creed.

"He realized that Leagues of Nations can only be enduring when they are based upon community of interest and of areas, and, above all, community of morals and ideals, but he never believed nor for a moment tolerated the idea that we should enter into any league which would deprive us of the right of free action within our own sphere of influence, or put us in a position of unpreparedness to do what we believed to be right, or in a condition which would render us unable to defend our own interests in case of need.

"To him the ideal was the married life. He was devoted to home and family. He had profound respect for women and never spoke disparagingly of them. He abhorred the vulgar and coarse of speech, the loose liver and the immoral. His life was a clean, normal, wholesome life. His broad vision, wide knowledge of world affairs, and sound judgment were never more needed than today. He was a citizen of the world in his breadth and sympathy and understanding. The upright, fair-dealing, justice-loving nations have lost a friend; the predatory and faithless an unyielding foe, for Theodore Roosevelt loved truth and fair dealing, and believed that a moral and straightforward life should characterize nations as well as individuals."

Tells of Roosevelt's Influence.

The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, who preached yesterday at the Church of St. Thomas, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, said:

"Theodore Roosevelt in his lifetime influenced more people for good than any other man who has lived, explain it as you may. No other statesman has so appealed to the imagination of the world. He made the fight for righteousness not merely glorious, but interesting and joyous. He was always a marvelous combination of boy and soldier and sage, with a boy's clean heart and love of life, the soldier's courage and loyalty, and the sage's knowledge of the past, vision of the future, and wise decision in the present.

"No other man filled so many places or filled them so well, from historian to explorer, from Police Commissioner to President. He died at one of the most interesting periods of history, but with him something of our keen zest in life seems also to have gone. It is a serious problem with many millions of Americans as to how they are to fight in the absence of their most valued and trusted leader.

"Today we thank God for Theodore Roosevelt. Today we pray God for leaders with vision and courage. Today we consecrate ourselves anew for the defense and growth of that dear America, which Roosevelt loved and served."

The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, who preached yesterday at Trinity Church on Colonel Roosevelt, whose intimate friend he was, said that the ideals of Colonel Roosevelt were needed in the fight against Bolshevism.

"He was the first President," said Dr. Manning, "to recognize the responsibility of the Government in regard to social conditions. He entered the White House at a time when things almost impossible and certain to arouse bitter misunderstandings and opposition needed to be done, and in great measure he succeeded in accomplishing them.

"He stirred the conscience of the country and gave our business and industrial life a new standard. There was in him no unworthy pandering to a particular class of men. He was as fearless in his dealings with labor as with capital. He had no ignorant antagonism to big business as such, but he was as intolerant of wrongdoing by big busniess as he was of the crimes plotted or committed by the I. W. W. or other anarchistic organizations.

Long and brilliant as was his career in public office, it was his distinction to wield his greatest influence, and render his noblest service, as a private citizen, and in the last years of his life.

Roused the Nation's Soul.

"The name of Theodore Roosevelt will stand forever associated with the entrance of America into the great war for freedom and humanity. It was his voice far more than any other which roused the soul of our country and brought us to ourselves. It was his fearless witness which compelled our people to see the truth and to meet their responsibility. Again and again it was his clear call which forced our country to action already far too long delayed. It was he who led in the demand that there should be no terms with Germany but unconditional surrender. The part which Theodore Roosevelt played in the world war will be given great place by the historians.

"And when the fighting was ended it was his voice which was again lifted up for a just and righteous settlement, and against a soft and immoral peace.

"It is a day when many, both men and women, are guided by emotion rather than by well-thought-out principle and clear judgment. Let us stand against that pacifist spirit which seems to see little difference between right and wrong, between truth and falsehood, between loyalty and disloyalty. Let us stand for the ideal of American freedom and against those anarchistic influences and movements which would destroy it.

"Let us stand for a Government owned and controlled and run by the people, and not for a people owned body and soul and run by the Government. Let us stand for the Constitution of the United States, and against all, no matter how good their intentions, who are using their influence to impair it or to create distrust in it or to overthrow it. So shall we best do our part as Americans. And so shall we best honor the name and memory of Theodore Roosevelt."

The Rev. Dr. Wilton Merle-Smith, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church at Madison Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street, in his sermon yesterday morning referred to the fact that in the present month occur the anniversaries of the birth of two of America's immortals—Washington and Lincoln.

"One other name only I think will be added by the common voice of our land," he said. "Theodore Roosevelt is among the immortals for whom this nation is profoundly grateful to God."

Ex-Senator Depew's Estimate.

Ex-Senator Chauncey M. Depew, who spoke yesterday at the Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A. at one of the memorial services of the War Camp Community Service, said:

"Roosevelt first among our public men saw what must be our position in this world war. He found the great mass of his countrymen satisfied with their isolation and pacifists in sentiments, but in season and out of season, he preached preparedness and the peril to us at home and to our institutions of the triumph of autocracy upon the field of battle in Europe. It was the wonderful effect of his stirring appeals which made it possible for the President to secure universal assent for the declaration of war."

Father J. J. Curran of Wilkes-Barre, whose help in the settlement of the anthracite strike in 1902 made him one of Colonel Roosevelt's closest friends, sketched the life of the former President in an address at the Riverside Theatre where exercises were held ending with the sounding of taps. Father Curran said that the work of Roosevelt as Secretary of the Navy had laid the foundation of our modern navy, that he was the first and wisest in his plan of curbing trusts and regulating railroads, the pioneer in restoring cleanness and wholesomeness to American politics and the leader of America in the fight in international affairs.

"He was the man of the hour," said the priest, "the man of the nation, and the man of the world."

Dr. Henry B. Washburn, who delivered the eulogy at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, said:

"Mr. Roosevelt staked his all for the honor of America. For his country he kept his body strong, his mind clear, and his purpose clear. He led men into battle in the interest of a righteous cause. He gave his own flesh and blood that the nation might maintain its righteous position.

"We know that in the days at hand the country will miss this far-seeing, well-reasoning spokesman. We are not concerned with the rightness or the wrongness of his conclusions, but we are concerned in the principles that underlay them."

In concluding his eulogy of Colonel Roosevelt, the Rev. Dr. Malcolm James MacLeod, who preached at the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, said:

"I look upon Theodore Roosevelt as a great Christian and a great prophet of the Lord."

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, who preached in the First Reformed Church at Passaic, N. J., emphasized the feeling that a great source of interest in life had disappeared with the death of Colonel Roosevelt, and he added:

"How many people have said to me, 'We don't know how we will get along without Teddy!'"

"The international work of Theodore Roosevelt freshest in our minds is, of course, the herculean work he did to throw the resistless power of the American republic into the recent combat of nations. In doing this he was again typical of the American people. He did not at once take sides in that gigantic struggle. Months went by before the full meaning of it seemingly became clear to him.

"But when he felt that he understood the real issue Theodore Roosevelt devoted the last years of his life to the task of making his countrymen see that issue. He succeeded, but only after such intense, sustained, and long-continued effort as few men ever have put forth. All the strivings of this tempestuous life put together did not equal the energy and emotion of his three years.

"More than any one man, more than any one hundred men, more than any one thousand men, Theodore Roosevelt was effective in making America the decisive factor of what he profoundly and passionately believed to be a moral test of strength between liberty and despotism. If, as all nations admit, America turned the tide, then to Theodore Roosevelt, more than to any one single human being, is due the victory of freedom.

"If asked for one word to describe Theodore Roosevelt as I knew him, I should say that the word 'greatheartedness' best expressed the man. Had he lived in the age of chivalry he would have been called 'Great Heart.'"

Tells of Roosevelt's Wide Appeal.

Members of the four Protestant churches in Flatbush and representatives of civic societies in that part of Brooklyn crowded the Flatbush Congregational Church last night to hear ex-Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio talk intimately of Theodore Roosevelt out of the store of knowledge the speaker had gathered during many years of personal and political association.

Mr. Burton said that though the Colonel's exuberant physical energy was his most dominant characteristic, and his mental qualities were, perhaps, surpassed by those of some other great statesmen, yet mentally his life should prove an encouragement to any young man, for there never was a height too steep for him to climb.

"At times in steering the ship," he went on, "he steered perilously near the shoals. He was aggressive, never afraid of an open fight, never afraid of a losing one. Yet though from being a weakling in childhood he had come to excel in athletics, he was always tender and considerate toward physical weakness. Only history will tell what were his greatest achievements as President—to me they seem to have been his work in conserving the nation's natural resources, in upbuilding the consular service, and improving its personnel, and the passage of the pure food law.

"Never was there a man who so appealed to all classes of all peoples. His books were read universally, and because he could write of the smaller things, because he could take joy in the smaller and the more active pastimes, he appealed particularly to children. Many persons thought he was obstinate, yet I never knew a man who could so quickly change his mind when shown he was wrong by a man he knew to be truthful and honest. I well remember once I went to him in 190[illegible] to ask him to veto an Alabama water grab bill. He asked me for a memorandum of my objections to it. An hour after I sent the bill and the memorandum to the White House, he returned them with a veto which showed that not only had he grasped my ideas, but he had mastered all the details of the thing himself and had added much to what I had written.

"Like Abraham Lincoln and William McKinley, he was a man who listened to public opinion. He ever believed in law and order and opposed bitterly all forms of mob rule up to the Bolshevik movement of the present day.

"He was an omnivorous reader and he mastered what he had to read. I think it was this taste for reading that led him to travel so widely, or else the two went hand in hand. The wanderlust stirred him and drove him even into the wilds of Brazil, and after he returned from that perilous journey he was never the same."

EXERCISES BY LEGISLATURE.

Chancellor Day Attacks Wilson at Memorial to Roosevelt.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Memorial services for Theodore Roosevelt were held by the Legislature tonight in the Assembly Chamber, where Roosevelt began his public career. One of the speakers was James R. Day, chancellor of Syracuse University, who, declaring that the United States has no right to inject itself into the world peace deliberations until peace has been actually accomplished and then only through Congress, said he longed for the return of Roosevelt in the spirit "to be impersonated in some other brave man" who will challenge the right of anybody to depart from the traditions and laws of the country.

He expressed the wish that Roosevelt was alive and taking part in the peace discussions in France, adding:

"I have a notion that we have no business whatever with a lot of the things we are trying to do over there—the running of new boundaries for new States, to determine the relationship of Poland and Jugoslavia, and Italy and the Jugoslavs and the different republics of Germany and Austria, and the indemnity which shall be paid over to France and Belgium and England and Italy. Let those nations that are related settle their own business; after our boys had done their magnificent fighting there was just one thing for us to do and that was to fold up tents and come home again.

"And then, after peace was settled, the United States in its Congress could adjust itself and enter upon the discussion rationally, coolly, and deliberately with regard to the League of Nations and the right of the seas and anything left of the fourteen beatitudes.

"Has anybody sent any terms of peace to Paris? They have been taken over arbitrarily and presented upon a surmise that we would be pleased when we got them back. We are not accustomed to the government of this country by one man. In the name of high heaven, where are we going to? Where did we come from? What is becoming of the Government of the United States? Been put in a bag and sent out to sea!"

Chancellor Day declared that Roosevelt had been relegated to a position of inactivity and "left to write editorials in a Western paper."

"What was the motive which prompted it?" he asked. "Some day it will be brought out, and the shame of it will be burned visibly into the history of this great nation."

Joseph A. Lawson of Albany, who was a classmate of Roosevelt in Columbia University, was the other speaker. He related many intimate stories of the late ex-President.

"He and the German Emperor sat side by side on magnificent steeds at a review," he said, and then after a pause significantly added: "But Emperor William will never see Theodore Roosevelt again."

Assemblyman Louis M. Martin, who was a member of the House when Roosevelt was Governor, presided. Governor Smith, Mrs. Smith, and legislators were in the large assemblage.

CHICAGO HONORS ROOSEVELT.

Lowden, Allen, Dunne, and Jane Addams Among the Speakers.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—Chicago paid tribute to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt today at a big mass meeting in the Auditorium. Raymond Robins presided. The speakers included Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who spoke of "Roosevelt, the Man"; Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, who eulogized Roosevelt's record as a statesman; ex-Governor Edward F. Dunne of Illinois, who discussed "Roosevelt, the Leader," and Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, who spoke of "Roosevelt, the Reformer."

Resolutions expressing sorrow at the death of Roosevelt were offered by Edgar A. Bancroft and adopted by a rising vote. The audience sang "America" and the hymn "How Firm the Foundation." Major Father E. J. Vattman delivered the invocation and Bishop Charles P. Anderson pronounced the benediction.

"There are those," said Governor Lowden, "who would compare Theodore Roosevelt with Lincoln, Jackson, or some other. This, I think, is wrong. He was as distinctly individual as any man in our history and therefore is like no other man in our history. Men of the first rank are like to nothing but themselves. So he was just Theodore Roosevelt. The most forceful personality of our time has gone from our midst. But while America endures it will be a better America because he lived and wrought."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 9.—Tribute was paid to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt in virtually all the churches and theatres and by civic organizations today. Many ecclesiastics devoted their entire sermons to praise of the late ex-President.

HONOR ROOSEVELT AT WESTMINSTER

Memorial Services Held in Ancient Abbey, "Shrine of the Anglo-Saxon Race."

PROTAGONIST OF THE RIGHT

Aroused American People on Ethics of World War, Archdeacon Carnegie Declares in Sermon.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—A representative gathering of Americans and English filled Westminster Abbey this afternoon to pay tribute to the late Theodore Roosevelt in a memorial service which for the first time in history displaced evensong in the Abbey. Ambassador and Mrs. Davis, the staff of the American Embassy, Robert P. Skinner, the Consul General, and his staff, Vice Admiral Sims, many navy and army officers, and the representatives of American societies were present. Prince Arthur of Connaught represented King George, and Earl Howe represented Dowager Queen Alexandra, to whom he is Lord Chamberlain. Baron Beresford, Viscount Bryce, Earl Curzon, Arthur N. Chamberlain, Lord Southwark, and many other notables were in the audience.

After the choir had chanted "I Am the Resurrection," the Thirtieth and Ninetieth psalms were chanted, while in the course of the opening service the choir sang the anthem, "I Heard a Voice from Heaven."

The sermon was delivered by Archdeacon Carnegie, who said that the tribute shown here "at the shrine of the Anglo-Saxon race" proved the high place that Theodore Roosevelt held in the hearts of the British people.

"His was a forceful and magnetic personality, vital and strong in work or in play," said the Archdeacon. "He was a warm-hearted friend and a fair opponent. He was a good sportsman, entirely fearless and the soul of honor. He had all these qualities, which the Anglo-Saxon ever appreciates and admires."

Colonel Roosevelt, said the Archdeacon, had cast his influence always on the side of moral right. Some one had said, the speaker remarked, that his greatest feat was the rediscovery of the Ten Commandments. To him right was right and wrong was wrong, and at all hazards he ever chose the plain path of duty.

Archdeacon Carnegie referred to the outbreak of the war, and how the British saw Belgium invaded, and declared themselves on the side of the right. Colonel Roosevelt saw it, too, added the speaker, and aroused the American people. The Archdeacon reviewed Colonel Roosevelt's services to bring the British and Americans together.

"He spent himself, he sacrificed his life," the speaker said, "but long before he died he realized that his allotted task was completed."

The Archdeacon referred to the unity achieved by the British and their American kinsmen, which was "too long delayed," and to which Colonel Roosevelt, he said, contributed no small part.

The choir sang "How Firm a Foundation," and then "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." Then, as the Archdeacon and the clergy left the abbey in solemn procession, the western sun poured through the abbey windows and the organ burst forth with "The Star-Spangled Banner."

SERVICES BY ARMY ABROAD.

Memorial to Roosevelt in Church Where German Royalty Worshiped.

COBLENZ, Feb 9, (Associated Press.)—Memorial services for Theodore Roosevelt were held today throughout the American Army of Occupation. The order for the services received at the various headquarters was that such service should be held in memory of the "former President of the United States."

At Army Headquarters the service was conducted in the Church of the Royal Palace, where formerly the members of the German royal family worshipped when temporarily residing there. Chaplains Esterbrook and Jefferies were in charge.

McADOO PRAISES ROOSEVELT.

Greatest Republican Since Lincoln—Awakened Public Conscience.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Feb. 9.—"Of all the great men the Republican Party has produced since the incomparable Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt was the greatest," W. G. McAdoo, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, said today in the principal address at the Roosevelt memorial service here.

"When Mr. Roosevelt became President in 1901 the Republican Party was atrophied and the conscience of the nation was chloroformed," said Mr. McAdoo. "One of Roosevelt's greatest achievements was his espousal of progressive reforms, his vitalizing of the public conscience, and his determined fight against those reactionary and selfish interests within his party which were seriously threatening the integrity and usefulness of democratic institutions. What he accomplished for the progressive thought of America survives today as a beneficial influence upon the national life."

FORECASTS BRITISH RULE IN PALESTINE

Rabbi Wise Tells Zionist Meeting Peace Conference Will Grant Mandatory.

FINDS COUNCIL FRIENDLY

Declares Great Britain Is Bestowing Precious Boon on Jewish People.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, recently returned from Paris where he represented the Zionists of America before the delegates of the Peace Conference, in making his report last night at a Victory celebration in the Manhattan Opera House arranged by the Zionist Organization of America, declared that before the Peace Conference adjourns it will give Great Britain a mandate of trusteeship on behalf of the Jews of the world over Palestine. The auditorium was crowded with an audience estimated at 4,000 persons and many were turned away because of lack of room. The Chairman of the meeting was Judge Julian W. Mack. More than $250,000 was collected for the Palestine Restoration Fund.

"Our interests are in the hands of friends, of friendly Powers," declared Dr. Wise in his address, "the Powers which lead at the Peace Conference being friendliest to the people of Israel. Nothing could be more unjust than to claim, as is basely urged, that Great Britain is not bestowing a precious boon upon the Jewish people, but is using the Jewish people in order to hide an imperialist plan.

"The truth is that Great Britain is most reluctant to accept any further responsibilities as Great Britain well may be reluctant, viewing the world-wide problems of the British Commonwealth. I have heard from the lips of British statesmen whom I respect that, if Great Britain accepts the trusteeship over a Jewish Palestine, it will be because Great Britain must bow before the mandate of the League of Nations, because Great Britain is deeply concerned about the welfare of the Jewish people.

Counts on France and Italy.

"The question is asked, What of France? What of Italy? The democracies of France and Italy cannot be unsympathetic to the Zionist purposes. A world which was ready to sacrifice all that Alsace-Lorraine might be restored to France may confidently expect the generous impulses and the noblest sympathies of France to come to the reinforcement of Jewish hopes. Italy, too, may be counted on for furtherance of the age-long dream of the Jewish Irredenta about to be translated into Jewish opportunity and the foundation of a Jewish commonwealth.

"If, however, we speak with some degree of confidence touching Zionist plans, it is because we count much upon him who stands out as the foremost figure of the Peace Conference, because we have reason to believe that Israel has never possessed a friend more eager to further its high fortunes than the leader of the American people, who has come in unique and unprecedented fashion to command the reverence, the admiration and the love of the people of Europe.

"The League of Nations will come to pass because the small nationalities or peoples cannot hope for a secure and uninvaded life unless the league is established. The League of Nations means the meeting of the conscience of the great nations and the confidence of the small ones. The League of Nations is the high ordinance of self-denial which the great powers lay upon themselves jointly and severally, not only to avert the resurgence of Prussianism in any form or under any guise or by any name, but to guarantee the right to life and security of those smaller nations which suffered most under the old régime and shall gain most under the new régime.

Warns New States.

"And what does a trusteeship mean? While no one may venture to forecast save in outline the content of trusteeship, it may with reason be urged that the League of Nations will confer mandates upon different powers, entailing upon those powers the responsibility of protection, guardianship and furtherance until the day comes when, in the collective judgment of the League of Nations, the smaller nations are ready for independence as the establishment of the league now decrees their liberation to be a fact."

The question of the restoration of a Jewish nation is before the Versailles conference, said Dr. Wise, just the same as it has before it the question of the redemption of Belgium and the recreation of Serbia. As conditions precedent to a peace of justice to the Jews of the world, he said that the conference must grant equal status, political, economic, and civil, to Jews in all lands signatory to the peace treaty. In lands where peoples enjoy group or minority rights, he added, the conference must be expected to confer such rights on the Jews. He desired to enter no controversy, he said, but uttered the warning "to those people about to enter Statehood, that they may deny equal rights if they will, but if they do their existence will be imperiled.

Dr. Wise declared if Great Britain could give the Jews a finished Palestine at once they would not want it. "We want Palestine to represent the sacrifice, the toil, and the martyrdom of the Jewish people," he continued. He defended France from the "voices lifted up to poison her on accusations of imperialism," and said that he knew the heart of France, which he said could be trusted to be just to the Jews in spite of the fact that France, as other nations, contained some imperialists. "The Peace Conference cannot, will not, dare not adjourn until it has intrusted the mandate of trusteeship of Palestine to Great Britain and rendered justice to the Jews," he asserted.

Judge Mack, in opening the meeting, paid a tribute to Theodore Roosevelt, saying that no man in America was more devoted to the ideal for which the Zionist movement stands, and recalled that during the last year Colonel Roosevelt had given his adhesion to the movement which sent forth the Jewish legion to fight for Palestine. The audience arose in memory of the deceased President.

PRIEST DEFENDS Y. M. C. A.

Former Chaplain Eding Deplores Criticism of the War.

In the course of an address yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the Church of Our Lady of Mercy, in the Bronx, Father James H. Eding, formerly a professor in St. John's College, Brooklyn, and more recently Chaplain of the 58th Field Artillery on the western front, defended the Y. M. C. A. "Stop knocking that organization," the priest urged his hearers. "Our Government did a big task, and I think you will admit it has carried it to a successful and satisfactory conclusion, and every organization has done its bit. As long as human nature is human we are all bound to make mistakes. It seems to me the victory is so big there is glory enough for us all."

Father Eding told of hearing much complaint aboard the transport which took him to Europe that apparently there was no protecting convoy. Yet, he said, as an example of unfounded criticism, the ship got safely by the German submarines and later it developed that the fears of those aboard had been groundless. The speaker paid warm tribute to the quality of American fighting men and said their morale was particularly fine, instancing the fact that in eight months abroad he heard of but five cases of intoxication.

Six Electric Servants in One Home

An Actual Example

Iron Percolator Curling Iron Heating Pad Toaster Vacuum Cleaner

These little servants include an electric iron, a coffee percolator, an electric curling iron, "a hot water bottle"—the electric heating pad—an electric toaster and a vacuum cleaner

In a seven-room apartment, eight members in the family, the total bill for these six "little servants" and electric light averaged $2.97 for each of the months of last year

Everybody had all the light wanted, and the electrical devices were used as much as they were needed

Only one device was missing—the electric washing machine. It would have added less than twenty cents monthly to the bill

All of these devices, so essential to the modern home, are shown at our various Show Rooms, or they may be seen in operation at our Bureau of Home Economics on the third floor of the 42nd Street Office

Any one interested in securing greater home efficiency, convenience, and comfort is welcome, without the slightest obligation to purchase any device or to use electric current

What is Library Bureau?

Library Bureau is the name of the world's largest manufacturer of card record and filing equipment. It is more than that. It is the organization that originated and improved most of the filing methods that are accepted as standard today.

L. B. originated the card system. It originated vertical filing. It originated the card record desk. It originated the L. B. Automatic Index—the quickest, most accurate and most practical system of filing and un-filing the business world has ever known.

L. B. did not stop at any one of these things, but kept right on developing the idea, adapting it in some form to every form of business.

Today, Library Bureau is a national and international institution—with 49 branch offices in leading cities of the United States, Great Britain and France.

Forty-three years experience in solving filing problems has given the L. B. organization an exact knowledge that is invaluable in these days of Reconstruction.

We would like nothing better than to apply this practical know-how to the betterment of your own filing and accounting methods.

BRONX FIRE NEAR MOTOR TRUCK PLANT

Waterfront Blaze at 133d St. Threatens to Spread to Hurlburt Factory.

DUMP OIL TANKS IN RIVER

Fireboats and Apparatus from Two Boroughs Fight Flames from Scrap Rubber.

Practically all the fire apparatus in the Bronx was called out late last night, reinforced by engines and trucks from the upper west side of Manhattan, to fight a fire which started on the third floor of the building at Third Avenue and 133d Street occupied by H. Meuhlstein & Co., dealers in scrap rubber. By the time the first firemen got there the entire building was ablaze and a dense, acrid smoke from hundreds of tons of rubber was spreading like a pall over the neighborhood.

Just north of the structure on Third Avenue at 134th Street is the plant of the Hurlburt Motor Truck Company. Stored in an adjacent yard along the Harlem River were a thousand big tanks of gasoline belonging to the California Oil Company. When Acting Chief Smoky Joe Martin arrived in response to a fourth alarm, he ordered these thrown into the river for fear the fire would spread to the Hurlburt plant. A number were thrown into the river before the danger was past.

Firemen fought the blaze with much difficulty, getting as near as they could on the Third Avenue elevated structure and the drawbridge across the Harlem River at that point. There was but one occupant of the building, a watchman, and he escaped when passers-by discovered the blaze.

Chief Martin as soon as he was satisfied that the gasoline had been disposed of and explosions that might have endangered the whole neighborhood thus averted, sent a call for four fireboats. These steamed up to join a battery of New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad tugs which already were pouring streams into the building from the waterfront side.

This method of fighting the flames proved much more effective, as the dense screen from the burning rubber made it almost impossible for firemen on the land side to approach within effective fighting distance.

Traffic on the Third Avenue elevated and surface lines was halted as soon as the fire had become menacing. The great clouds of smoke and the occasional belch of flames, as the wind now and then lifted the curtain, alarmed residents of the Bronx for a great distance, and so many persons hurried to what they believed to be a great conflagration that it was necessary to call reserves from several police stations.

An "L" of the building extends into 134th Street and abuts on the Hurlburt yards. A particularly hard fight was made to save this part of the structure, for fear the flames would be communicated to the Hurlburt plant and streams were kept playing on the riverside dock in order to save a number of finished trucks parked there which, it was said, were the property of the United States Government.

Early this morning the fire was not yet entirely under control, but Chief Martin thought it would be extinguished by daylight and that it would not spread outside the building. The structure was occupied formerly by the Mott Iron Works.

FATHER ARRESTED ON CRUELTY CHARGE

Confesses He Whipped Three-Year-Old Boy Severely and Then Abandoned Him.

CAST OUT AN OLDER CHILD

Police Hear He Was Led Away and Deserted Because He Asked for Food.

Although the three-year-old boy who was found in a doorway at Broadway and Fulton Street at midnight on Thursday was identified yesterday as Harry Samuels Hanley and his father and stepmother were arrested in Bayonne on two charges, no trace had been found last night of the boy's brother, 6 years old, whom the parents confessed they had abandoned on Jan. 25. The older boy was deserted at Liberty Street, near Greenwich Street, by his father.

The stepmother brought the younger child from Bayonne to this city on Thursday night and left him alone at Broadway and Maiden Lane. A stranger who saw the child trying to keep warm in the doorway notified the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and an officer of the institution discovered that the boy had been severely beaten. The child's eye was black, and the medical report submitted to the society by Dr. W. Travis Gibb yesterday said thirty-nine contusions had been counted on his body.

After the child's photograph appeared in newspapers on Saturday the society received a telephone message from a woman in Bayonne, who said she was a neighbor of Mrs. Frederick Hanley of 707 Hudson Boulevard, and that Mrs. Hanley had told her several days before that both her children had been placed in institutions in this city. The photograph in the paper, she added, was that of the younger child.

V. T. Pizarro, Assistant Superintendent of the society, and Captain John J. Rigney of the Bayonne police visited the house at 707 Hudson Boulevard yesterday, and from Mrs. Mary Burke, who rented rooms to the Hanley family, they learned that the older boy also was missing. Mrs. Burke said she had remonstrated with the father and stepmother about the treatment of the children, and had told them that unless they stopped beating the boys they would be compelled to vacate the flat.

Hanley said that both boys had been placed in care of "John Smith of Ivanhoe, Va." He and his wife confessed later that they had deserted the children in this city. Hanley said he was a laborer employed by an oil company and had been earning $25 a week. His first wife left him with the children, he said.

Mrs. Hanley told the police she had been ill and could not care for the children, who were demanding food constantly. They were unruly, she said, so the father whipped them with a razor strap. The children did not like her, anyway, she added.

Hanley was held on a charge of assault and abandonment, and his wife with "taking the boys out of Bayonne for the purpose of abandonment." They will have a hearing before Recorder Cain on Wednesday.

The father said that Claude, the older boy, wore a gray sweater, blue trousers, a blue and white knit cap, a brown overcoat, and black button shoes. He has light hair and blue eyes.

WAR HONORS TO BOY SCOUTS

Government Gives Recognition to 71,016 Young Bond Salesmen.

In recognition of their work in selling Liberty bonds and War Savings Stamps thousands of members of the Boy Scouts of America are receiving from the Treasury Department in Washington medals and emblems. Thus far 71,016 awards to scouts who have sold ten bonds or more have been made by the Government.

In the first Liberty Loan campaign 8,633 boys won the bronze emblem imprinted with the Treasury seal. More than three thousand of these boys distinguished themselves in ways which entitled them to wear bars with their medals. In the second loan campaign 22,516 boys won medals, and in the third 23,633 emblems and 12,236 bars were given.

Thus far 6,133 troops have filed reports showing that they had turned in to the Government [illegible],481 subscriptions totaling $58,872,000. On this basis officials of the organization said yesterday that the full returns would likely show 1,039,000 subscriptions for $143,085,000.

The Far-Reaching Effect of Files

Sluggish files slow down executive action and create inaccurate correspondence. Errors in order filling and shipping as well as misunderstandings between departments salesmen and customers often trace back to slow files.

If you want referred-to files, you must have active files. Active files are the result of simple, foolproof indexing.

Amberg Indexes depend on only one reference factor—your A B Cs, because all names are visualized by being spelled with letters.

Amberg discovered the law of alphabetical occurrence in business names, which permits of indexing any known volume of correspondence so that its distribution will be within one per cent. of perfect.

With this basis and the proper application of filing principles any filing problem can be solved.

BERLANGA DEFENDS CARRANZA'S POLICY

Chief of Cabinet Says President Seeks to Utilize Mexico's Resources for Nation's Welfare.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 9.—A recent editorial in THE NEW YORK TIMES was answered today by Manuel Aguirre Berlanga, Chief of Cabinet. He said:

"THE TIMES censures in Carranza as a serious defect that idea that he desires Mexico shall gain from her own riches the most benefit possible. Until now no Government in the world has governed under other principles. France and England do not pretend anything else than that a nation should obtain from its own riches the most possible for the welfare of its inhabitants. The United States also follows the system of protection of its industry and commerce. If Mexico has followed this tendency with stronger force latterly this does not mean that she is unjust, but that she wishes to find the way to pursue the same course followed by other and stronger nations, that is, to consider the welfare of her inhabitants first.

"The powerful and rich nations as they have exploited the riches of their own countries have promoted the welfare of their citizens through economic expansion. France and England loan money to other countries. The United States builds railways. Cuba, Guatemala, Mexico, and countries like Mexico, which are not strong financially, cannot seek exterior expansion but must content themselves by trying to make the resources of their own soil furnish prosperity to their inhabitants as far as is possible. This cannot be considered as working against foreigners, but only as applying to one's nation's the same judgment which governs the procedure of other nations toward theirs.

"THE NEW YORK TIMES censures the act of Carranza in recommending the postponement of active election work, saying that his proclamation recommends forbearance until the eve of the election. This phrase is fallacious, because Carranza simply advised prudence and avoidance of haste in starting the Presidential campaign. The best proof that the present is not the time to start the campaign is that in the United States they do not think of starting theirs yet, notwithstanding that the Presidential terms in Mexico and North America run simultaneously and end within three months of each other, so that in Mexico we are in this respect on an equality with the United States. Why, then, should we be censured for the same thing that is applauded there?

"To study the situation in Mexico and interpret things as they are needs an unbiased writer, as unless he be impartial he cannot pretend to judge or make comparisons. One mistake of the article is in justifying the revolution in Mexico as an organized force with a political element. It has no political character. It is made up of nomadic bands of undisciplined men who always hide from the Federal forces, running away constantly, living on the country and committing all kinds of robbery. The parties in arms here in the first place are disorganized and have no relations to each other. From correspondence captured from the rebels it is seen that Villa detests Félix Diaz and thinks Zapata inept. Diaz has no confidence in Zapata and the latter has no faith in Diaz. So it is clear that no unity of action can combine the forces of these leaders, and that they are bands of robbers operating without cohesion.

"Zapataism as a political system, even with a flag of revolution, does not exist. Each time the Federal forces enter Morelos no enemy is found. Towns are discovered to be abandoned, the land uncultivated, and the inhabitants hungry, dirty, and almost naked, which is a sample of what Zapataism could do to the prosperity of the nation. It would be necessary to ignore completely what has been seen by the army under Gonzales, which now occupies the State of Morelos, and close one's eyes to the truth in order to believe the falsehoods spread by the enemy.

"Zapataism has been sustained by the nature of the broken, mountainous country, as in the time of President Juarez, of the empire of Maximilian and of President Lerda de Tejada, when Manuel Lozada maintained forces in the State of Tepic and grew so strong that he arrived at the head of thousands of men at the gates of Guadalajara, in 1865, which was a real danger to the Government. Lozada was not defeated by Federal troops, but captured through the treason of his own men.

"The country of Mexico lends itself especially to the persistence of all kinds of political sickness in the form of bandits."

In its editorial of Jan. 19, on conditions in Mexico THE NEW YORK TIMES said about Carranza:

"If he has a slogan it is: 'Americans shall not exploit Mexico.' By this he means that their concessions must not yield them wealth, that profits from the industries of Mexico shall accrue only to Mexicans. It is an idea that appeals powerfully to many of his followers who have grown rich out of the revolution, but in Carranza's mind it signifies an ineradicable prejudice.

"At the capital the poverty and misery are said to be indescribable, although the Government chiefs and the army officers are flagrantly prosperous. But inside the so-called revolutionary lines there is enough, and content and hope, for it must be considered that many of the rebels are tillers of the soil. They do not find it difficult to purchase ammunition from the Carranzistas."

ROSA RAISA

Prima Donna Soprano of the Chicago Opera Association

IS one of the most interesting figures on the operatic stage today. Born in Russian Poland, she fled to Italy at the age of 14 to escape political persecution. A pupil and protege of Mme. Campanini, she has already achieved sensational successes in London, Milan, Buenos Aires, Mexico, Chicago and New York though still in her twenties. A leading Chicago critic has called Raisa "the greatest dramatic soprano in the world."

Raisa is one of the famous group of brilliant artists who are recording for the Vocalion Record exclusively. Her record of the celebrated aria from Il Trovatore "D'amor sull' ah' rosee" is a splendid example both of the superb quality of her voice and the wonderful new system used in making Vocalion Records.

A Wonderful Voice — A Wonderful New Record and — the World Famous Phonograph —

The AEOLIAN-VOCALION

ON A CERTAIN SUNDAY afternoon last March, Rosa Raisa, prima donna soprano of the Chicago Opera Association, sang at a concert given in the Hippodrome in New York. No man, woman or child who attended that concert will ever forget it. They had heard what the critic of one of the leading New York papers called " the most marvelous, most glorious voice of any kind or character" which had come under his observation in many years.

THAT CONCERT, last Easter Sunday, is a memory. The tones that stirred its great audience to a "frenzy of enthusiasm" live only in the thoughts of those who heard.

In the beautiful Vocalion Studio on West 43rd Street in New York, however, Rosa Raisa has since sung many times. No great audience has been there to applaud, but the melodious notes of that wonderful voice have been preserved to thrill an infinitely vaster audience than any opera house or concert hall could hold.

Rosa Raisa is one of the great singers who are committing their art to the new Vocalion Record. In this Record, and the wonderful new system under which it is produced, are the means by which the world at last may gain a full measure of enjoyment from its gifted ones. Never before the Vocalion Record was perfected, had the human voice been reproduced to do it actual justice.

THE new Vooalion Record has followed as a natural consequence the production four years ago of the Aeolian-Vocalion itself. Here was a great phonograph—an extraordinary, scientific instrument, capable of playing records as records had never been played before.

Such improvement in the instrument suggested the possibility of further development of the record, and the new Vocalion Record is the successful result of the efforts in this direction. In combination, these two—Vocalion instrument, Vocalion record—represent the ultimate in phonograph development—the highest point to which the art of phonograph reproduction has yet been brought.

VOCALION FEATURES

TONE—Due to its advanced and more scientific construction, the Vocalion produces richer, deeper, more beautiful and more natural tones than have hitherto been heard from the phonograph.

TONE - CONTROL — The Graduola — the artistic and exclusive tone-controlling feature of the Vocalion, enables the performer to shade and color the music as he will. It enables anyone to participate in the playing of the record, to give voice to his own musical ideas and to prevent monotony by slight changes in the record's stereotyped expression.

APPEARANCE—In both outline and finish, the regular upright models of the Vocalion establish an entirely new standard of beauty for the phonograph. The beautiful Period Styles, though inexpensive, are the most unusual and artistic phonographs ever displayed.

MECHANICAL PERFECTION—The Automatic Stop on the Vocalion is an example of the perfection in mechanical detail characterizing this instrument. Simple, direct and absolutely dependable, this device is the most satisfactory of its kind yet invented.

And The New UNIVERSAL TONE-ARM —This great feature of the Vocalion, is a notable tribute to the skill and resource of the Aeolian staff. It provides the means by which every make of record can be played upon the Vocalion. With the record situation as it is today—with so many different manufacturers making records—this is the only way that all the great artists can be heard. Moreover, so well has this feature been designed that each make of record is played exactly as intended, thus producing from each the best results of which it is capable.

VOCALION PRICES

Comfort that Goes Beyond the Ordinary

In the Hupmobile, comfort means much more than the car's unusual riding and driving ease.

It means a quality of extraordinary performance that makes people think of the Hupmobile as a different kind of motor car.

It means ability to outpoint other cars with consistent frequency.

It includes uninterrupted, willing service from the car, without repeated visits to a service station.

It goes still further to the economy of daily operation and of yearly maintenance.

It means really remarkable mileage on gasoline and tires; and a gratifying freedom from heavy repair expense.

Hupmobile owners accept these things in their cars as matters of course.

They confidently count on better performance, better service and greater economy.

Their uncommon loyalty to the Hupmobile indicates that it conforms to their expectations.

Gentlemen
A Word With You
About Shaving

WHEN you buy a Safety Razor, buy a cake of Cuticura Soap and shave the Cuticura way, the healthy up-to-date way. No mug, no slimy soap, no germs, no free alkali, no waste, no irritation even when shaved twice daily. One soap for all uses—shaving, bathing, shampooing. Absolutely nothing like it, not to speak of its value in promoting skin purity, skin comfort and skin health. Largest selling skin soap in the world.

Cuticura Toilet Trio
Consisting of Soap, Ointment and Talcum are indispensable adjuncts of the daily toilet in maintaining skin purity and skin health. Bringing these delicately medicated emollients in frequent contact with your skin as in use for all toilet purposes, tends to keep the skin, scalp and hair clear, sweet and healthy. 25¢ each everywhere.

ARMY AND MARINE CASUALTIES NOW 243,530

980 Names in Two Army Casualty Lists; 31 Killed in Action; 15 Dead from Wounds

HYLAN ASSAILS THE P. S. C.

Tells Corporation Counsel to Oppose Brooklyn Electric Merger.

Before starting for Palm Beach on Saturday, Mayor Hylan assailed again the Public Service Commission by terming it "a stench in the nostrils of all decent people." He gave instructions to Corporation Counsel Burr to oppose to his "utmost power and ability" the granting by the Public Service Commission of the application of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Brooklyn and the Kings County Electric Light and Power Company to be permitted to merge or consolidate under the name of the Brooklyn Edison Company, Inc., and to issue $100,000,000 of bonds.

In a letter to the Corporation Counsel the Mayor said:

"These Brooklyn companies, who have no franchise rights in the streets, are now helped by the remaining members of the fast disintegrating body known as the Public Service Commission of the First District. It will be a good thing for the people of the City of New York when this commission is fully and completely reorganized. It has been a stench in the nostrils of all decent people.

"It does nothing for the people. It accomplishes nothing except those things which are desired by the corporations over which it was intended that this commission should have control. Judge Benedict and Judge Scudder have both decided that the rights of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Brooklyn and its affiliated companies are, to say the least, of doubtful legality.

"These companies were organized as manufacturing companies. They were never given the power of eminent domain. They have no authority from the State or from the city to use the streets, and how a Public Service Commission, under these circumstances, can permit their merger for the purpose of floating additional millions of bonds with the investing public, surpasses my comprehension.

"I know the entire familiarity you have with these subjects and I know the courage and ability with which you are endeavoring to protect the rights of the people, but this latest act of this discredited public body seems to me to call for special condemnation on the part of the city authorities and for renewed efforts on your behalf to protect, by prompt appeal from this decision to the courts, the interests of the city and its people."

Ship by Truck
All Directions from NEW YORK

Do you New York shippers realize the speed, convenience and time economy of making shipments out of New York by truck? Already New York has a system of truck routes radiating in all directions. Hundreds of New York industries are being well served. Hundreds more can be cared for. Read the schedule below. See how these truck-transportation lines can save you time, eliminate unnecessary handling, strengthen your distribution. "Ship by Truck" is the national transportation motto of today. The New York truck show of this week is a significant expression of the importance of the "Ship by Truck" movement. Industry and Commerce are being shown the progress made in trucks and truck equipment. They are realizing more than ever the adaptability of trucks to all transporting problems. Truck dealers and users are in New York by thousands and will carry back to their respective communities the message of efficiency and economy contained in this motto—"Ship by Truck."

DRAMA

By John Corbin

Married by the Burglar.

PLEASE GET MARRIED, a farce in three acts by James Cullen and Lewis Allen Browne. At the Little Theatre.

Soapy Higgins	Perce Benton
Parson Smith	Edward See
Mrs. Ashley	Ida Darling
John Harper Ashley	William Sampson
Muriel Ashley	Edith Taliaferro
Betty Bright	Elise Bartlett
Ferdinand Oliver Walton	Ernest Truex
Robert Walton	Martin Alsop
Constable	Elmer Brown
Nannette	Margaret Johnston
Hotel Clerk	Francis Pierlot
Frank Hastings	Thomas E. Jackson
Rev. Jenkins	J. D. Walsh

Theoretically it should be funny, no end, when young lovers, full of joy and hope, are married by the burglar. But actually the entire first act at the Little Theatre, of which this was the central incident, proved somewhat soggy. The only real laugh came when the crook, in a choker collar, having performed the ceremony, made his exit as he had come in, by the window.

The second act returned to the familiar scenes of a hotel bridal chamber with twin beds and the young pair (not couple) interrupted incessantly while preparing for by-lows by folk vainly trying to persuade them to "Please Get Married." Ably and on the whole discreetly handled by Ernest Truex (who is a genuine comedian) and Edith Taliaferro, (a sweetly pretty and modest bride,) the familiar material once more reaped its harvest of laughter. The young folk were so firmly convinced that the series of interruptions was only the old honeymoon joke in a new form. And then the hotel burned down, which was also funny.

The last act disclosed another new idea, which shall not here be divulged, and the play fell again into the doldrums. Really it would seem that farce had best adhere to sure-fire stuff, especially in the matter of conflagrations.

Aside from the two leading parts the cast was not especially distinguished, though William Sampson and Ida Darling were intermittently amusing as the cynical father and wrangling mother of the bride.

$14,000 FOR STONY WOLD.

Mme. Galli-Curci Sings to Greatest Audience at Hippodrome.

Mme. Galli-Curci gave her first concert of this season at the Hippodrome last evening, singing to one of the most brilliant social audiences seen in New York, and in part, for a favorite charity, that of the Stony Wold Sanatorium, at Liberty, N. Y., for which some $14,000 was earned. The entire lower floor was sold at $10 a chair, and the horseshoe of boxes a city block long, for $100 and $200 apiece, by the influential patrons of Stony Wold. In addition, the prima donna's admirers from the public at large filled the two great balconies, so that the total receipts were said to be about $18,000. The police kept the streets clear, while lines of automobiles three abreast moved in quick order to discharge their occupants on three sides of the house.

The famous singer was in better voice than at her recent return in opera, and she received a royal greeting when she came out on the big stage in a quaint "old portrait" gown, an "arrangement in yellow," as Whistler would say, from her gold slippers to the yellow bow in her dark hair. She gave for encores after her several numbers the familiar "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," Sinding's "Sylvelin," Buzzi-Peccia's "The Bird," and famous "Robin Adair."

It was a Galli-Curci concert, with no other singer on the program. There were the soprano's air from "The Barber of Seville," which she will also sing in opera this week at the Lexington, and the famous "Shadow Song," or waltz with flute, from "Dinorah," in which she had made her memorable début last year. Between the two Mme. Galli-Curci had a group of songs in English—Ronald's "Down in the Forest," Leoni's "The Brownies," and "When Chloris Sleeps," by Homer Samuels, her piano accompanist. The Chicago Opera Company orchestra played other works of Rossini, Saint-Saëns, and Goldmark, led by Polacco and Joseph Rafaelli, as well as violin solos for Gregor Skolnik, and "The Dance of the Hours," conducted as of old by Campanini.

The last of the Campanini concerts, it was announced, will be another Galli-Curci night at the Hippodrome on Feb. 23. The prima donna is also to appear in a Biltmore musicale, postponed from Feb. 21 to 28, and in her own first recital on March 9.

Among the boxholders at last night's concert were Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. Charles Steele, Mrs. J. Herbert Johnston, Miss Annie Burr Jennings, Mrs. Herman Biggs, Mrs. Arthur Coppell, Mrs. Andrew Saks, Mrs. Pierre Mali, and others, while the patronesses included also Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. James L. Barclay, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. Robert S. Brewster, Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., Mrs. Paul D. Cravath, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. Edward S. Harkness, Mrs. Walter B. James, Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn.

CONCERTS OF A DAY.

Roosevelt Memorial Observed by Symphony and Opera Folk.

Midway in an all-Verdi program that packed the Metropolitan last evening the audience was asked to join in singing an air appropriate to Roosevelt Day. On behalf of the management, W. J. Guard proposed what he said had been "a favorite hymn" of Colonel Roosevelt and one that the late President had taught many other Americans to honor—"The Star-Spangled Banner." It was sung with a will by all there.

Frieda Hempel, who is closing her season in "Crispino" at the opera tonight, was among the concert stars, with Rose Ponselle, Kingston, Montesanto, and Mardones. Sophie Braslau could not appear, and Lila Robeson took her place in some of Verdi's most stirring ensembles. Papi and Setti conducted.

Walter Damrosch produced G. W. Chadwick's "The Angel of Death," a brief but epic piece of music inspired by D. C. French's sculpture, in the program of the Symphony Society yesterday at Aeolian Hall. There were printed tributes to Colonel Roosevelt's varied outlook on life and nature, as suggested by the further music of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Bouquet's "Flute of Pan," and Francke's "Chorale and Fugue."

Jascha Heifetz played to a record audience at his postponed recital in Carnegie Hall yesterday, giving in a violin concerto of Ernst an exhibition of his powers as violinist such as even his admirers have rarely heard. It was a violinist's program throughout, and Heifetz added many encores.

Penelope Davies gave a matinée song recital at the Princess Theatre, assisted in English songs by Bryceson Treharne, and in some capital negro folksongs by H. T. Burleigh. At the Selwyn last evening there was a concert of American negro music by the Clef Club.

CONFESSES HE SAW MURDER OF CHINESE

Ziang Wan Refuses to Tell Washington Police Who Committed the Crime.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—At a late hour tonight Ziang Wan, the New York University student, who, with his brother, T. Li Van, was put under arrest today, confessed to the police authorities that he had been present at the murder of Dr. Theodore T. Wong, C. H. Hsie, and Ben Sen Wu, officials of the Chinese Educational Mission to the United States. While freely admitting that he was in a mission house when the men were murdered, the prisoner would not say who committed the crimes, nor admit that he participated in the killings. According to the police, Wan described in detail the murders.

Wan and Van had been under guard at a hotel since they were brought here from New York City soon after the crime was discovered, but were placed in jail this morning after they had been questioned all night at the mission house. According to the police, Wan confessed that he wrote Dr. Wong's name on the stub of a check for $5,000, which officials of a bank refused to honor when it was presented by a young Chinese on Jan. 30.

Police officials said they accepted this admission by Wan as a virtual confession of participation in the murder, because on last Friday he had told Major Pullman, Superintendent of Police, that "when you have found the man who wrote Dr. Wong's name on the check stub you will have found the murderer."

Wan also was said to have admitted that it was his brother who presented the check at the bank and that he remained outside in a taxicab. Previously Wan, the police said, had insisted that he left Washington on the night of Jan. 29 and had been accompanied to the station by Wu. The police believe the three men were shot to death that night.

Metropolitan Announces Operas.

The Metropolitan posted yesterday its opera for the season's fifteenth week, starting a week from tomorrow night with "La Boheme," sung by Alda, Romaine, Crimi, and Scotti. There will follow a Wednesday double bill, "Pagliacci" and "Petrushka," when Reinald Warrenrath makes his début with Easton and Caruso; Thursday, "Cavalleria" and "Coq d'Or," the casts headed by Muzio and Lazaro, Barrientos and Didur; Friday an extra matinee of "Carmen," with Farrar, and in the evening, "Le Prophete," with Caruso, and Saturday matinee, Feb. 22, Barrientos, Hackett, and De Luca in "The Barber of Seville."

Belasco Benefit for Wounded.

David Belasco will stage a benefit performance at the Belasco Theatre on Sunday night, Feb. 23, the proceeds of which will go to the Stage Women's War Relief, to be applied to Debarkation Hospital Theatre No. 5. On the program will be a one-act play, "When Baptiste Came Back," by Ethellyn Brewer De Foe, in which Frances Starr, Julia Arthur, Pedro de Cordoba and O. P. Heggie will appear. Mr. Belasco himself will be seen in a two-reel motion picture, "A Star Over-Night." George M. Cohan, William Collier, Bessie McCoy Davis and others have volunteered, and there will be a comedy skit enlisting nearly all the well-known actresses now appearing in the city.

"The Village" to Aid Charities.

The Amateur Comedy Club, which gave three performances at the Garden Theatre last week, will present F. W. Tuttle's "The Village" nightly during the coming week, the receipts of each night being for a different charity. The funds thus aided will be the Wendell Boys' Club, on Monday; the Brearley League, on Tuesday; Stony Wold Sanatorium, Auxiliary 19, on Wednesday; Free Milk for France, on Thursday; Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, on Friday, and the Darrich Home for Crippled Children, on Saturday.

THE SCREEN

"'Ception Shoals," H. Austin Adams's drama of the conflict between selfish bigotry and a young girl's struggle to live and love, in which Mme. Nazimova appeared on the stage some seasons ago, has been made into a screen vehicle for the same actress by Albert Cappelani, as director, and June Mathis, as scenario writer, and is on this week's bill at the Rivoli. The title of the photoplay is "Out of the Fog," and, as should be expected, the transition of the work from stage to screen has brought about other changes than that of the title, but the result is that "Out of the Fog," taken as a whole, without too severe a comparison with the ideal photoplay—ever in mind, but not yet produced—is a work of exceptional merit, one sure to please those who await the Nazimova films with expectations.

Nazimova appears in the double rôle, that of Faith, who throws herself from the top of the lonely lighthouse on 'Ception Shoals after her uncompromising brother has dragged her to the place, so that her life might atone for her tragic love; and that of Eve, the daughter, who was the baby left behind by Faith after her desperate escape. Mme. Nazimova makes both of these characters real, each in its environment. By the strength and subtlety of her acting she makes their meaning clear, putting their feelings into the hearts of the spectators. But she does not do this alone. She has invaluable assistance from Henry Harmon, whose impersonation of the bigoted brother is a notable piece of screen acting, and from the others in the cast, especially Tom Blake and Charles Bryant. Mr. Cappelani is also to be credited with careful and comprehensive directing.

"The Restless Three," one of Robert C. Bruce's alluring scenics, is also on the Rivoli program. Yesterday there was a vocal quartet from Verdi's "Requiem," in an impressive Wenger setting, in memory of Theodore Roosevelt.

Geraldine Farrar is at the Strand this week in "Shadows," a Willard Mack melodrama. Technically and intrinsically, it is about the best screen medium that Miss Farrar has had so far. This is not to say that "Shadows" approaches perfection. It is of the stage stagey; it demands prescience on the part of its principal character, and, at the climax, the happy solution is left to the certainty of theatrical chance; but the photoplay does contain a plot with a centre of dramatic interest and action, and it gives Miss Farrar a fair opportunity for her undoubtedly superior abilities as an emotional actress.

The story of the play is that of a woman with a past, who fights for the home and life and love which that past would rob her of, and wins the fight. As a fighter Miss Farrar is at her best, and when her play offers her something to fight for that can be made to seem real, if only for the moment, she is effective for all of her spectators. All those at the Strand yesterday afternoon were with her in every stage of her fight. She compelled them. She also charmed them in many milder scenes.

Milton Sills, Tom Santschi, and Fred Truesdell were the chief support and made their characters active parts of the photoplay. Reginald Barker, the director, is to be credited with good work, on the whole, and thoughtful attention to important details, though he permitted needless "subtitles."

Mabel Day and Richard Bold appeared in a duet from Act II. of "Pirates of Penzance," the first of a series of scenes from operas to be presented at the Strand, and the Topical Review brought many entertaining views to the screen.

"Maggie Pepper," with Ethel Clayton, Tully Marshall and Elliott Dexter in the leading rôles, is at the Rialto. It is a well-acted photoplay of the kind called "heart-stuff" in the trade.

"Ascent of the Matterhorn," a Burlingham scenic, is wel lworth a trip to the theatre. For this picture eight men made a trip to the top of the famous mountain.

Gladys Rice sings "Ave Maria," with a violin obbligato by Sascha Fidelman, in memory of Colonel Roosevelt.

"The Wicked Darling," with Priscilla Dean, is the photoplay at the Broadway this week.

Burton Holmes's subject at Carnegie Hall last night was "With the Yanks in Italy." He will repeat the Travelogue this afternoon.

Red blood for wintry blasts

Who best endures the cold and sleet and slush of winter—the rich-blooded or the thin-blooded? Rich blood makes warm, vigorous bodies that bear up under exposure and resist winter sickness. Let Pepto-Mangan help you to have richer blood and a warmer body.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan

"The Red Blood Builder"

The foundations of good, rich blood are sturdy, active red cells. Pepto-Mangan increases their number and capacity to carry oxygen—the breath of life—to every cell and tissue, thus distributing rugged health and keen vigor in all parts of the body. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is a splendid general tonic and appetizer, easy to digest, exceedingly pleasant to taste. Universally prescribed by the medical profession.

Study this picture so you will know how Pepto-Manganlooks.

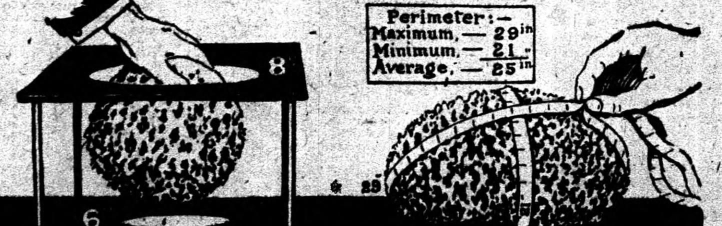
A Model Specification for Automobile-Finishing Sponges

PURCHASING agents for automobile plants, railways, etc., are invited to clip and use the following sponge specification, which agrees with the practice of leading automobile factories, the U. S. Navy and many of America's foremost railways:

(1) All sponges will be purchased and paid for by the piece.
(2) Variety______, Grade______, Forms only (Cuts only)—all others rejected.
(3) Size______inches. The sponges making up each shipment received will be soaked in water and wrung out:



When so treated, "forms" must pass without forcing through a hole ___ inches in diameter, but must not pass without forcing through a hole two inches smaller in diameter.

When so treated, "cuts" should show a perimeter of not less than ___ inches nor more than ___ inches.

Colossus Sponges in the bale are guaranteed pure and unadulterated, even in grade and as specified throughout. We urge upon buyers the wisdom of purchasing by count instead of by weight—anyone can make a sponge weigh more, but who can make it bigger?

Standard, by-the-piece specifications covering baled sponges for any industrial or trade purpose will gladly be supplied on request. For information or quotations, write or telephone our nearest office.

AN APPOINTMENT THAT SHOULD NOT HAVE BEEN MADE.

As a clinical diagnostician Mr. William Allen White won his earliest and greatest fame some twenty-two years ago by his celebrated inquiry, "What Is the Matter with Kansas?" His diagnosis was thorough and with an unerring finger he pointed out the ills from which Kansas was suffering. The State was afflicted with Populism, a milder form of Bolshevism. The Bolshevists murder, the Populists were simply silly. They ranted, while Lenine's disciples rob and slay. Mr. White, therefore, has some of the qualifications of an expert in respect to the malady from which Russia is now suffering. He has some evident fitness to serve as one of the two representatives of the United States upon the committee that is to meet Mr. Lenine's representatives in conference on Princes' Islands.

The appointment of Mr. George D. Herron as the other representative of the United States is a very different matter. As a teacher of the extreme doctrines of socialism and of the loose views of the marriage relation which so many Socialists hold, Mr. Herron has been in close sympathy with the principles which have guided Lenine and Trotzky in their war upon capitalism and upon society. Mr. Herron is to be accounted rather an exponent of Bolshevist opinion than of the American opinion upon questions which must come up for discussion in the conference. That is enough to condemn his appointment as one not fit to be made.

But he should not have been named as a member of the committee because he is not a person who at any time or upon any occasion could properly represent the people of the United States of America. This is one of a considerable number of appointments to Administration service in Washington and elsewhere in respect to which it is fitting that a serious protest should be made. The American people have no liking for the theories of socialism. The selection of persons like Mr. Herron, and of others who have been chosen for conspicuous posts in the war service of the Administration, is approved in this country chiefly by those who are active in the socialistic cause or in sympathy with it. These appointments are widely condemned, there is a feeling that they tend to give encouragement to the agitators and plotters who in many parts of the country are stirring up labor troubles or advocating the overthrow of our governmental institutions. Inasmuch as 30,000,000 Americans, more than a quarter of the population of the United States, are holders of bonds issued by the Government, it is impossible to imagine that official recognition and favor extended to representatives of a cult that would overthrow the Government and destroy the existing order of society can be viewed with general approval.

To millions of friends and supporters of the President appointments of this class have been a cause of regret and uneasiness. They cannot be defended, they are not understood. In naming Mr. George D. Herron to confer with the Bolsheviki, and any other appointments objected to for like reasons, we fear the President has been guided by bad advisers. If it be too late to recall this and similar decisions, he should at least change his advisers.

"THE RECORD MADE AGAINST."

Mayor Hylan is not only a copious letter writer himself, but the inspirer of epistles from other men. When Inspector Costigan was demoted and exiled to Beach Street, Commissioner Enright, who knows the value of discretion and the folly of explaining acts that are best forgotten, had no reasons to give. He said cynically that there was one more Inspector than the budget allowed, and "that is one of the reasons why I have reduced Costigan." Asked for specific reasons, he said "the reasons I have are ample and sufficient for me." In other words, sic volo, sic jubeo. That is my will. Mr. Enright has been brought up in a shrewd school. Don't try to give reasons for a thing indefensible. Make dark intimations. What a tale you could unfold, an you would. Shut up, and let the good, easy public forget.

The good, easy public wasn't docile or forgetful in the Costigan matter. The humiliation of a strikingly efficient and honest police official made it uneasy. Is Tammany bound to bring back its golden ideal of "an open town"? Is the police force, so admirably organized under Commissioner Woods, so clean, athletic, self-respecting, law-respecting, to be demoralized by the conviction, forced upon it, that honesty is the way to demotion, that a blind or tolerant eye to vice and crime is a policeman's best credential to the good graces of the Man Higher Up?

The public grumbled so much that Mayor Hylan and the other official friends of righteousness according to the old Tammany gospel must have got gooseflesh. At any rate, Commissioner Enright, who knows the wisdom of reticence, has been forced to write a letter to the complete letter writer in the City Hall. The observations about the "topheaviness" of the so effective police force under Mr. Woods, about the reckless disregard of the truth on the part of newspapers venturing to tell it, belong to the fantastic mythology of Hylania. Where Commissioner Enright, induced, no doubt against his will, to venture into the fatal commerce of letters, makes a mistake and what the censorious may deem an unconscious confession is in his saying of former Inspector Costigan's "record" that it "is by far "the worst made against any Inspector in the department." Taking the liberty of underscoring these two words, The Times needs to make no other comment on Mr. Enright's engaging epistle.

THE PARK COMMISSIONER.

With nothing but respect for Mr. Berolzheimer, the well-intentioned and not ill-performing Commissioner of Parks whom Mayor Hylan has just inserted into the lucrative and otiose post of City Chamberlain, one is tempted to quote Swinburne about Mr. Francis Dawson Gallatin, the new Park Commissioner:

> Ah, in that strange and shrineless > place,
> What doth a Goddess, what a Grace?

Mr. Gallatin is a man of large intelligence, of varied contact with the world, of extensive labor in eleemosynary and penal reform directions. New York looks to him with hope, dimmed a little by old experience, for the reintegration of intelligent landscape gardening and park conservation and improvement. He has done much for the unpaid defense of criminals. Well, he will find plenty of defenseless criminals in Central Park. The elm trees, for example. Poor, dilapidated, persecuted tramps and cumberers of ground that might be used for building purposes, the natural object of a park! The Park itself has long been regarded as a criminal and wastrel, a home of beauty and rural charm that ought to be made into building lots, outdoor gymnasiums, training grounds covered with garages for the people, and what not.

New York looks to Commissioner Gallatin for sympathetic and brave defense of its endangered breathing spot and pleasure house.

NURSERY FINANCE FOR THE SENATE.

The Senators who are demanding that England shall receive the American goods which she is denying herself, although urgently needing and ardently desiring them, are better salesmen than collectors. It is necessary to remind them that England is temporarily embarrassed, for reasons most creditable to her, and that she dislikes to run into debt with those who are grudging with their accommodations. In taking that position England is as honorable as the Senators are unreasonable. For the year 1918 England's adverse balance of trade was £790,000,000, say nearly four billions of dollars. England's dilemma, perhaps consternation, at being presented with that bill from the world, and mostly from ourselves, may be measured by our joy at a favorable balance of trade smaller by a billion, measuring a profit made honestly, but out of the cruel needs of our foreign friends, who have not counted their lives nor their treasure in defense of a moral issue. It is to our credit that we denied ourselves food that they might eat at their cost, our profit. It is to their credit that now they deny themselves food and goods in order that they may pay their bills. Under these conditions the Senate proposes economic war, and uses language which sensitive men of business read with pain. We shall hear of this again, and with regret.

England's difficulty in retrenching appears from the fact that its December debits were larger than the rate for 1918 by half a billion. Figures cabled on Saturday showed an increase of imports in January by $175,000,000, but an increase of exports by only $25,000,000. England will be more than embarrassed if she does not stop running up debits increasing by $150,000,000 monthly. Her debits and our credits must decline together, unless we are sufficiently humane, and good enough bankers and men of business, to help our best customer instead of threatening her. We can enlarge our advances to her for the purchase of food. We can help her with raw materials to enable her to increase her exports with which she can pay for her imports. We can do these things because those are doing them who are less able than we. We ought to do them because it is humiliating to compare the practice of other peoples with the utterances of our unrepresentative spokesmen who are insulting those with whom the President is trying to do business.

For example, on Saturday Australia sold India 90,000 tons of wheat at $1.31 per bushel free on board at port of lading, and removed the prohibition of export of gold. England would finance herself if we would allow her to buy gold with either goods or credit. The gentlemen who are mourning over the price of wheat and the possible loss of a billion dollars will please remark the price at Melbourne, and consider that the Melbourne price is not the London price. When men are near starvation they do not look at the price so closely as those who count their profits above their charity, and yet are so shortsighted as not to help their buyers.

Even Japan shows us the way. We have her subscription for $50,000,000 to our Treasury certificates, thus helping the exchange situation which is obstructing the movement of goods. The granting of $50,000,000 acceptance credit to Belgium by our bankers is another help to the situation which the Senate would do well to remark. The Federal Reserve would explain its meaning. Our boycotters might remark that the allied economic council at Paris is favoring the granting of neutral credits to enable Germany to buy fats which England will supply, herself repurchasing. The fats ultimately will come from here, and thus the deadlock in exchange of goods between nations for reasons of finance would be to that extent unlocked. Our goods are nearest the needy. Our abundance is greatest. Our bank reserves are the hugest. Yet we are losing our market to the Antipodes, and we shall find the price broken when we begin to sell.

Yet there is included in the pending bill of the House Agricultural Committee a proposal to add to the $2.26 per bushel wheat guarantee a bonus for farm storage to prevent overstocking the elevators and "glutting" the market. There is no glut in the world food market. There is no surplus of world wheat. There is only congestion of food movement for reasons of difficulty of transport and finance.

EMBARKATION CAMPS IN FRANCE.

Investigation of conditions at the embarkation camps at Pontanezen and St. Aignan in France is desirable to bring out the truth, and to put in the record such difficulties as Major Gen. Harbord and the medical officers have had to contend with in caring for the soldiers forwarded to them for transportation to the States. The camps have been overcrowded; also the sites are unsuitable for the purpose, and the climatic conditions are not favorable to health. The following statement was made on Jan. 1 by General Harbord, who distinguished himself at Château-Thierry, later was detailed for transportation duty, and is now in command at Brest:

> Climatic conditions at Brest, due to daily rains, are the worst of any port at our disposal in France, but the lack of deep water at other ports forces certain ships to come to Brest, the one port they can enter. The policy of beginning evacuation of our troops immediately after the armistice, and the order to fill all available shipping, forced the evacuation of troops through Brest before any construction work suitable to an embarkation camp could be completed.

First, the armistice came unexpectedly and the War Department was unprepared to enter upon the task of sending troops home; then the clamor in the United States, in and out of Congress, for the early return of our soldiers resulted in the taking of measures to carry out the wishes of the people without delay. No doubt it would have been better if the War Department had made haste slowly about the business of evacuation. An impression prevails that little or nothing has been done to improve conditions at the Brest camp. Upon that point Mr. Paul D. Cravath of New York, adviser to the Allied Board on Finance and Purchases, and who knows from observation what has been done at Brest by Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, has made this statement:

> He has built many acres of comfortable barracks; he has provided heat for the tents, floors for most of them; he has built a number of admirably arranged kitchens, each equipped for feeding 5,000 men a day. The hospital facilities have been enlarged and perfected. An independent water site had already been provided before his arrival, and he is enlarging it. A complete sewage system is being installed, but, in the meantime the temporary sanitary arrangements have proved entirely ineffective.

In Mr. Cravath's opinion no better choice for reconstructing and improving the camp could have been made, for General Butler, a marine officer, had done remarkable things in building camps for troops in China and Haiti. There is no more practical man, no abler administrator, than General Harbord in the army. It is, therefore, a reasonable conclusion that these two men went about the work to be done at Brest with characteristic energy, and that they have been doing all that was humanly possible to make the Brest embarkation camp habitable and sanitary. At the same time, when the worst of the story is told by home-returning soldiers, it sounds like an indictment of General Harbord and General Butler for neglect of the troops. But soldiers who have had to put up with the discomforts of an embarkation camp in the making may not be fair witnesses. By all means there should be an inquiry into conditions as they were, and as they are, at Pontanesen and at St. Aignan. What have the medical men done for the sick? Let that come out, too. Nothing is to be gained by concealing the truth. It may turn out to be far from discreditable to the War Department. Its accusers are not all concerned to be rational and tolerant; some of them are bent on making a sensation out of Brest and St. Nazaire for political purposes.

A GREAT RENUNCIATION.

Of all self-denying ordinances and solemn leagues and covenants against evil, that of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs against women's evening gowns designed by designing men and that "have led fashion to the extreme limit of indecency," and are "having a most demoralizing effect upon the youth of the country," is the most stringent, ascetic, and nobly virtuous. The members of the Federation, it seems, are to "set their "hearts like flint and refuse to wear "the gowns, no matter how becoming "they are"! This is the top notch of feminine altruism, and few there be that find it.

Since horrid man is notoriously blind to the aestheticisms and refinements of female dress; since he can but ignorantly worship some vague added charm in that costume which the severer sisters reprobate; since he is too dense to understand the fantasies of women's dress, contrived, the wise assure us, only to impress or excite the envy of the once Ruling Sex, the fears of the Federation about the male "youth of the country" are unfounded.

To the stupid masculine mind, woman's dress is always charming, becoming, decent. Yet the most obfuscated survivor of the Dethroned Sex can't hide his wonder and admiration when he hears of high female souls whose bodies are to scorn "no matter how becoming" female fashions. How can what is "indecent" be "becoming"? The Federationists need a dictionary.

It is the way of this world of sin to say that Puritans in petticoats never hate a mode in which they have the faintest hope of looking becomingly arrayed.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

"Reactionaries" as Seen by Bolsheviki.

In The Times yesterday there was an article the author of which, writing from personal knowledge acquired in Russia before, during, and after the revolution, contrasted the facts of Bolshevism with the deliberate unveracities about it which certain propagandists of the "parlor Socialist" type are industriously spreading throughout the country. One point made in the article is deserving of particular attention.

Invariably the Bolsheviki and their friends and defenders—including the people who begin with, "I am not a Bolshevik, but——"—base their pleas and arguments on the utterly false premise that the alternative to Bolshevism in Russia is the restoration of autocratic rule. They describe all antagonists to the Bolsheviki as "reactionaries," and charge them all, together with the "capitalistic Governments" of the Entente countries, with a fierce desire to set a new Czar on the old Czar's throne. They would have their hearers forget—and seemingly make a good many of the more ignorant and credulous do it—that in every Entente country there was sincere and unanimous joy over the success of the first revolution—a revolution, by the way, with which the Bolsheviki had absolutely nothing to do. The Czar had not a single mourner, outside of lands whose like monarchs were made anxious by the disclosure of how easy it was to overthrow a despot.

Not only is the restoration of Czarism in Russia unthinkable as a possibility, but nobody anywhere dreams of restoring it when or if the Bolsheviki are overcome. The universal desire of the so-called "reactionaries" is to replace Bolshevism with democracy—the cruelest of tyrannies with rule by the whole people.

Deception Merely Mitigated.

When it was discovered a few months ago that one of the telegraph companies was transmitting by train and messenger "night letters" for the sending of which it charged and received a rate much higher than the postage paid on mail matter traveling by the same trains, much justifiable indignation was expressed. The offending corporation made a half-hearted defense of the practice—a defense which nobody accepted as adequate—and it was at once abandoned.

Now a not dissimilar scheme has been revived, not by the same or another corporation, but by the present ruler of all means of public communication. The details, as told in The Times yesterday, are interesting.

The Government, or Mr. Burleson's division of it, telegraphs "night letters" to the city of destination, but for delivery in that city they take their chances with common, everyday mail. Technically, no deception is involved, for the back of the blanks on which "night letters" must be written has printed on it, among other more or less interesting information, the announcement that the department will use its own discretion in deciding whether to deliver these letters by messenger or intrust them to the mails.

Of course, next to nobody ever reads that sort of literature, so the secret of mail transmission of "night letters" intrusted to the Government telegraph offices was kept until the receiver of one of the letters in New York observed that its arrival was strangely belated, and started an investigation.

The Government's defense of its method is a little better than was that of the company that invented it, but for all that the defense is a poor one, in that it involves a conscious exploitation of a very common form of negligence on the part of the paying public.

CHINA'S APPEAL

Considered an Attempt to Get Justice from Japan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just read with considerable amusement but greater indignation the letter of Mr. Yukichi Iwanaga in today's Times regarding the Chinese appeal to the Peace Conference for a revision of the Chino-Japanese Treaty of 1915. I was amused because Mr. Iwanaga so ingenuously betrays Japan's real attitude and feelings, and I was indignant that he should hide them under a cloak of righteousness and thereby try to deceive the American public.

In his opening paragraph Mr. Iwanaga gives himself away. This is what he says: "It seems to some of us Japanese that China is now trying very hard to make the most of the Peace Conference in order to free herself from all foreign dominance or influence." Yes, it seems that way to many Americans, too—but for some reason we are not as properly shocked as is Mr. Iwanaga. To be sure, it is one of the chief aims of the Peace Conference to right the wrongs of militarism, to free helpless nations from the dominance of their powerful neighbors; but what a terrible thing that China should use the Conference for that purpose!

Mr. Iwanaga goes on to say that China is demanding a revision of the Chino-Japanese Treaty of 1915 because it was signed under duress and coercion. He says that Japan is willing to consider revision "if there be in it any terms which are a real menace to the independence of China, for Japan, too, wants to have her neighbor as an independent State."

These are fair words, and look well on paper, but when backed by the facts of the case they lose their import. It will be noticed that Mr. Iwanaga does not deny that the treaty was signed under coercion. It was so signed, and the only reason that it does not completely take away the independence of China is due to the intervention of powers who had guaranteed that independence. The treaty was the outcome of the infamous and unprovoked "Twenty-one Demands" made upon China by Japan in 1915. The attention of the world was focused at the time upon Europe, and it was only by a diplomatic stratagem, which well matched Japan's own cunning in secretly presenting the demands at this busy time, that the Chinese President, Yuan Shih-kai, was able to make the demands public. There was an immediate protest by some of the powers, and Japan in chagrin was obliged to withdraw those demands which actually would have taken away China's independence. The ones to which China was forced to acquiesce were humiliating enough.

From this time on Japan tried to obtain, by more insinuating means, the power which she had previously outwardly demanded. She professed to be the true friend of China, but her actions belied her. Only those who lived in China at this time can appreciate the cleverness with which she carried on this project.

And now we come to the crux of Mr. Iwanaga's letter, in which he resents China's appeal to the Peace Conference. The chief burden of his plaint seems to be that Japan may thereby be compelled by foreign powers "to do that which we might otherwise do from our own sense of justice." During the last three years, in spite of China's appeals, Japan has shown little inclination to exercise that sense of justice!

J. A. MITCHELL.

New Haven, Feb. 7, 1919.

Invoking "the Spirit of 1812."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On reading the account of the Senate's debate over Great Britain's proposed embargo, one feels moved to reassure Senator Lewis. He predicts gloomily that a feeling of hostility will be roused in this country by Great Britain's action, and warns her against reviving "the spirit of 1812." He really need not worry. So far the feeling of hostility appears to be limited to himself and Senator Reed.

As for "the spirit of 1812," the Senator seems to forget that several things have happened since 1812, and that the spirit of 1914 and the spirit of 1917 may have even greater weight with the country than the righteous indignation roused by the temporary slight docking of the country's income. Of course Senator Lewis and Senator Reed are expected to uphold the country's interests, but in this year of grace 1919 it is hardly necessary or appropriate for them to be so touchy about it.

When two countries have fought side by side with mutual love and faith in this war of all wars; when each has vowed her last drop of red blood to the same great end, and when both are still dizzy and gasping from the recently ended struggle, it jars on the nerves to hear a small-souled relic of another age utter warlike threats over a difference of opinion in regard to trade. Differences of opinion are natural, but, in the holy name of the thing which we have been fighting for, let us differ as friends do, and not start falling upon each other as soon as the danger is past, as though we had just finished a gutter brawl.

THE INESCAPABLE ONE.

(Adrasteia.)

She is the daughter of a god,
Who gave to her a measuring-rod,
A sharpened sword, and stinging scourge
Wherewith her flying team to urge.
A yoke and bridle, too, she hath,
For, when she will, she holds her wrath;
She can be slow—she can be swift—
But every matter she will sift!
She spares no least, no mightiest one,
Who to his fellow wrong hath done.
A hardened heart wakes all her zeal—
She finds the way to make it feel!
A Red Sea wave she will uproll
And heave it at the impious soul;
Corroding madness she will call,
Till heart and flesh shall crumble—all!
She skillfully contrives it so
Who digs a pit therein shall go;
And terribly she laughs—to bend
Homeward the curse that one may send!

How she stood near, with sparkling look,
When Phidias that marble took,
Left by the Mede at Marathon
When triumph he had counted on—
To see a Persian Victory smile
From that white spoil of Parian Isle;
But Phidias dreamed another shape—
"Goddess-whom-no-one-can-escape,"
He called to her, laying a kiss
Upon the lips of Nemesis!
With thirst of Beauty in his heart
He rent the marble veil apart,
And let out her, who (waited long)
Healed the Greek soul from Persian wrong!

The hour is barely passed when we
A like creative work could see:
A mighty dynasty unwrought,
Invading hosts to standstill brought—
The hosts of one whose brooding mind
A wide-winged Victory designed—
But, even while his towering pride
Almost the emergent shape descried,
A sculpturing Hand did intervene—
Outstepping Nemesis was seen!

"Goddess-whom-none-escapes"—Oh, still
On mortal crime she works her will—
She, the Avenger—see her now—
The Beautiful, the dark of brow!
Over the rough-heaved lands she drives,
Smites the high hand, but strikes off
gyves—
Searching where any wrong contrives
He who would flee her vainly strives!

URGE STATE WORK FOR EX-SOLDIERS

Republican Leaders Would Spend Millions on Road and Institution Construction.

OFFSET TO SMITH'S PLAN

Better to Provide Work Now and Investigate Readjustment Theories Later, They Hold.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 9.—Reconstruction, which to Governor Alfred E. Smith appears so replete with puzzling and perplexing elements as to call for a thorough investigation of after-war problems by a special commission, is in the eyes of the Republican leaders of the Legislature a very simple matter.

"Construction is the actual solution of reconstruction," reads the opening sentence of a pronunciamento sent out by the News Bureau of the Republican State Committee over the signatures of Henry J. Walters, President-pro-tem of the Senate, and Thaddeus C. Sweet, Speaker of the Assembly. The statement goes on to point out that, even though everything that has been said so far with regard to the State's finances would indicate an empty treasury, there are several millions available, which, according to the Republican leaders, ought to be spent forthwith for the purpose of giving the returning soldiers work on road construction and repair and on construction and repair at State institutions which have been deferred since the war because of the scarcity of labor and materials.

As the statement was put out by the Republican State Committee at a time when the Republican majority in both branches of the Legislature had declared war on a bill introduced on behalf of Governor Smith for the purpose of obtaining an appropriation for his newly appointed Reconstruction Commission, it was accepted at the Capitol as an indication that the Governor's friends in the lawmaking body have been too optimistic in their predictions that the appropriation would be forthcoming. Originally the bill called for an appropriation of $75,000, but the amount was reduced to $60,000 to meet objections from Republican quarters before the majority boldly took its stand in opposition to any legislative action whatsoever to promote the purpose Governor Smith may have had in view when he appointed his Commission on Reconstruction.

The Question of Politics.

The contention of Democratic observers at the Capitol has been that the opposition to the reconstruction appropriation was prompted by political considerations, and not by considerations of economy. The Republicans, they contend, were afraid that the Governor might derive some political advantage from the appointment of a commission which might readily be turned into an agency to alienate the affections of the farmers from the Republican Legislature to the Democratic Governor, as well as to make political capital for the Chief Executive among other classes of voters. Of course, the Democrats say, all these fears are entirely unfounded, as Governor Smith had in mind solely a study of after-war problems which would enable this State to act intelligently and become the pioneer in reconstruction work, now that we have peace, as it was the pioneer in the work of preparedness when war threatened.

"This is no time to theorize, if we are to grapple with the enormous industrial situation, which is not approaching, but which is here, right in front of us," they say in their statement. "The period for theory may come, but now, when the path is clear, there should be no delay, and we should demonstrate by practical application that we are capable of meeting an emergency just as vital as any that we have encountered."

The statement, which advocates the expenditure of $10,000,000 for work on State highways and an amount not specified for new construction and repairs at State institutions, follows in part:

Fields for State Work.

"An unlimited amount of work for men is in the immediate foreground, and we should begin construction. This is imperative as a move toward defenite reconstruction, and we might just as well be practical and face these facts:

"State, county, and town highways demand prompt attention, and ample hospital accommodations for the feeble-minded, criminal offenders and other State charges are morally mandatory. This responsibility should be mastered at once, and our construction campaign should be broad enough to embrace all classes, from the skilled mechanic to the day laborer. This is not only feasible, but practical, as highway construction means a market for one grade, while the erection of public buildings is a market for those of the building trades. The completion of terminals along the Barge Canal is another necessity and would enlarge the area for all types of employment.

"There is $5,500,000 available for maintenance of State roads and $2,500,000 for construction, releasable from the first $50,000,000 bond issue, besides $2,000,000 in addition from the second issue. As to the construction and development of State institutions, there is a call for hospitals at Central Islip, Middletown, Utica, and Kings Park, not forgetting the all-important matter of proper structures for the care of the feeble-minded, and armories at Troy and Malone. This, however, is only a summary and not a detailed account of the State work for which plans and specifications are ready or for which contracts have been awarded.

"Idleness in all its vicious symptoms never makes itself more manifest than when men are out of work, and employment for those who should not be without it is our duty as legislators. Red tape and humdrum official procedure should be discountenanced, and this great State should be the leader in a plan of reconstruction that will speak for itself.

"So it is obvious, if we move speedily, giving men work and keeping factories open, it will mean animate, rather than inanimate, reconstruction, for, with men and women earning good wages, the reconstruction program, as applied to the future, will take care of itself."

The proposal for such a large expenditure of money on road construction at the present time is not likely to find approval with the Democratic minority in the Legislature nor, it is thought, could Governor Smith, after the strong plea for rigid economy made in his annual message, approve the large appropriations that would be required.

Women Dine at Lotos Club.

For the first time in the history of the organization the Lotos Club last night admitted women to its dining rooms. The action was taken in response to suggestions from many members that they would like the privilege of bringing their wives and families to dine on Sunday evenings. Women accompanied by a member were welcomed between 6:30 and 10 o'clock, and about 100 came. The privilege is to be extended weekly hereafter. Hitherto women have been allowed in the clubhouse only on special occasions.

VICTORY FOR NAVAL BILL.

Padgett Predicts House Will Adopt Wilson's Program Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—In response to President Wilson's request, the House tomorrow, according to Chairman Padgett of the Naval Affairs Committee, will adopt the three-year naval program and complete consideration of the Naval bill, carrying in appropriations more than $746,000,000. The program calls for ten battleships and ten scout cruisers and apportions money for the building of smaller craft, the type of which will be decided by the next Congress after recommendations by the Navy Department.

In the three-year period the building program will cost $600,000,000, provided the Peace Conference does not decide upon a limitation of armament.

There was such strong opposition to enlarging the navy at this time that even the request of President Wilson could not be granted except by writing into the bill a proviso that no contracts should be entered into prior to February, 1920. It is stipulated that if a proper tribunal shall decide against further naval expansion by the nations the building program can be abandoned.

The first three-year program, authorized in August, 1916, has not been completed and some of the larger vessels then authorized have not been laid down.

Chairman Padgett in his speech on Friday gave the statistics, which were a surprise to most members of Congress. The program provided for 10 battleships, 6 battle cruisers, 10 scout cruisers, 9 fleet submarines, 50 destroyers, 58 coast submarines, 3 fuel ships, 1 repair ship, 1 transport, 1 hospital ship, 2 destroyer tenders, 1 fleet submarine tender, 2 ammunition ships, and 2 gunboats, a total of 156 ships.

At the present time six battleships, six battle cruisers, two scout cruisers and nine fleet submarines, while designed, have not been laid down.

Not one of the battleships authorized in 1916 has been completed, according to the figures given by Chairman Padgett. Four of the ten authorized are building, and the percentage of completion is as follows:

Colorado, 7 per cent.; Maryland, 39 per cent.; Washington, 5 per cent.; West Virginia, 19 per cent.

The six battleships of this program, which have been designed and named, but on which no work has been done, are:

South Dakota, North Carolina, Montana, Indiana, Massachusetts and Iowa.

The belief exists among members of the Naval Affairs Committee that the new program will never be carried out. They say the President desires to have the United States on record in a building program so that the Peace Conference can see what is proposed in the way of a naval establishment if the Peace Conference does not decide on disarmament or a limitation on armament.

BRING HOME NAVY'S DEAD.

Bodies of Marines Also Included in the Department's Plans.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Plans for bringing home the bodies of all navy officers, sailors and marines now buried on foreign soil are being worked out by the Navy Department and the actual work will be undertaken within the next few months. The wishes of relatives, however, will govern not only as to the return of the bodies but also as to their final disposition. Those brought home either will be sent forward for private interment or buried in the Arlington or some other national cemetery as the relatives may decide.

The Department's announcement today expressed a preference for bringing home all bodies. It was pointed out that as a result of the careful preparation made at the outbreak of the war it had been possible to return the bodies of hundreds of those who died overseas. In the case of marines and naval detachments serving with the army, however, this was not possible and instead a careful system of permanent marking of graves was maintained. If the nearest of kin of any of the men who gaves their lives for their country so desire the dead will be left to rest in France, possibly in American cemetery sites where perpetual care and recognition will be assured.

Where bodies are brought home for burial in national cemeteries full military honors will be accorded and where private interment is desired the Navy will prepay all expense for delivery of the body to relatives.

Relatives of the dead of the Navy and Naval Reserves were requested to write the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery as to their wishes and those of the dead of the Marine Corps were invited to communicate with the Commandant of the corps.

INVESTIGATE WAR CHARITIES

National Bureau to Send Man Overseas with Government Approval.

In announcing a list of approved war activities yesterday the National Investigation Bureau, of [illegible] Madison Avenue, recommended centralized direction and control of all organizations engaged in relief work abroad. The announcement said:

"The bureau has engaged W. Frank Persons to make a study of the relief situation abroad. He recently resigned as Director General of Civilian Relief of the American Red Cross, and he is peculiarly qualified by training, experience and ability to make an impartial investigation and estimate of the various American activities in European countries which are soliciting support from the American people.

"Mr. Persons's inquiry will not include the Red Cross and the seven organizations which participated in the United War Work Campaign. He will endeavor to obtain reliable information as to the need, value and efficiency of those organizations concerned in his investigation, and also to make a general survey of the European relief situation, with a view to obtaining information concerning the demands which may reasonably be made upon the American people for foreign suffering during the next six or eight months."

The national relief organizations approved by the bureau are:

Permanent Blind Relief War Fund.
American Committee for Devastated France.
Committee for Relief in the Near East.
Free Milk and Relief for Italy.
Free Milk for France.
American Fund for French Wounded.
American French Service Committee.
American Jugo-Slav Relief Committee.
American Ouvroir Fund.
American Women's Hospitals.
British War Relief Association.
Children's Tin Box Fund.
Duryea War Relief.
Edith Wharton War Charities.
Fatherless Children of France.
Food for France Fund.
Franco-American Committee for the Protection of Children of the Frontier.
French Heroes' Lafayette Memorial Fund.
French Tuberculous Soldiers' Relief.
Italian War Relief of America.
Joint Distributing Committee.
National Allied Relief Committee.
National Special Aid.
Overseas Club and Patriotic League.
Polish Children's Relief Fund.
Polish National Department.
Polish Victims' Relief Fund.
Refugees in Russia.
Scottish Women's Hospitals.
Secours Franco-Americain.
Serbian Aid Fund.
Serbian National Defense League.
Shamrock Fund.
Smith College War Service Board.

It was said that the War Department approved the investigation of war relief work in Europe and had co-operated in planning the program.

Daughters of Israel Open Nursery.

The opening of the Nursery of the Daughters of Israel at 220 Fifth Street took place yesterday afternoon. Speeches were delivered there as well as at Beethoven Hall, 210 Fifth Street, where the people convened before marching to the new building. The nursery is a modern structure of four stories, costing $50,000 and accommodating 250 children. Mrs. Frances Bauman, President of the nursery, outlined its purpose, which is to shelter, clothe, and provide food for children whose mothers find it impossible to take care of them during the day. Prayer was said by Rabbi Jacob [illegible] Minkin.

URGE DRAFT BOARDS DEMOBILIZE TROOPS

Merchants' Association Asks Congress to Aid Unemployed Soldiers.

REPORTS SITUATION ACUTE

Suggests Extra Pay Until Men Find Jobs, and Discharge in Home Town.

The Merchants' Association announced yesterday that it had sent a resolution to Congress and to the Secretary of War urging that the troops be demobilized by selective draft boards near their homes so that large numbers of soldiers would not be left without work in the large cities near the military camps. It was pointed out that the numbers of unemployed in this city were growing larger, and one of the measures suggested as an aid to the men until they could find jobs was that the Government should pay discharged soldiers and sailors in monthly installments extra compensation for from three to six months.

"It was the belief of the committee that the acuteness of non-employment would be mitigated to a very considerable extent if the men were assured of an income sufficient to support them while they were looking for work," said the Merchants' Association announcement. "It was also the opinion of the committee that men unable to find work and without money were much more susceptible to radicalism and unrest than they would be if they were certain of a small income."

A letter also was written to Secretary Baker by William Fellowes Morgan, President of the association, pointing out that the men ought to be discharged where they were enlisted, "thus restoring the man-power represented in the arms of the service to the various portions of the country in the ratio in which it had been withdrawn from the country for war purposes." Mr. Morgan's letter continued:

"We find that with the signing of the armistice there was immediately a resultant cancellation or suspension of Government contracts and inevitable uncertainty as to possibilities of profitable production on peace-time bases, which necessarily greatly and immediately reduced the possibility of employment. We find further that, as a result of the operation of the present method of discharging men from the service whereby those from overseas are brought to the ports of debarkation, taken to camps for quarantine period, and then discharged at those camps irrespective of the point from which the men originally came, a very considerable proportion of those men from other parts of the country remain in the city of debarkation or in the large centres adjacent to those camps, in addition to the number of men discharged who were originally taken from that same community.

"This method of discharge results in arbitrarily creating a surplus of labor in the areas in which those cities are located so that the power to absorb labor in these communities has more than reached the saturation point. Moreover, when discharged, most of these men receive only the few dollars' pay then due them, together with their mileage allowance.

"Mistakenly believing that there are almost an unlimited number of opportunities available in the city at wartime wages, these men, to a very considerable proportion after discharge, come into the city, spend their money, and then seek employment. Finding themselves unable quickly to secure a position, they are financially stranded, become subjects of charity, are tempted to commit crime, and are in a mental attitude very fertile for the reception of radicial and anarchistic theories.

"We are informed by the examiners of the United States Employment Service for New York City that as a result of their experience they are of the opinion that between 25 and 33 1-3 per cent. of the discharged men registering at the local United States Employment Service offices have never lived or worked in New York City.

"An official of the Knights of Columbus, in charge of fourteen of their offices in this city, estimates that about 30 per cent. of the returned soldiers, with whom they come in contact as applicants for positions here, have never belonged in New York City."

ONLY 'SELF-PRESERVATION'

Sir Robert Balfour Points Out What Underlies British Trade Embargo.

Sir Robert Balfour, M. P., of the firm of Balfour, Williams & Co. of New York and Balfour, Guthrie & Co. of San Francisco, who arrived here on the White Star liner Baltic, said yesterday regarding the recently instituted British trade embargo:

"It is a highly important fact, and one to be recognized, that the United Kingdom and her dominions have passed through a time of great trial and difficulty. The war came to a sudden end, and it was found that a great many industries, on which the life of the country depend are not in a productive condition. In short, the country is faced with the situation of disorganized industry. It has to provide employment for its people. Britain has become a debtor rather than a creditor nation. It has sold a very large volume of negotiable securities in order to provide the sinews of war.

"This has placed the country in a less favorable position and has meant a loss of foreign income. It has adversely affected the position of exchange, notably American. So you see, the two considerations are industrial and financial. This is the underlying cause of the action which is being criticised. It was done to protect ourselves.

"This is not a matter of free trade or protection, but one of self-preservation, and criticism of it can well afford to be of a friendly character, which would be more in line with the principle of the League of Nations that we propose to inaugurate. I desire to view the subject in a dispassionate and impartial way."

Nineteen of the citations were made to members of the 117th and 118th Infantry, composed of former guardsmen from Tennessee and the Carolinas, which, in the 30th, or Old Hickory, Division, fought with the 27th Division of New York with the British in Flanders.

SEES DARK OUTLOOK FOR GERMAN MUSIC

Must Be a Revolution in Art There, Says Mlle. Schoen-Rene, Who Has Taught Here.

OPERA DOOMED FOR A TIME

No One to Finance Court Theatres, and Artists Face Lean Years—Jadlowker Pessimistic.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, (via Copenhagen, Feb. 8.)—"Musical Germany is going to have her revolution just as political Germany did," said Mlle. Schoen-Rene to THE TIMES correspondent as she was summing up the present state and the near future of musical relations between America and Germany. Once a well-known opera and concert singer herself, she now conducts conservatories in Minneapolis and Berlin, and is known as a successful teacher.

"In Germany before the war," she said, "music, and indeed most of the arts, had during the long period of material prosperity grown too narrow, which means that nothing but essentially German music or what was considered such was composed or could count on the applause of the audiences. But music, like all arts, must be international, must have a world-wide scope or it will degenerate. Such was plainly the case in Germany, more especially in Berlin, where compositions were produced and singers were applauded that would never have succeeded in some provincial cities where art remained comparatively free from the Byzantine influence prevailing in Berlin."

"Do you agree, then, with some Entente writers who assert that Wagner's music had great influence in forming the modern German character?"

"Decidedly," she replied, "but I am convinced that Wagner's influence on the German character would be quite different on Germans in a free republic from what it was on the Germans in mediaeval despotism. The free German will cultivate Wagner even more ardently, because his was a virile art that is a stranger to all servility."

No American Relations.

"What about America's future musical relations with Germany?"

"I am afraid that there will be none whatever in the next few years. Germany's musical deterioration will soon be felt in America, where comparisons will be drawn with the art of other countries, like Italy and France, and Germany will not be able to stand these comparisons at present, all the more so because those who will draw the comparisons cannot help being more or less prejudiced against Germany for political and other reasons."

"Before the war at least 2,000 Americans a year studied music here. There is none left today and there will not be any for some years to come, if not for the idealistic reasons mentioned before, then for more material ones.

"The political and economic revolutions are bound to impoverish not only Germans but also the German arts. Many institutions, such as the Royal Opera Houses, some of the numerous court theatres in the smaller principalities, many municipal theatres, concert halls, and orchestras are no longer receiving rich subventions and are bound to cease to exist in their present form. They may disappear completely as the vanished glamor of courts and the oddities of Prussian nobles and bureaucrats, which, while they would have none of it at home, pleased the sense of curiosity of American sightseers. Some of these art institutions may be able to tide over the crisis. But the old splendors are gone and something new has got to take their place, and that will take time."

"How long?"

"I should say about the next five years would be barren ones, but as I know Germany and her people, after that there will be a vigorous revival of every phase of life and art. There is still an enormous latent strength in the German people which the hard times coming will surely awake. Mind you, I by no means despair of Germany's future in any field of action, but it will take the next five years to prepare for the new era. I am expecting even worse times than we have had so far because when one pulls down an old and antiquated building one cannot expect a new palace in its place immediately. One must clear away the debris and build anew. It is the same with German arts as it is with everything else German."

"Spartacide Stunts" in Art.

"Do you expect any Spartacide stunts in the arts?"

"We have been having them even before the political revolution. Look at some of the Berlin picture exhibitions. Listen to some modern compositions at the many concert halls. See the stage names. They are absolutely Spartacide stunts and unfortunately very few of the great German artists we have cannot be absolved from the guilt of having encouraged the Spartacide art movements.

"But coming back to the more material reasons of which I was speaking I know several of the largest German court and municipal theatres, which will be closed before the season ends or left to private enterprise. The Standard German Grand Opera must naturally sink. I am convinced that two or three years hence, if the political conditions permit, French and Italian opera companies will tour Germany, and a great musical event in Berlin and a few other large cities will be a short visit from the Metropolitan Opera House Company of New York. Doubtless the Germans will find the money to pay for it."

For the present Mlle. Schoen-Rene thought that lighter kind of of musical art was not threatened by a catastrophe like that threatening grand opera. Musical comedy might continue to flourish, if for no other reason than that it was the only pleasure obtainable at moderate means. So might other of the less expensive theatrical enterprises. But as a centre of classic music Germany's days were over for the present. She had some slight hope, however, that the Bayreuth Festival might continue to be some attraction for the Americans. Rehearsals were beginning early in the Spring for the 1920 season.

At the present the agents, she said, had no engagements whatever to offer for grand opera in Germany. Mannheim, Hanover, Kassel and Wiesbaden were a few of the cities which had already closed their former royal or municipal institutions, and many others were bound to follow. The salaries paid to stars had already been reduced largely, but would be even more, while the musical proletariat would soon be driven to starve or seek other employment.

"I hope, however," concluded Mlle. Schoen-Rene, "that Wilson's League of Nations will be imitated by a musical league of nations, the latter having the advantage of expressing itself intelligibly to the whole world, unless, of course, they take to Sparticide stunts. The sound internationalism of such a musical league would soon cure German art of its too intensive inbreeding."

Dodging the Management.

Jadlowker, first tenor of the Royal Opera in Berlin, was equally pessimistic regarding the near future of art in Germany.

"It was my intention at first to take over the management of the Royal Opera House," he told THE TIMES correspondent, "on similar lines on which the Metropolitan Opera in New York is conducted, meaning to interest rich men who would contribute the amount formerly supplied by the crown.

"But on looking over the situation carefully I changed my mind because the strikes among the opera personnel for higher salaries and the absolute equality on the stage would make life unbearable to a manager from the financial as well as the artistic point. Now I have decided to accept an engagement with Campanini at the Chicago Auditorium if my conditions are complied with. Since Richard Strauss decamped we have been practically without a managerial head at the opera, and it is surprising that things have not gone worse. Strauss did not like the idea of being elected manager by the chorus and stagehands and orchestra, which, of course, cannot be an ideal mode of advancement, but State Secretary Hanisch insists on this radical form.

"Since then they have again asked me to assume the management. Hearing, however, that a seven-million mark subvention would be required in place of the three millions, formerly paid by the Kaiser to cover the deficit, caused by the new rate of salaries demanded by the personnel, I have abandoned the idea.

"State Secretary of Finance Suedekum told me," continued Jadlowker, "that if peace terms were no better than the armistice terms the Prussian State will not have one mark to give to art, and private efforts would never suffice to cover such a large deficit. They talk of electing Dr. Muck, now in America, as manager, but if the outlook is unchanged they will have nobody willing to take the risk, and what will become of the most of the opera singers is hard to say."

Speaking of the Kaiser, Jadlowker said:

"Wilhelm certainly seemed to know more about opera than his manager, Colonel Hulsenhaeseler. The latter was almost a parody on the former or at least a caricature copy except in corporeal greatness. Wilhelm was very conversant with the historical costumes of his favorite operas."

Steinway's representative here, Herr Kalub, said that music teachers had little hope of a return of their American clientele. The musical trade, however, was as yet little affected by the revolution.

J. FORD TILTON DEAD.

The Times Editorial Auditor Succumbs to Pneumonia.

J. Ford Tilton, editorial auditor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, died early yesterday morning in St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, of double pneumonia. He had been ill for a week with influenza. This developed into pneumonia last Thursday, and he was removed from his home, 340 East Twenty-eighth Street, Brooklyn, to the hospital.

Mr. Tilton was born in Brooklyn thirty-eight years ago, and attended Public School 15 in that borough. He was for some time employed in the editorial auditing department of The World, and about eight years ago came to THE TIMES as assistant to Frederick L. Hosmer. Upon the death of Mr. Hosmer some four years ago Mr. Tilton was made editorial auditor.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Florence Tilton, and a daughter, Shirley Tilton, 11 years old. The funeral services will be held at their home Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, and the interment will take place at Hempstead, L. I., on Wednesday.

WORKED WITH MARK TWAIN.

W. W. Austin, Long with The Times, One of Pioneers Out West.

William W. Austin, for sixteen years a member of the editorial staff of THE NEW YORK TIMES, died Saturday of paralysis at his home, 203 West 102d Street. Mr. Austin's first newspaper work was as a reporter for The Sun, under Amos Cummings, and later for The Chronicle, in San Francisco, where he once fell into the Pacific in a balloon. He worked at Virginia City, Nev., with Mark Twain.

Returning to New York in 1878, he joined THE TIMES as reporter, then telegraph editor and assistant dramatic editor. Although confined to his home for the last eighteen years, he continued to write for newspapers and magazines.

DEATH OF BESSIE ABOTT.

Popular Singer in Opera, She Left to Wed Waldo Story.

Bessie Abott, who for some years was one of America's leading young opera singers, and who also won fame abroad, died yesterday at her home, 927 Park Avenue, after an illness of several years. She had retired from the stage on her marriage to the late T. Waldo Story, the sculptor. Born at Riverside, N. Y., in 1878, she was a daughter of Francis Pickens, a New York merchant, and a descendant of General Andrew Pickens, of South Carolina.

Upon the father's death she and her sister, Jessie, found themselves penniless and, having good voices, they obtained an engagement with E. E. Rice to sing popular songs. They adopted their mother's name Abbott, which in Paris was once misprinted on a programe as "Abott," and the singer retained that form of spelling. Miss Abott appeared in the operetta "1492" and "The Little Christopher." She studied under Mme. Ashforth, and in 1808 at a musicale in London, Jean de Reszke advised her to try for an operatic career. For three years she studied with Capoul, Bouhy, and Mathilde Marchesi.

She made her debut in grand opera at the Paris Opera, Dec. 9, 1901, as Juliette. Her first appearance on returning to America was with the New York Symphony Society in 1906, and she was for three years at the Metropolitan Opera House, appearing in such roles as Filine in "Mignon," with Farrar and Bonci, and also as Mimi, Marguerite, Gilda, Marta, Juliette, and Micaela. She sang that role in "Carmen" with the company in San Francisco the night of the earthquake.

Miss Abott afterward sang again in Paris, as well as at Lisbon, Monte Carlo and Petrograd. In 1910 she was to have created the Lady Godiva in Mascagni's "Ysobel" at the New Theatre, but the composer did not have his work ready in time and refused to come to New York. It has since been produced by the Chicago stars. Miss Abott toured the country in "La Boheme" with her own company, and she sang Maid Marian in DeKoven's revival of "Robin Hood" at the Knickerbocker Theatre in 1912. In that year she was married to Mr. Story.

DEAR FOLKS:

I am going to write several letters to you—in which I will tell you some things that I know you are interested in.

You and I agree, I am sure, that life is very much easier for us if we can keep happy.

We all surely understand that our greatest happiness comes when we allow our hearts to lead us—when we do as much for others, if not more, than we do for ourselves.

We all know in our home life, for instance, that happiness flies out of the window if all the members of the family are not harmonious.

We all know that quarrels, bickerings, or misunderstandings in our family or social circles do not get us anywhere so far as the joy of living is concerned.

On the other hand, life is very rosy indeed if we are thoughtful and kind to one another in the family circle, and if we are considerate of the feelings of all others with whom we come in personal contact.

I have always believed that our business life should be as happy as our home and social life.

I have never been able to understand why so many of us change our natures when we go to our offices or shops.

Why should we keep out of our daily toil those elements that give us so much pleasure away from our work?

All my life I have believed that every man and woman engaged with us in making our business successful should be treated by us with as much courtesy and kindness as we show to members of our household and to our intimate friends. Why not?

It is far easier to mix a lot of heart in our business and to get good results than it is to be cold, calculating and mercenary—to grind the hearts out of our associate-workers and make them human machines instead of the happy human beings that the Ruler of the Universe intended them to be.

The most of you, to whom I write this letter, are workers like myself. We cannot all be owners of businesses. We must work for others—but if we are fortunate enough to work for a man or a company where Heart is a factor in the business you know as well as I do that our daily toil is a joy and not a cross. The very nature of my work has brought me in personal contact with a great many business men throughout the country.

I used to think that business was a thing wholly apart from our family and social environment; but as I grew older I learned differently.

In spots here and there I have found men who practiced in their business affairs those nice things of life that win the loyalty and devotion of their associate-workers—that made the workers happy and proud—that made the businesses themselves very successful.

But I have always had difficulty in persuading big business men to go to the public with Heart messages — messages that would unfold to you and to me the human side of their business.

They have told me very often that you would not be interested in the personal side of their business; and I have always answered them that you would, because you are very human and are very keen about knowing whether the workers of the world are getting as much out of life as they should—and that you would be won to the support and glorification of the business that had the heart and impulse to make its workers happy.

I knew that some day somewhere I would meet a BIG MAN who conducts his business on the heart plan, whose associate-workers and himself get out of life a full measure of happiness, and a man who would be willing to let me tell you all about it.

At last I have found THE MAN and THE BUSINESS that I'm going to tell you about in this series of letters. He directs a very big business whose receipts average daily more than one and a quarter million dollars.

What a great thing it is for us to hold fast to our faith—believing that some day we will meet our IDEAL! This man and I met in a peculiar way. We had never known each other before personally, but we had known of one another's work.

He read one of my TALKS which I write daily for the New York Evening Mail and he liked the HEART in it. While he was in New York one day several weeks ago, I was introduced to him and he questioned me a great deal about my views as to the human side of business.

He did not laugh at me as others have done in days gone by.

He listened very attentively and sympathetically.

He told me that I was right in my beliefs.

He told me that he also believed, as sincerely as I do, that life is worth while only if one can so live it as to give the greatest service to the greatest number.

The upshot of our meeting was that I was invited to go through his plant in Chicago—to mingle with his workers—and to find out for myself whether the ideals that I have been writing and talking about for so many years existed there; and if I did find that they existed, then he would give me free rein to write what I pleased and to print what I wrote in the daily newspapers of the country.

I thought it would take me perhaps a week to gather all the material I wanted, but I became so interested in my work and heard from the lips of the happy workers so many wonderful things that I remained for over five weeks.

In my letter next week I will introduce to you the man who is the head of the greatest family of workers I have ever met in my life.

I hope you will get as much happiness and satisfaction out of reading these letters as I will get in writing them.

Sincerely, William C. Freeman,
131 E. 23rd St., New York City.

HERRMANN BLOCKS HAL CHASE TRADE

Cincinnati Team Holds Up Deal Until Player Withdraws His Suit Against Reds.

McGRAW IS DISAPPOINTED

Giants' Manager May Bring About Compromise This Week for Transfer of First Baseman.

The trip of Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants to Cincinnati to arrange for the trade of Hal Chase to the New York Club, has hit a snag. President Herrmann of the Reds, has made it known that he will not consent to any deal involving Chase until that player has withdrawn his suit for salary from the courts. Chase, when he was suspended last August, sued the Reds for the remaining weeks of the season. It is said to amount to about $1,600.

Chase's lawyers, after the first baseman was exonerated by President John A. Heydler, announced that Chase would demand "full redress" from the Cincinnati Club for the charges which they brought against him. When making his finding in the case, President Heydler stated emphatically that on account of Chase's conduct, the Cincinnati Club was justified in bringing charges against him. As this attitude by the President of the league who tried Chase upholds the club's action in suspending the player, President Herrmann contends that the loss of salary goes with the suspension and he refused to do business with any one concerning the trade of Chase until the suit had been withdrawn.

This same position was taken by President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club, who stated that he would not consent to a trade involving Jake Daubert until the player had withdrawn his suit against the club. It has not been announced that the Daubert suit had been dropped, but nevertheless Daubert was traded to Herrmann for Kopf and Griffith.

Herrmann is willing, and, in fact, anxious, to get rid of Chase, so his sudden action in blocking the deal after McGraw went to Cincinnati comes as a surprise. The old clique on the Cincinnati club, which made so much trouble for Manager Mathewson, has been set adrift, and Manager Pat Moran will start out with a collection of players, among whom harmony prevails. Harmony is one thing which the Cincinnati club for the last few seasons has lacked. Clarke Griffith, Hank O'Day, Joe Tinker, Charley Herzog, and Mathewson found that it was a hard task to get the players to pull together. With the trouble-making element in the club eliminated, Moran and Herrmann believe that a period of success is in store for Cincinnati.

It is known that Manager McGraw and the Cincinnati club have been in communication with Chase, and the New York leader is trying to bring about a compromise between Chase and Herrmann. It is possible that this may be done before McGraw returns to this city. The fact that New York was willing to give up Moran to Herrmann as Manager led the officials of the club to believe that if Chase was wanted by the New York club there would be no delay in consummating the deal. That McGraw was surprised when he found the deal blocked would not quite express the feelings of the Giants' leader. It is believed that McGraw will force a compromise of some sort between Chase and his former employers this week.

Colonel T. L. Huston, half-owner of the Yankees, before he went to Dover Hall, Ga., last week, established himself as a strong advocate for the Sunday baseball bill which has just been introduced in the Legislature by Assemblyman Malone. Colonel Huston favors the sport on Sunday because it has become such a popular pastime among the soldiers.

Colonel Huston, more than a year ago, made the remark, when there was some objection raised because of a Sunday benefit game at the Polo Grounds, that soldiers fight and die on Sunday, so it seemed out of proportion to deprive them of the little pleasure which baseball affords.

DR. CULVER BEST AT TRAPS.

Takes High Scratch Prize at Travers Island Shoot.

Thirty-five gunners took part in the week-end shoot of the New York Athletic Club over its Travers Island traps yesterday. Although the conditions were not of the best, Dr. Culver again had his eye on the bluerocks and won the high scratch prize with a card of 96 out of a possible 100 targets. The high handicap prize went to R. S. Smith, after a shoot-off.

Harry Sullivan was the winner of the special scratch shoot, and the special handicap shoot fell to the steady aim of E. D. Anderson. In the shoot for the ghost targets, J. Kelley, Jr., A. W. Walter and F. J. Ham all broke the little white "bird." E. B. Anderson was not so successful. He fell down when it was thrown over Trap No. 2.

In addition to all its other prizes, the New York Athletic Club has added still another which goes to each nimrod who makes a straight score of 25 targets during a shoot. Only two were captured yesterday. One was taken by R. L. Spotts and the other by Dr. Culver. The legs on the Accumulation and Tournament Cups were scored by all gunners who had full scores of 25 targets. On the Byronel Cup, legs were won by all gunners who had full cards of 50 targets.

The New York Athletic Club is planning a big open shoot for Lincoln's Birthday. It will be at 200 targets with prizes for scratch and handicap gunners. There also will be a shoot at Travers Island on Washington's Birthday.

SCHIAVONE IN CLOSE RACE.

Wins Bronx Road Run by Margin of One Foot.

Bart Schiavone of the Mohawk A. C., recently mustered out of the army, showed plenty of endurance and running ability yesterday in the Bronx Athletic League handicap road race, held over what is known as the Elks Course in the Bronx. The distance was about four and one-half miles. Schiavone carried off first prize after an impressive closing sprint with Dick Brandt of St. Anselm's A. C. The victor's margin was about one foot. Schiavone's time was 24:29.

Schiavone, starting with an allowance of 3 minutes 45 seconds, plodded steadily along through a field of twenty-four starters for about three miles, when he moved to the front. Once at the head of the harriers the Mohawk runner gradually increased his pace and began to gain ground. About 100 yards from the finish line Schiavone was leading by a margin estimated at 200 yards. He was seized with acute stomach pains at this stage of the chase and was compelled to slacken his pace. Brandt, jogging along in second position began a fast closing spurt when he noticed his rival's reduced pace, but just missed first prize in the close finish, which ended in Schiavone's favor. C. Beagan, another St. Anselm's runner, clung to the flying heels of Brandt when the latter set out for first prize, but was distanced by a margin of about three yards.

Frank Titterton, the young Pastime A. C. runner, carried off fast time laurels. He started from scratch and finished in thirteenth position in 23:44. The team prize went to the athletes of the Mohawk A. C. who garnered the low total of 25 points.

The order of finish follows:

Pos.	Name and Club.	Hcp.	Actual Time.
1	Bart Schiavone, Mohawk A. C.	3:45	24:29
2	R. Brandt, St. Anselm's A. C.	3:15	24:00
3	C. Reagan, St. Anselm's A. C.	4:00	25:15
4	E. Hill, Mohawk A. C.	4:00	25:26

LEWIS FIRST OVER LINE.

Sprint at Finish Decides Winner of Yorkville A. L. Run.

R. Lewis and J. Gottlieb, Clark House A. A. runners, had an interesting duel yesterday in the open handicap road race of the Yorkville Athletic League conducted over the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A. course of about four miles. These two harriers, each starting with handicap allowances of 3 minutes 30 seconds, moved to the head of a field of fourteen after about one mile had been covered. Thereafter they raced stride for stride until near the finish line, when Lewis increased his pace and won by about six yards. Lewis' time was 20:27.

The first Yorkville Athletic League member to finish was L. Szada of the Hungarian-American A. C. He was third. W. Stokeley of the St. Christopher Club, carried off the fast time prize, finishing ninth from scratch in 18:41.

SCHNEIDER EASY WINNER.

Handicap Enables Him to Set Own Pace in Handicap Race.

Dave Schneider of the Kings County A. A. was not forced to extend himself yesterday to win the Long Island Athletic League handicap race, conducted under the auspices of the Comet A. C. over a course of about six miles. Schneider went into the van position after covering about four miles and thereafter made the pace to suit himself. He started with a handicap of 3 minutes and 15 seconds and his actual time was 37:30.

The race was run over a hard course, which taxed the strength of the harriers from start to finish. Part of the chase included sections of Highland Park and over the entire distance footing was treacherous. Eighteen started and all finished.

James McNeil of the Comet A. C., starting from one minute behind scratch, captured the fast time prize. He finished ninth in 35:20. The Kings County A. A. athletes accounted for the team prize with 19 tallies.

SPRINT WINS FOR WALTERS.

He Leads Field of Ten in Paulist A. C. Race.

Joe Walters showed his heels to a field of ten rivals yesterday in the scratch members' road race of the Paulist A. C., held over a course of about four miles. Walters, after racing neck and neck from the start with Joe Phillips, sprinted near the finish and advanced to a lead of about 200 yards at the end of the race. His time was 22:08. Phillips, in second place, was timed in 22:40, while G. Kirkwood was third, seven seconds behind Phillips.

NAVY YARD RUNNER WINS.

Kolber Leads Harriers in Glencoe A. C. Road Race.

E. Kolber of the Glencoe A. C. carried off premier prize yesterday in an invitation road race held by the Glencoe A. C. over a course of about four and one-half miles. Kolber, who is attached to the Philadelphia Navy Yard, covered the course in 24:23, leading Mike Tea, a clubmate, to the tape by a small margin. R. Leonard of the Philadelphia Navy Yard finished third.

DEMPSEY TO SIGN TODAY.

Signatures Will Be Affixed in New Jersey to Insure Legality.

Jack Dempsey, Salt Lake City heavyweight, who has been selected as the opponent for Jess Willard, in a title bout to be promoted by Tex Rickard July 4, will affix his signature to the articles for the bout this afternoon. The signing ceremonies will take place either in Hoboken or Jersey City. This was announced last night by Promoter Rickard. The Western promoter will take this precaution so that everything in connection with Dempsey's signing will be legally binding on the parties concerned. Section 1710 of the Penal Code makes such a ceremony illegal in this State.

A precedent for this was set in 1910, when the promoters and principals in the Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson match crossed to New Jersey to sign the articles, after completing the details for the match in this city.

Dempsey is expected to arrive from Kansas City early this morning. Promoter Rickard stated last night that there was no question about Dempsey signing for the bout.

Alex and George Smith Winners.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE OWLS BEAT SOLDIERS AT POLO

Squadron A Is Overwhelmed by Dashing Attack, and Loses by Score of 18 to 10.

Standing of the Teams.

	W.	L.	P. C.
White Owls	2	0	1.000
Meadowlarks	1	0	1.000
Foxhunters	1	1	.500
Rovers	0	1	.000
Eagles	0	1	.000
Squadron A	0	1	.000

Splendid horsemanship and a connected offensive gave the White Owls polo trio a victory over the Squadron A team yesterday in the Phillips Cup tournament at Durland's Riding Academy. The score was 18 to 10. The White Owls contingent, which recently won the Sherman Cup tournament, clearly outclassed their rivals at all stages of the match. This victory brought the trio into a tie with the Meadowlarks.

The soldier players were in receipt of six goals handicap, but this advantage availed them nothing. Squadron A found it impossible to combat the White Owls' systematic and varied attack. To their six goals allotment the soldiers added three tallies in the opening half, V. Grimwood getting one while R. Cooke accounted for two. The White Owls, led by Herbert Winn at No. 2, smashed through their opponents' defense for nine goals, so that the end of the first period found the teams deadlocked. Winn led his team with four goals, Murray Wilder got three, and Otis Coleman accounted for two.

In the second half the White Owls rode roughshod over the soldiers and piled up their one-sided margin. The goal scoring in this period was similar to that of the first half, Winn getting four, Wilder three, and Coleman two. But one tally trickled through for Squadron A. This was made by Calusen.

The Eagles unsuccessfully tried to concede a handicap of three goals to the Foxhunters in another game, which ended in a one-sided victory for the latter trio by 13 goals to 3. The Foxhunters were masters of the situation throughout. In the first period the Foxhunters offensive had the Eagles so occupied that the latter team had no time for thought of goals. The period ended, therefore, with the Foxhunters adding seven goals to their handicap for a score of 10 to 0. With their commanding lead the Foxhunters slackened their efforts in the second period, but never allowed the Eagles to become dangerous. A. Bartels led the victorious team, annexing three goals in each period.

LEITCH VICTOR ON ICE.

Wins Handicap Skating Race at Woodland's Lake.

Al Leitch of the Verona Skating Club skated to victory yesterday in the one-mile handicap ice skating race held at Woodland's Lake, N. Y., under the auspices of the Tremont Skating Club. Leitch started with an allowance of twenty-five yards on Joe Moore of the Ice Palace, who was on scratch. The Verona skater never was overhauled and won by about twenty yards in 3:07. A field of eighteen skaters started.

Leitch was deprived of another victory in the half-mile race through an accident. He was leading up to within one-quarter lap of the finish when he suddenly tripped and failed to complete the race.

The summaries:

One-Half Mile Race, Novice.—Won by J. Leeman, Peerless Skating Club; T. McLaughlin, unattached, second; E. Ahrens, Palace Skating Club, third. Time—1:45 2-5.

One-Half Mile Race, Handicap.—Won by Leslie Boyd, Palace Skating Club, (25 yards;) H. D. Carter, Ice Palace, (25 yards,) second; Joe Moore, Ice Palace, (scratch,) third. Time—1:27.

One-Mile Race, Handicap.—Won by Al Leitch, Verona Skating Club, (25 yards;) Joe Moore, Ice Palace, (scratch,) second; R. Becker, Tremont Skating Club, (110 yards,) third. Time—3:07.

MATCH NOW UP TO HOPPE.

Schaefer Asks Champion to Cover His $1,000 Forfeit.

Whether there will be a championship balk-line billiard match between Willie Hoppe, titleholder, and Jake Schaefer, challenger, now rests entirely with the champion. Schaefer, following a conference yesterday with Tod Sloan, who has posted $1,000 to bind a match between the billiardists, declared he would wait until October for the chance at the title, providing Hoppe covers the $1,000 posted or puts up $5,000, the amount the champion stipulates should go as a side bet. Hoppe, answering the persistent challenges of Schaefer, has declared exhibitions will keep him occupied until October. If the champion posts the $5,000, Sloan is prepared to cover the amount and clinch the match.

Hoppe is now in the South. Schaefer is convalescing from a severe attack of influenza and pneumonia. His illness was more dangerous than was at first announced. The young son of the late "Wizard" is believed now, however, to have passed the crisis. His physician will not consent to a match with him as one of the participants for several weeks.

PATERSON ELEVEN WINS.

Defeats Morse Dry Dock Soccer Team, 4 Goals to 1.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 9.—By winning against the powerful soccer eleven representing Morse Dry Dock of Brooklyn by the score of 4 goals to 1 at Olympic Park this afternoon the Paterson Football Club fought its way into the semi-final round of the American Football Association's cup tie series, for which Bethlehem, the national champion; Robins Dry Dock, and Merchants' Ship Team A have also qualified. Archie Stark, Beardsworth, Knowles, Hunziker, and Bleich did the scoring.

Clan MacDuff proved victorious by 5 goals to 0 in the Combination League game with the Macomb's A. C. soccer team at Lenox Oval yesterday.

Robins Dry Dock soccers, who will journey to Bethlehem Saturday to play the national champions on their own grounds, obtained the verdict yesterday against the Babcock & Wilcox eleven of Bayonne by the score of 2 goals to 0 at Todd Field, Brooklyn.

The Vikings had matters all their own way yesterday in the Combination League game with the Queens Rangers at Macomb's Dam Park, and won by the one-sided score of [illegible] goals to 0.

USE JUDGMENT IN SELECTING YOUR INVESTMENTS

Experts are of the opinion that bonds of real intrinsic merit purchased around present prices are practically certain to sell considerably higher within the next few years. The question, therefore, is not so much as to whether to buy now as it is to use the proper amount of judgment in making selections. Should you wish us to submit to you a diversified list of securities, we would be glad to do so, following out your ideas as to types and geographical location as closely as possible.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Price Trend Denoted in Copper's Decline

The proposal by Secretary of Commerce Redfield last week that prices of basic commodities be established under Government auspices at levels which would appeal to buyers, commended itself to bankers and business men chiefly through the evidence it supplied of serious consideration of the industrial situation at Washington. The fact that such a movement would infringe upon the natural law of supply and demand and possibly complicate, in the end, the natural course of readjustment to a peace basis, aroused some doubt as to whether the plan would prove effective. Information coming from many lines of trade goes to show that the deadlock between buyers and sellers is showing signs of being broken. Whether or not any means of an artificial nature would succeed in persuading consumers that prices had actually been stabilized is a matter of debate. During the war period fixed prices proved beneficial; in peace time, past history has shown, production and consumption have functioned most smoothly when left to themselves. The copper producers have decided to seek, through the ordinary way of reducing prices, the level where buyers will be attracted. The greater interest was drawn to Mr. Redfield's suggestion because it appeared at about the same time that the copper men acted on their own account to meet the ideas of consumers. To all intents and purposes they merely followed the drift in other lines of raw materials, cotton being a notable example, and indications are that a continuation of price contraction in the primary markets will be seen for some time to come. Should the movement be sufficiently rapid and allowed to take its own course, a procedure such as Mr. Redfield has forwarded would not be necessary. The cut in the price of copper of 4½ cents per pound was somewhat drastic, and yet had a salutary effect on sentiment. It also stimulated purchases, which were reported to have been larger on the two days succeeding the news than in all the preceding days since the armistice was signed. The copper industry stands in a position which perhaps is somewhat different from other producing lines in that it finds itself as the result of highly stimulated output with a billion pounds of metal on hand. And yet the process followed in reducing the quotation was what many students of business would like to see elsewhere. The price cut was accompanied by extensive alterations of wage schedules, which is a development that the steel trade for one does not yet wish to see. The copper men were moved by the desire to arouse purchases, and even though they might suffer some loss of profit at the new level, still they had in mind the experience of other years, that a sharp decline frequently promotes competition for the metal and the recovery of prices later on. With the copper industry pointing the way, it will be highly interesting to note in the next few weeks the moral effect on contemporary business.

The Railroad Administration has very little left of the $500,000,000 revolving fund placed at its disposal a little more than a year ago. The railroads at the same time are creditors of the Government to the extent of $381,000,000. In other words, the Railroad Administration has a heavy debt to liquidate to the carriers in the shape of overdue rentals without the wherewithal to meet it. This explains in large part the desire of the Director General to secure an appropriation of $750,000,000 to add to the revolving fund, and also explains why certain roads have been asked in the last few weeks to pay off advances made by the Government. The railroads with cash balances and sound credit are thus being pressed to return funds to the Government for the sake of weaker properties, but are unable to realize on the rental money due them. In the process of meeting these loan calls new security issues are being floated or arranged for early flotation, and the signs point toward a substantial output of securities in the near future. The financial situation of the carriers emphasizes more than ever the need for constructive legislation for them as soon as possible. The suggestion by railroad unions that they be allowed to run the roads under Government supervision was not considered seriously, but it had one good effect. It helped to concentrate attention on the vast problem and ought to stimulate both the public and legislators to a decision on a program.

Labor is exercising its force at home and abroad, as evidenced by the great British strikes and the serious situation at Seattle. At the close of last week came word that miners of the Butte district were seeking a six-hour day and a high wage scale. The labor situation promises to become further complicated as more men are released from military service, and the question is daily becoming more pressing whether labor shall be considered as a commodity and fluctuate with other markets. The cost of living, of course, is a vital part of this question, and permanent signs have not yet been discerned of a really substantial decline of food, rentals, and major items of clothing. While wholesale prices of some products and materials nec-accept its loss of $1,000,000,000 or so on its guarantee price to the farmer and throw the market open so that buyer and seller could shape quotations by themselves. The unsettled question of whether the surplus of wheat will occur or not in the balance of the year has seemed to check action to make the market free.

The stock market for some days past has displayed the product of forces impelled by particular developments. Thus, the copper issues declined for a distinct reason, and also the shipping stocks, reasons which applied primarily to these securities. Certain of the industrial group were depressed by proof presented in one or more annual statements that profits in the last quarter of 1918 declined sharply. The writing down of inventories had much to do with the showing of net earnings and was an earnest of results to appear in the first quarter of the current year. Weakness of certain groups of stocks naturally had influence on the whole list, but the decline as a whole hardly indicated a general nervousness over underlying conditions, and there were strong forward movements to offset recessions elsewhere.

SUGGESTS CAUTION IN PUBLIC OPERATION

Merchants' Association Would Have Congress Carefully Study Railway Situation.

CITES MUNICIPAL FAILURES

Proposes Private Operation of Telephones and Telegraphs as Unified Systems.

Resolutions calling for the ultimate return of the railroads to their owners and for the operation of telephone and telegraph lines by private companies have been adopted by the Merchants' Association. The resolution upon the return of the railroads expresses the opinion that the best interests of the nation will be served by operation by private companies, and that the period of Government operation should not continue more than twenty-one months after the signing of the peace treaty, as stipulated in the law empowering control during the war. The resolutions continued:

"The railroads ought not to be returned to their owners until Congress shall have considered and enacted constructive legislation to provide for the highest permanent efficiency of railroad operation and utilization of railroad properties and equipment; and for the adequate compensation of the capital invested in railroads, sufficient to protect railroad credit and to insure the extension of transportation facilities to meet the commercial needs of the country."

In its resolutions upon the telegraph and telephone lines the association says it "is opposed to ownership and permanent operation of public utilities by the Government," and continues:

"The telephone and telegraph systems of the country are, in their essential features, national in scope, and the business and social welfare of the nation will best be served by unified telephone and telegraph systems supplying nationwide service provided by one or more private corporations under suitable Federal laws and subject to suitable, preferably Federal, public regulation and control.

"Congress is respectfully urged to undertake at the earliest practicable date adequate investigation of this general subject, and, based upon such investigation, to enact as promptly as possible such laws as will permit and promote maximum utilization of facilities and maximum efficiency in service and provide for a fair return upon the capital employed."

It is explained in reports accompanying the resolutions that municipal-owned lighting plants and other public utilities have failed or do not compare favorably with similar plants under private operation. A report by Edmond Earle Lincoln of Harvard University upon municipal lighting plants operated under the Massachusetts law is cited to show that city ownership has not been profitable or advantageous to the public. Speaking of the comparison between private and city owned plants, the report says:

Another division of the reports is headed "Mismanagement," and includes a summary on municipal ownership in 268 towns and cities, compiled by Glenn Marston. In introducing the facts upon a series of typical cases of municipal ownership Mr. Marston writes:

"These typical examples illustrate the characteristic defects of municipal management, namely: Undue cost of construction, inadequate plant, insufficient maintenance, high labor and fuel cost, unskilled superintendence, failure to provide for depreciation, and omission from cost accounting of depreciation allowances, sinking fund charges, interest, rents, lost taxes, outlays from taxes, &c."

NATIONAL BANKS SET NEW HIGH RECORD

Resources on Dec. 31 Totaled $20,042,224,000, Greatest in Nation's History.

DOUBLED SINCE JAN., 1911

Increase in Last Two Months of 1918 Was $220,820,000—Deposits Total $15,423,081,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 9.—John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, announced tonight that for the first time in their history the resources of our national banks, at the last call, Dec. 31, 1918, passed the $20,000,000,000 mark and amounted to $20,042,224,000. This is an increase of $220,820,000 over the preceding call of Nov. 1, 1918, and an advance as compared with Dec. 31, 1917, of $1,968,916,000.

These extraordinary figures show that the total resources of the national banks of the United States have more than doubled since Jan. 1, 1911, when they amounted to only $9,820,483,000—the increase in eight years having been $10,221,741,000. The following figures give a comparison between the statements of Nov. 1, 1918, and Dec. 31, 1918: Deposits aggregated $15,423,081,000, an increase of $371,608,000 over the greatest deposits ever previously reached. Of the increase in deposits $101,356,000 was represented by time deposits, the remainder of the increase being in amounts due to banks and bankers. Demand deposits showed a slight reduction.

Loans and discounts on Dec. 31, 1918, amounted to $9,918,294,000, a reduction as compared with Nov. 1, of $178,646,000. The percentage of loans and discounts to deposits on Nov. 1, was 67.08 per cent., and on Dec. 31, these had been reduced to 64.31 per cent.

Bills payable and rediscounts on Dec. 31, 1918, were $1,380,835,000, a reduction as compared with Nov. 1 of $186,156,000. Of the $1,380,835,000 of bills payable and rediscounts outstanding on Dec. 31, 1918, $817,264,000 consisted of bills payable with the Federal Reserve Banks; $61,504,000 bills payable with other than Federal Reserve Banks, while the liability for rediscounts due Federal Reserve Banks and others amounted to $502,067,000.

United States bonds, including Liberty bonds and United States certificates of indebtedness, held on Dec. 31, 1918 amounted to $2,949,878,000, a reduction since Nov. 1 of $206,434,000. Other bonds, securities, &c., on Dec. 31, 1918, amounted to $1,683,071,000, an increase of $22,606,000. Capital, surplus, and undivided profits of national banks on Dec. 31, 1918, amounted to $2,293,613,000.

The circulation of national banks on Dec. 31 was $676,827,000, an increase of $1,129,000, as compared with Nov. 1, and an increase of $2,573,000, as compared with the same date of the previous year.

The amount of Liberty bonds of the first, second, third, and fourth loans owned by national banks on Dec. 31 was reported at $935,935,000, or 5.52 per cent. of the $17,000,000,000 Liberty bonds placed. In addition to the Liberty bonds the national banks reported holdings of United States certificates of indebtedness on Dec. 31, 1918, amounting to $983,125,000.

On Dec. 31, 1918, the national banks reported that the amount of money loaned by them on the security of Liberty bonds was $1,020,486,000 and the amount of money loaned by them on the security of certificates of indebtedness was $36,667,000.

The reports show that the amount of Liberty bonds of all four issues owned by national banks in the Central Reserve cities of New York, Chicago, and St. Louis was $172,616,000; in other Reserve cities $250,707,000, and by the country banks $532,612,000.

Of the United States certificates of indebtedness held by the national banks $358,532,000 were owned by the national banks of the three Central Reserve cities; $266,419,000 by national banks in other Reserve cities, and by the country banks $357,174,000.

Of the money loaned by the national banks on Liberty bonds, the national banks of the three Central Reserve cities were loaning $423,677,000; national banks in other Reserve cities were loaning $345,943,000, while the country banks were loaning on Liberty bonds $250,816,000.

Of the $36,667,000 which was being loaned on United States certificates of indebtedness the Central Reserve cities were loaning $13,875,000, national banks in other Reserve cities were loaning $20,249,000, while the country national banks were loaning $2,543,000.

Of the $955,935,000 Liberty bonds owned by national banks only $86,580,000 were the 3½ per cent. bonds of the first issue.

Illinois Central Railroad Company

Fifteen-Year Five and One-Half Per Cent.
Secured Gold Bonds

Due January 1, 1934
Interest payable January 1 and July 1

Charles A. Peabody, Esq., President of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, in a letter dated February 5, 1919, writes in part as follows:

"The Bonds will be the direct obligation of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and will be secured by the deposit with The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, as Trustee, of the following securities, having a present market value of about $20,000,000:

$17,350,000 face value Illinois Central Railroad Company and Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans Railroad Co. Joint First Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Bonds, Series A, due December 1, 1963, and

$4,550,000 face value Illinois Central Railroad Company Western Lines First Mortgage Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds, due August 1, 1951.

Pending the pledge of the above bonds, or any of them, cash is to be deposited in accordance with provisions to be contained in the Indenture.

The Trust Indenture is to contain provisions satisfactory to us that any of the pledged bonds may be released upon the deposit of Fifteen-Year Bonds or cash to be applied toward the purchase or redemption of Fifteen-Year Bonds.

The present issue of Bonds is being sold to discharge obligations incurred on account of expenditures for additions and betterments to its railroads, terminals, equipment and other facilities.

The Illinois Central Railroad Company has paid dividends on its capital stock uninterruptedly since 1863. It has now outstanding $109,296,000 capital stock, having a present market value of approximately $106,000,000, and on which dividends are being paid at the rate of 7% per annum.

An agreement between the Director General of Railroads and this Company defining the terms and conditions upon which Federal control shall be exercised and fixing the compensation to be paid by the Director General is being negotiated and will, it is anticipated, be executed shortly.

Under this agreement, the compensation payable to the Illinois Central Railroad Company proper is expected to be not less than $16,282,000 per annum, and in addition thereto the Company will be in receipt of other income estimated at about $6,602,000 per annum, making available for fixed charges, taxes, dividends, etc., the sum of about $22,884,000. All fixed charges of the Company (including interest on the present issue of bonds), taxes, rentals, sinking fund payments, etc., are estimated at $12,220,000, leaving a balance of $10,664,000 in excess of all fixed charges.

The present issue of bonds will mature on January 1, 1934, and will bear interest from January 1, 1919, at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum, payable January 1 and July 1. They will be issued as coupon bonds in denomination of $1,000 and will be redeemable in whole or in part at the option of the Illinois Central Railroad Company at 101 per cent. and accrued interest on any interest date on or after January 1, 1924, upon sixty days' previous notice. Coupon bonds will have the privilege of registration as to principal and will be exchangeable for bonds registered as to both principal and interest, which latter will be re-exchangeable for coupon bonds under the conditions provided in the Indenture. Both principal and interest of the bonds will be payable in gold coin of the United States of America, of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness, and without deduction for any tax or taxes (other than Federal income taxes in excess of two per cent. per annum) which the Railroad Company or the Trustee may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States of America, or of any State, County, Municipality or other taxing authority therein.

The issuance of these bonds has been approved by the Director General, United States Railroad Administration, and application for approval thereof is about to be made to the State Public Utilities Commission of Illinois. Application will be made in due course to list the Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

Pending the engraving of the definitive bonds, temporary certificates will be issued.

SAYS LOW RAILROAD RATES HURT CREDIT

Banker Contends Interstate Commission Prevented Adequate Returns.

SEES INVESTOR FORCED OUT

Declares Refusal to Increase Income Showed Lack of Vision and Ignorance of Conditions.

Francis H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, has written a letter to C. C. McChord of the Interstate Commerce Commission touching upon a number of the important phases of railroad credit and railroad earnings. The letter is in reply to one from Mr. McChord, which was included in correspondence recently made public at a hearing before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. The interchange of letters began when Mr. McChord wrote to Mr. Sisson insisting that the latter had criticized the commission for its failure to properly protect railroad credit. In that instance Mr. McChord characterized Mr. Sisson's criticism as unwarranted. In his reply, made public today, Mr. Sisson said in part:

"As you pointed out in your first letter, it was not until July, 1910, that the commission was given any material authority over the suspension of the proposed railroad rates which were filed by the carriers, and, naturally, it would appear that a comparison of conditions previous to 1910 with those since 1910 would be some indication as to how the commission had acted under its added responsibilities.

"In support of your contention that under the administration of the Interstate Commerce Commission the earning power of the railroads in the country had increased, you give figures showing the per cent. earned on investments from 1908 to 1917. I feel that this limited period is not conclusive and that it is rather interesting to see what the figures show for the period previous to 1908, for illustration, 1900 to 1908. I feel that the best indication of the earning position of the railroads is to be found, not in the rate of dividend paid on stock but in the rate per cent. earned on capital investment.

"It is generally recognized that railroads, as an enterprise, illustrate the general economic law commonly referred to as increasing returns. The investor who is putting capital into such an enterprise realizes that in the beginning he is forced to accept low returns, and as some compensation for risking his capital he expects to reap increasing rewards as business grows. But during a period of rising prices such as we experienced before the outbreak of the European war the increased cost of operation tends to absorb this additional income which the investor would have received from the increasing returns of his road, and if the managers of the road are prevented from increasing rates, the investor is deprived of the prospect of increasing returns, which was the particular incentive that induced him to take the risk and invest capital in the enterprise. A continuation of this situation must, of necessity, lead to an impairment of railroad credit.

Discusses Adequate Return.

"You must realize that many points of view are relative and not absolute, and in examining the attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission toward any increase of rates, the relative, rather than the absolute, point of view must be taken. The relative point of view considers whether the return is adequate to induce capital to enter the business of railroad transportation. The crux of the whole situation, in fact, is the adequacy of return. The commission's responsibility for the 'impairment of railway credit' is determined by the fact that, either by acts of commission or omission, it has helped to create in the minds of many investors the impression that the railroad business does not promise an adequate return. You, yourself, have stated that you have not made up your mind as to the standards of judging adequacy of return. This admission of yours, if representative of the commission, is pretty clear evidence of responsibility in a relative sense for the impairment of railway credit. It would appear that the true test of adequacy of return is that the rewards are sufficient to attract further capital for needed expansion. In this connection, it is interesting to note that Mr. Kruttschnitt, whom you recognize as a practical railroad man and whom you have quoted in favor of your position, stated in the hearings of 1917 that 'the lack of control over earnings by inability to get their inadequacy recognized by commissions and the necessary relief through increased rates at times when the volume of traffic is small prevents the carriers from providing increased future facilities or looking ahead sufficiently into the future.' It is my opinion that capital did not believe there was a sufficient immediate and prospective return to warrant investment in railroad enterprises because of the following factors: (1) Constantly increasing costs of operation; (2) the tendency since 1910 toward lowering the net return on investment; (3) the prospect of a continuation of this tendency; (4) the refusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant general rate increases when such increases were sought. As a consequence, many railroads adopted the unfortunate policy of trying to keep up their rates of dividend in order to support their credit, sometimes with serious results.

"Further, I believe that the action of the commission toward recent requests for rate increases clearly demonstrated that it was not, as a whole, taking the broad constructive point of view, showing cognizance of general tendencies. In its decision in 1911 it based its findings largely on the good financial results of the fiscal year 1910, and hazarded the prediction that the results in 1911 would be better. But in all of the succeeding five years the carriers earned relatively less, and in four very much less than in 1910. Again in 1914 some increases were granted. The complete returns for 1914 showed the smallest percentage of net return for fifteen years. Some advances were granted later, but within approximately a year from the commission's first decision in the 5 per cent. rate case there were more miles in the hands of receivers than ever before. In its decision on June 29, 1917, in the face of an increase of general prices of 72 per cent. over 1914, the commission found no need for 'so heroic a remedy' as the 15 per cent. advance asked by the railroads. Only five months later it addressed a special report to Congress, recommending two alternative plans, either of which, in the opinion of many persons, was even more 'heroic.' In March, 1918, when it was too late to be of any particular advantage to the railroads, the commission allowed the Eastern roads most of the remainder of the general advance in rates which they had asked for, and a little later the Director General made a further general advance of 25 per cent.—this all within a year of the time when the commission found no need for 'heroic' treatment of the rate situation.

Condemned for Acts of a Few.

"Your suggestion that the bad financial handling of certain railroads was largely instrumental in destroying railroad credit is worthy of consideration only in connection with the plain fact that all of such instances together amount to but a small fraction, (less than 10 per cent.,) of the railroad mileage of the country, and yet the commission and, to some extent, the public, following its leadership, have condemned 90 per cent. of the railroads to punishment and disfavor for the mistakes of the small minority. I know of no class of business, public or private, which is willing to have its affairs judged on the basis of its mistakes, nor do I know of any class of business which has been free from mistakes. It seems to me that the vital issue in this whole situation is that you, in common with others, have generalized from detached instances in a most unjust manner, and have persisted in forcing the many to suffer for the sins of the few, and, more than that, in punishing the innocent bystander, the public or investor, because of your punitive ambition and desire.

"The important fact about this whole question of railroad credit is that if we are to have a properly balanced financial structure for our railroads, they must have sufficient credit to sell stocks and not be forced to continue the endless accumulation of debt, which for a long period has been practically the only means by which they could be financed. The fact would seem to be self-evident, any yet apparently it is not considered that investment in stock is not attracted except by an assured return above that normally received from loans, or by speculative possibilities. If the policy of the commission is to restrict earnings to the point where stock dividends are less than the return available from good loans in many quarters, without speculative possibilities beyond, there is nothing to win the dollars of the American investor in the railroad situation, as he has very clearly shown."

Swift and Company

6% TWO AND ONE-HALF YEAR GOLD NOTES

Dated February 15, 1919 Total Authorized Issue $25,000,000 Due August 15, 1921

Interest payable August 15 and February 15 at Illinois Trust & Savings Bank, Chicago or at The American Exchange National Bank, New York

Coupon Notes in denominations of $1,000 and $500 with privilege of registration as to principal only

Redeemable at the option of the company as a whole or in multiples of $1,000,000 on 30 days' notice on August 15, 1919, at 102 and interest; on February 15, 1920, at 101½ and interest; on August 15, 1920, at 101 and interest; and on February 15, 1921, at 101½ and interest.

Interest payable, so far as may be lawful, without deduction for Federal income taxes not in excess of 2%, as provided in the trust indenture

ILLINOIS TRUST & SAVINGS BANK, CHICAGO, TRUSTEE

We summarize the following statements from a letter of L. F. Swift, President of the Company:

These notes will be the direct obligation of Swift and Company, one of the largest and most successful concerns engaged in the production and sale of meats and their by-products. The notes are followed by $150,000,000 authorized and issued capital, of which there were at November 2, 1918, 352,744 shares in the Treasury of the Company, leaving $114,725,600 capital stock upon which dividends are being paid at the rate of 8% per annum. The company has earned and paid cash dividends without interruption for the past 33 years.

Net earnings for the year ended November 2, 1918, after interest charges and reserves for federal and foreign taxes, amounted to $21,157,277.44 and for the past five years have averaged nearly $20,000,000. Sales for the past year exceeded $1,200,000,000 as compared with $400,000,000 for 1913.

The trust indenture requires the maintenance of current assets to an aggregate amount equal to at least one and one-half times current liabilities, including these notes, and provides that no new mortgage may be created against present assets and property.

The only other funded debt of the Company is its authorized issue of $50,000,000 First Mortgage Sinking Fund 5% bonds, due 1944, of which $30,926,000 are outstanding.

The Company's statement as of November 2, 1918, showed a valuation of its real estate and improvements of $79,247,567, based on actual appraisal, using values current January 1, 1914 (pre-war prices), and net current assets of $134,483,446.07.

Subscriptions for the notes will be received, subject to allotment, when, as and if issued and received by us, and subject to approval of counsel at

99½ AND INTEREST TO YIELD OVER 6.20 PER CENT

It is expected that the definitive notes will be ready for delivery on or about February 26.

Municipal Bonds Compared With Taxable Securities

Under the New Federal Income Tax Law taxable incomes must pay taxes varying in amount from 2% to 74%. In computing the yields from taxable securities it is necessary to deduct the taxes you will have to pay.

Municipal Bonds Are Exempt from all Federal Income Taxes

No certificate of ownership is necessary in collecting the coupons. The net income received from them is in many cases larger than that received from other taxable investments not so strongly secured.

A wide selection of Municipal Bonds yielding from 4.20% to 6% is contained in our

The purchasers of these bonds will be furnished with a copy of the opinion of the Attorney-General affirming the legality of the issue.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for two per cent. (2%) of the amount bid for, to the order of the Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on a national bank or trust company doing business in this Commonwealth or in the City of New York. Proposals to be enclosed in a sealed envelope addressed to Charles L. Burrill, Treasurer and Receiver-General, and endorsed "Proposals for the purchase of bonds."

All bids will include accrued interest.

The Treasurer reserves the right to reject any or all bids which are not in his opinion advantageous to the interests of the Commonwealth.

CHARLES L. BURRILL
Treasurer and Receiver-General.

Principal and interest payable without deduction for any tax or governmental charge except Inheritance Tax.

The following information is summarized from a letter to the Bankers signed by H. S. Wilcox, Esq., Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Company:

Business The Troy Laundry Machinery Company, Limited, the second largest concern of its kind in the United States, was incorporated in New York State thirty-six years ago. It manufactures and sells laundry machinery and deals in laundry supplies.

Security The Notes are the direct obligation of the Company. The Trust Agreement provides that the Company's properties are free from any mortgage or other lien, and that as long as any of the Notes are outstanding it (a) will not mortgage or pledge any of its fixed assets or suffer any mortgage, lien or other charge to be imposed thereon; (b) will at all times maintain a balance of current assets over and above all current liabilities, as defined in the Trust Agreement, equal to at least 200% of the outstanding Notes; and (c) will annually set aside at least 25% of its net surplus, as defined in the Trust Agreement, to be applied to the purchase or redemption of Notes of the series last maturing, at not more than 102½% and accrued interest. The Company will not issue any other funded obligations until all these Notes have been paid in full.

After giving effect to its recent financing, the Company's net quick assets, based on the balance sheet as of November 30, 1918, will exceed $2,250,000, or 300% of this Note issue.

Earnings Net earnings available for taxes, interest and dividends, after proper reservation for depreciation, for the year ended November 30, 1918, as reported by Messrs. Marwick, Mitchell, Peat & Co., Chartered Accountants, were $410,854.64, or more than seven and three-quarters times the maximum annual interest charges of $52,500 on these Notes. The average net earnings before taxes for the three years 1916, 1917 and 1918 were $311,103.36, or nearly six times the annual interest charges.

Taxes for 1916 were $6,357.34, and for 1917, $57,156.36. The 1918 tax law has not yet been enacted.

Sales have increased from $2,068,995 in 1916 to $3,387,433 in 1918.

CONCESSIONS SPUR BUILDING REVIVAL

Sharp Readjustments Not Generally Considered Permanent, However.

LOCKOUTS ARE DISCOUNTED

What Owners and Architects May Expect in Basic Material Supply and Prices.

Building construction interests in New York and vicinity begin the week with more factors in their favor than they have had at any time since the country went to war.

More building operations were reported for estimates in New York last week than at any time in almost two years. There was a greater volume of basic building materials moved to actual construction work in the city than at any time since the Government demand sloughed off and readjustments in equipment and supplemental building materials were more numerous and more generously in favor of the prospective builder than had been anticipated earlier in the year. There are better prospects for adjustment of labor disputes and one strike was actually settled at or approximately near the former wage scales.

The week opens with a lockout by the Building Trades Employers' Association against the bricklayers and hoisting engineers on four or five jobs, these trades having struck in support of the carpenters, who have been out since Nov. 12. This lockout has been almost entirely discounted by building material manufacturers, distributors, owners, and architects and the volume of materials that has moved to actual construction operations in the last week has been far in excess of that in any week in more than two months.

There is little building construction work in progress, so that a disturbance of this sort is lost sight of in the much greater prospective movement of commodity prices favoring owners.

Leading concessions in the equipment and supplemental building material lines current this week will be found in insulated wire showing a half cent decline, making annunciator base 28¼ cents and weatherproof 23 1-3 cent base. A new and lower price of bare copper wire is expected momentarily. Structural rivets are now $4.40 base for round head and $4.50 for cone, the price that has prevailed, but well informed interests expect further concessions.

The new level is expected to go as low as $3 at least. In the plumbing and supply department an important house has dropped brass fitting prices approximately 10 per cent. The recent drop in tubing prices is expected to have a still further lowering influence.

Plumbers' earthenware prices are subject to heavy sustaining pressure, although strong influences are at work to reduce these somewhat. All manufacturers need business, and in line with other supplemental building material interests a break by one firm will probably be followed by others.

Flush and supply pipe manufacturers have been offering concessions of from 10 to 15 per cent. below the recently printed schedule. Drops of from 15 to 20 per cent. below published lists are expected at any time. The prices in tubes are now 34 cents base on brass and 35 cents on copper I. P. size subject to the usual quantity rebate. Soil pipe manufacturers are as a rule holding firm at current price quotations, and in this department the bottom may be considered as having been reached until Summer.

In the paint and allied departments white and red leads are out of alignment with raw material costs. The manufacturers followed the upward trend of prices, but have taken little notice of the downward trend, answering queries by stating that the labor costs are responsible for present levels. Consumers are awaiting a drop. Linseed oil prices, which were headed downward a week ago, have about-faced for higher levels.

Supplemental building material price movements more closely follow the basic materials in their steadiness. Asbestos and mill board manufacturers are holding prices firmly with indications of a slight advance following the increase on asbestos cement and pipe covering. As a rule, stocks are low and shipments are not coming through as rapidly as desired. A price of 6 cents has been reported on actual offer on lot quantities and 6½ cents in lots not less than 500-pound shipments from Delaware points.

Heavy alteration work in the city and in outlying sections is developing a market for pipe covering that had not been looked for so early in the year.

Basic building material price movements are entirely out of harmony with equipment quotations, according to the Dow Service Daily Building Reports. Floor and wall tile, glazed and unglazed, is just recovering from the fuel embargo and manufacturers are now able to produce in quantities.

Tile quotations are only made on application to contractors but there does not seem to be any prospect for price reduction for some time to come. This is characteristic of most clay products entering into building construction. During the war they had little or no call and in consequence plant depreciation was great and organizations were dissipated.

The only way that recovery can be made is by keeping prices up during the coming year so as to meet the wage scales that cannot now be determined upon until the actual yard and kiln work begins.

For that reason the price of Hudson or Raritan common brick in this market, which was reported to be close to a drop to $13 a thousand instead of the present $15 wholesale level, will remain at the present level or very close to it. More Hudson common brick moved out last week to actual building construction than has been reported since the middle of last September.

Portland cement is most barometrical of the present building material market as to inquiries, shipments and production. Inquiries in December were twice those in November, but inquiries in January were three times those of December, which shows a healthy increase in the trend of all kinds of construction work, road, engineering, and building.

In this section of the country more mills ran in January than in January a year ago, when the country was at war, and some of the larger companies are piling up product for which they believe there will be a great demand later on. Competent judges believe that there was over 10 per cent. more business moved in January this year than in January a year ago despite the fact that there is no Government business now that would require shipments.

Stocks on hand the first of February were less than one week's shipments in normal times over what they were a year ago, while some of the larger companies have had demands upon them necessitating shipments as high as five thousand barrels a day.

In lumber leading dealers in the last few days have received advanced price lists on nearly all the lumber normally carried in stock here, particularly on flooring. There will be no drop in lumber prices before Summer at least.

SHONTS TELLS OF TRAFFIC.

Says Service and Wages Have Been Increased in the Last Year.

A new series of news bulletins, signed by Theodore P. Shonts, appeared yesterday in the subway, on the elevated trains, and in the surface cars. The Subway Sun said that today 80 per cent. more express trains were being run in the subways in rush hours than a year ago, although the travel has increased only 4.8 per cent. In rush hours 640 cars are run, against 530 a year ago, it was said, while in non-rush hours it was asserted that enough cars were being run to seat all passengers, providing they distributed themselves throughout the trains.

The Green Car Traveler said that the present wage rates on the green car lines were 62 per cent. higher than two years ago, amounting to a payroll increase of about 3,250,000 a year. Material and supplies have more than doubled in price, it was said. On the green cars, it was said, the women received the same wages as men.

DROP IN NEW YORK TRADE.

Year's Figures Also Show Smaller Percentage of Country's Total.

According to the annual report of the Chamber of Commerce, made public yesterday, the total foreign commerce for the District of New York during the fiscal year ended June 30 last, including gold and silver and foreign exports, amounted to $4,015,817,226, compared with $4,617,478,454 in 1917 and $3,804,313,452 in 1916. The total foreign commerce of the rest of the country in 1918 was $5,464,362,391, a decrease from the previous year of $249,943,488. The total foreign commerce for the country in the fiscal year 1918 was $9,480,179,617, a decrease of $851,604,707 from 1917. New York's per centum share was 12.36 last year, 44.66 in 1917, and 52.46 in 1916. For the entire country domestic exports exceeded imports by $3,103,632,203, compared with $1,914,588,758 in 1917.

The excess of exports outside the New York district reached $1,677,012,353, compared with $1,133,236,298 in 1917, while in the New York District domestic exports exceeded imports by $1,426,619,850 in 1918 and $1,792,594,134 the year before.

Excluding gold and silver and foreign exports and limiting the exhibit to foreign imports of merchandise and domestic exports of merchandise, the following comparisons appear:

Foreign imports at the District of New York amounted to $1,251,790,373, comparing with $1,694,269,030 at all other districts and with $2,946,159,403 in the United States as a whole. New York's share of the foreign imports of the country was 42.49 per cent., compared with 50.32 per cent. in 1917.

At the District of New York the exports of all articles of domestic merchandise amounted to $2,616,850,680, comparing with $3,311,434,961 at all other districts and with $5,928,285,691 in the whole country. The New York District's share of the domestic merchandise exports of the country was 44.17 per cent., compared with 48.68 per cent. in 1917.

WEST SAVING IN WHEAT.

20,000,000 Bushels Netted by Improved Threshing Methods Last Year

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—More than 20,000,000 bushels of wheat was saved through more careful methods developed by the threshing division of the Federal Food Administration, according to the final report of that division by Captain Kenneth D. Hequembourg. This is the estimated saving in seventeen wheat States. It is contended in the report that this amount of grain would have been lost out of last year's harvests if former methods of threshing had been followed.

The Threshing Division was organized under Captain Hequembourg's direction last Spring. The loss of wheat through hurried and careless operation of threshing machines under old-time methods was estimated at about 3.25 per cent. of the entire crop.

"The Federal Food Administrators," says the document, "report cleaner and more careful threshing operations than ever before. Seventeen States estimate a saving by reason of these activities of over 20,000,000 bushels of wheat. Where shock rows were raked and threshed, an average of three-quarters of a bushel per acre was realized. Tight bottom bundle wagons saved from two to three bushels per team per day. Efficiency blanket machine operating tests indicated that 75 per cent. of the machines visited created a machine waste in the straw pile of less than three-quarters of 1 per cent., and that the threshing of the remaining 25 per cent. created a wasteage of about 2¼ per cent."

PLANS FOR LOAN CAMPAIGN.

Eight Publicity Directors Appointed in Second Reserve District.

Preparations for an energetic publicity campaign for the Fifth Liberty Loan in the eight subdistricts of the Second Federal Reserve District are being made. E. T. Tomlinson, Jr., is director of publicity for the eight districts. His staff will have 8,000 workers when the campaign is in full swing.

Eight Chairmen to direct the publicity campaign in each district have been appointed by Mr. Tomlinson, and they are already at work organizing their staffs. These men will work out plans with the Publicity and Feature Bureau of the Liberty Loan Committee in this city.

One of the new features decided upon is to have in each district from four to six Liberty Loan speakers, who will devote all their time to one district, instead of going from district to district, as has been the custom in previous campaigns. A plan also is proposed for the organization of a women's bureau, the duty of which will be to assign women speakers to the various districts. Among the men who will speak in each district will be returned soldiers. There will be the usual bands and parades.

ASSAILS DRY LEGISLATION.

Baltimore Congressman Calls It "a Monumental Mistake."

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 9.—Representative Charles P. Coady of Baltimore in an interview today called prohibition legislation "a monumental mistake that will be greatly regretted."

"The trouble in Congress is that many of the members do not vote the way they drink," Mr. Coady said. "They have yielded to the threats of a minority of narrow-gauged people who are intent on making other people do as they want them to. Many Congressmen who voted for prohibition like their liquor, but they lack the hardihood to stand up against abuse. I have respect for such persons as honestly believe in prohibition or in any other policy, but I deprecate the fact that many vote one way and drink another.

"Prohibition is an infringement upon the personal liberties of citizens foisted upon the great masses of people through the organized effort of a coterie who insist that they know best what other people should do. It is contrary to the best interests of the people at large and is calculated to work great mischief."

COAL OUTPUT DROPS.

Production of Bituminous Mines Continues to Decline.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The decrease in production of bituminous coal continued during the week ended Feb. 1, when the output declined to the lowest level during the last few years, with the exception of Christmas week of 1918, according to reports furnished to the United States Fuel Administration by the Geological Survey.

The production during the week, including lignite and coal made into coke, is estimated at 8,345,000 net tons, or 893,000 tons below the production of the week ended Jan. 25. The chief cause of decrease was lack of demand.

The production for the coal year to date now totals 494,081,000 net tons, as compared with 460,417,000 tons for the period April 1, 1917, to Feb. 2, 1918.

Anthracite production during the week ended Feb. 1 is estimated at 1,821,000 net tons, a decrease compared with the week preceding of 65,000 tons, but an increase over the production during the same week of last year of 57,000 tons. Total production for the coal year to date is estimated at 82,363,000 net tons, and falls behind production of last year by 1,311,000 tons, or 1.6 per cent.

Laundry Machinery Notes All Sold.

Chandler & Co., Inc., of New York and Philadelphia, and the Central Trust Company of Illinois announce that the issue of $750,000 Troy Laundry Machinery Company, Ltd., serial 7 per cent. sinking fund gold notes recently purchased by them has all been sold. The notes were issued on an average 7.35 per cent. basis.

ADVERTISING IS AN INVESTMENT

THIS morning the head of a great business will scan the security quotations and wonder why the stock of his company sells below par.

We advise that man to analyze carefully his advertising. He may find, as he has sometimes suspected, that it lacks the interrupting idea, the spark of appeal—the desire-creating touch that means greater demand for his product and stronger good will for his business.

When this realization comes to him with full force, we invite him to consult Federal without obligation and learn how his advertising may be made to yield a return that will have great influence in putting the value of his stock "above par."

PROPOSALS.

CITY HALL.
New Orleans, Feb. 3rd, 1919.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by Constitutional Amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon on the 6th day of March, 1919, for the purchase of $600,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by the Act aforementioned, and the constitutional amendment ratifying same, and of the numbers, denominations and maturities of the authorized issue of $2,000,000.00, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue, as prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being No. 8028, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. [illegible], Commission Council Series, approved January 28th, 1919, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $600,000.00 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $600,000.00 in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to the Public Belt Railroad Commission or the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

[illegible] G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS, District of Columbia, February 7, 1919.—Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Secretary of the Board of Commissioners, Room 511, District Building, Washington, D. C., until 2 o'clock P. TRUCKS HOLD STAGE AT SHOW THIS WEEK

Will Be Greatest Exhibit of Commercial Motor Cars Ever Brought Together.

FARM TRACTORS ALSO THERE

Figures Tell Growth of Use and Greatly Increased Production Last Year Despite the War.

Automobile interest this week will be centred chiefly in the value of the motor car as a freight transportation medium. The second stage of New York's automobile show will be opened this evening at 8 o'clock in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, but instead of richly upholstered passenger cars there will be seen the greatest exhibit, both in number and variety, of commercial motor vehicles that has ever been shown together in the United States.

More than sixty different manufacturers will show their particular products, each one presenting from two to half a dozen models, including everything usable in motor trucks from one to six-ton carrying machines, besides a large variety of lighter delivery wagons, ranging from the half-ton to the one-ton type.

In addition to the trucks a number of trailers will be shown, and several farm tractors, including the Fordson tractor, designed by Henry Ford over a year ago to help food production here and abroad. Several thousand of them are now in use in some parts of the United States and in England and France. This will be the first public exhibit of the Fordson tractor in the East. Most of them in use in this country are on the farms of the Middle West, but Mr. Ford is making plans to build them in large quantities in a factory in New Jersey and one near Albany.

Many New Makes Shown.

While no absolutely new models or makes outside of the Essex car were seen in the passenger show last week, the truck show will contain more than a dozen newcomers into the commercial motor car field. Among these will be a ton Oldsmobile delivery wagon made in the same factory as the passenger car of the same name; the Shaw truck, made in Chicago; the Traffic truck, made in St. Louis; the West, a new electric truck, made in this city; the Fulton truck, made at Farmingdale, L. I.; the new Paige truck, made by the builders of the Paige-Detroit car at Detroit, while the builders of the Rainier and the Stewart trucks will display two new models added this season.

The war has shown the importance and value of the motor truck for quick transportation such as was never realized before. American makers sent to the allied countries during the four years of war more than 53,000 motor trucks of various sizes of an aggregate wholesale value of $152,670,000. The United States Army and Navy ordered large quantities. From the time the United States entered the war in April, 1917, to Nov. 11, 1918, when the armistice was signed, these two departments placed orders and contracts for 204,760 motor trucks, of which 90,727 were produced by Dec. 1, 1918, and more than 36,000 were due on uncanceled orders.

The Statistics Branch of the Army General Staff showed on Nov. 11 there had been produced on War Department contracts a total of 83,330 motor trucks, including 55,563 two-wheel drive trucks, 16,934 four-wheel-drive trucks, and 10,893 ambulances. Of these there had been shipped overseas 30,417 two-wheel-drive and 9,420 four-wheel-drive trucks and 6,981 ambulances, a total of 46,818.

What the motor truck industry accomplished for the army will be better appreciated by stating that the whole production of commercial motor vehicles in 1914—the last ante-bellum year—was reported by the Bureau of Census as only 25,375, valued at $45,098,464, or less than half the production of war trucks alone during the year just closed—56,410.

Use Greatly Increased.

In addition to the military trucks there were produced last year 162,646 commercial vehicles for essential civilian use, the majority required by plants engaged on war orders; by farmers, commission merchants, wholesale grocers, and others for hauling farm produce and manufactured foods; by textile mills and clothing factories; by contractors and other industrial and commercial enterprises necessary to the successful conduct of the war or the welfare of the people.

Notwithstanding the curtailed production in 1918, due to the war restrictions, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce reported that the commercial production of the year was 227,250 cars, an increase of practically 100,000 over the preceding year, when the total production was only 128,157. In New York State the use of motor trucks for necessary highway transportation increased by nearly 20,000 in 1918 over 1917, while the gain in New York City was 7,000.

The total number of commercial motor vehicles registered in New York State at the close of 1918 was 75,268, while New York City has about 32,000. The total estimated national production for 1918 is placed at 327,930 by C. C. Hauch, Chief of the Automobile Products Section of the War Industries Board and one of the Directors of the National Chamber of Commerce.

During the show week several meetings of interest to the industry and users of commercial vehicles will be held. The most important will be a convention of motor truck manufacturers opening tomorrow in the rooms of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce at 7 East Forty-second Street. Addresses on different uses of commercial cars and motor truck transportation possibilities will be made by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General James I. Blakeslee, Windsor T. White, Colonel Fred Glover of the Quartermaster's Department, U. S. A.; C. A. Wales, E. J. Mehren, George M. Graham, David C. Fenner, E. J. Herbig, and David Beecroft.

On Thursday night the Motor Truck Association of America will hold a dinner and conference at the Automobile Club of America in West Fifty-fourth Street. The truck show this week will continue through Saturday night, being open every day after tonight in both the Garden and the Armory from 10 o'clock in the morning.

OPPOSE CHANGE IN NAME.

Business Men Protest Against Ypres Square Proposal.

Merchants and business men in the vicinity of Broadway and Thirty-fourth Street oppose the proposal made to the Board of Aldermen a few days ago that the name of Greeley Square be changed to Ypres Square. At the next meeting of the Aldermanic Committee on Public Thoroughfares, which has the matter under consideration, the Broadway Association will oppose any attempt to change the name of the square.

Broadway business men declare that they have suffered for years from a torn-up and wrecked condition of their thoroughfare and that Greeley Square up to quite recently has been a fair sample of what has happened in the war zone, but they say they do not want to be unnecessarily reminded of their recent past.

In opposing the changing of the name of Greeley Square the Broadway Association takes the position that the old and well-established names of streets and public places in Manhattan Island, as well as throughout the city, should not be changed.

Machine Shop For Sale

The property of the undersigned, who has been engaged in the manufacture of 155 Millimeter Common Steel Shell. Offers will be received for the entire property on which there is no mortgage or encumbrance.

This consists of a machine shop and about seven and one-half acres of land located on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, on Clyde Avenue, Buffalo, having a spur track on each side of the building. The land is fenced. The main building is single story, well lighted and in good condition, of stone construction, 80 feet x 300 feet, a stone addition thereto, 30 feet x 200 feet and a frame addition, 88 feet x 304 feet, together with other outbuildings, among which are a restaurant and time and employment office.

This is a modern plant with a low tax rate and cheap electric power. The equipment consists of electric motors and transformers, air compressors, boilers and heating system, high class tool room equipment, office fixtures and furnishings, belting, shafting and hangers, furnaces, lathes, boring mills, drill presses, grinders, pumping and conveyor systems, benches, special machinery, etc., all being in good operating condition.

The property is open to inspection and may be seen by applying at the premises. Any offer made must have the approval of the Ordnance Department before acceptance.

CITY'S NEGRO TROOPS BACK FROM FRANCE

Part of Old Fighting 15th Regiment Among 4,780 Here on Transport France.

WON MANY DECORATIONS

Major L'Esperance Tells of 3d Battalion Getting Two D. S. C.'s and 100 War Crosses.

The steamboat Correction, carrying 800 negroes from Harlem, wen down the bay yesterday morning with the police boat Patrol to welcome the French liner France, which had on board 495 officers and 4,285 men who, with the exception of 378 officers and men, were all negro troops. They comprised the 370th Regiment complete, the Machine Gun Company of the 368th and the 3d Battalion and Machine Gun Company of the 369th Regiment, which was New York's famous fighting 15th.

When the France started from Quarantine the Correction steamed close to the France, and the enthusiastic welcomers on her deck cheered lustily and waved their hats and handkerchiefs to the returning fighters, under the direction of Ferdinand Q. Morton, Third Assistant District Attorney. The Patrol's band greeted the soldiers with "Home, Sweet Home" and popular negro melodies as the happy soldiers of the 369th and 370th Regiments on the deck of the France gave vent to their joy at getting back by dancing cakewalks and so vigorously jumping that the liner seemed to rock from starboard to port with their weight.

As the liner moved into the pier the happy soldiers still wearing their trench helmets leaned over the rail and again cheered their welcomers. The American Red Cross workers were waiting to serve them with hot coffee, cakes, and sandwiches, and the Y. M. C. A. and Salvation Army men and women were there with cigarettes, chocolate, and candies, and bundles of Sunday newspapers. The band played "My Old Kentucky Home," as the first group of the old 15th came down the gangway and lined up on the pier.

The senior officer on the France was Colonel T. A. Roberts, a cavalry officer of the regular army, of Springfield, Ill., who has commanded the 370th Regiment since July. He spoke in the highest terms of his soldiers and officers. "The discipline of the 370th Regiment was excellent," the Colonel continued. "I have been commended for the fighting qualities and general bearing of the men who were actually over the Belgian border when the armistice was signed. One of my battalions was the most advanced unit of the French Army with which we were co-operating at the time." He added that out of 123 officers in the regiment only three were white.

The 3d Battalion of the 369th Regiment was commanded by Major David A. L'Esperance, who has been with the battalion since 1916. He lives at Pelham Manor, N. Y. Major L'Esperance said that the battalion consisted of 986 officers and men, and had won 100 French War Crosses and two Distinguished Service Crosses. He wore the Legion of Honor, in addition to the Croix de Guerre with two palms. In one day's fighting, Sept. 26, his men captured two 77-millimeter guns, twenty-five machine guns, and 125 prisoners. The flag of the regiment was decorated by General le Bouc on Oct 26, who also pinned the decorations on Colonel William Hayward, the commander of the 369th, and five of his officers, including Major L'Esperance.

"Colonel Hayward was perhaps the most popular regimental commander among the American armies in France," Major L'Esperance said, "and shared all the hardships of the campaign with his men. When he was wounded in the ankle last June he insisted on staying with the regiment until the surgeon made him go to one of the base hospitals for rest and treatment. He returned to us in July."

Fought 191 Days Without Letup.

After being two months in a training camp near St. Nazaire the 369th Regiment joined the 161st Division of the French Army, under General Gouraud, and went into action on April 8, 1918, at Main de Massiges, Champagne, and had 191 days' continuous fighting.

"The heaviest fighting," the Major continued, "was on Sept. 26, when we went into action with 20 officers and 700 men in our battalion in the morning, and at the close we had 7 officers and 150 men left. Our boys advanced steadily like seasoned veterans and never lost a foot of ground they had taken or let a prisoner escape. The Germans became so frightened at the appearance of the negro troops toward the finish that as soon as they saw them coming at them with the cold steel they would throw up their hands and yell 'Kamerad.'

"After the fighting on Sept. 26 the regiment went back for five days' rest and was then transferred to the Vosges front with the 7th French Army, where it remained until the armistice was signed. These troops took part in two of the biggest operations of the war, and it was chiefly their efforts that stopped the Germans in July when they found that they could not make any headway against the Americans. In seven days' fighting in the Vosges the old 15th took 4 77-millimeter guns, 250 machine guns, and 400 prisoners.

Adopted French Methods.

"The soldiers fell into the French methods of attacking the enemy as if they had been moulded for it. The French Generals and officers were enthusiastic in their praise of the negroes in action, and at rest camps with their jazz bands, cake walks, and other forms of entertainment they were the riot of the countryside. The 369th Regiment were the first American troops to reach the Rhine at Blodelsheim on Nov. 18 after a hurried march from Thann in Alsace."

Major L'Esperance said that two of his battalion, Private Elmer McCowan of 669 Lenox Avenue and Corporal Elmer Earl, also of New York, had been awarded the D. S. C. for bravery while doing liaison duty on Sept. 26 on the Champagne front. Private McCowan, when told by the Major to relate the incidents of the day replied diffidently that he was just carrying messages from one platoon to another, that was all.

"Were there many bullets flying about?" he was asked.

"Yes, all kinds of them, big and little ones, but the machine-gun bullets were the worst."

"Did any of them hit you?"

"Sure," the soldier replied with a grin.

"How many?"

Gas Mask Shot Away.

"Just three. The first passed through my coat pocket and never touched me, the second one went through the can of coffee I had slung around my neck, and the third just knocked off the gas mask I was carrying on my chest, and that was the worst, because I got a dose of the most powerful stuff I ever smelled in my life just a minute after."

Major L'Esperance said that McCowan's coat was riddled with machine-gun bullets that day, and it seemed as if he had had a charmed life to escape practically unhurt. Corporal Earl was with him in the trenches, and also carried messages under fire, and together they aided wounded men back to the lines under fire.

Corporal Earl, telling how he won the D. S. C. on Sept. 26, said: "We had taken the first line and come to the edge of a swamp, when the enemy machine guns opened a terrific fire. Of fifty-eight men in our platoon only eight were left after the machine-gun attack. Our fellows lay around the field, and I made a number of trips and got about a dozen of them to safety. I then made my way back to the rear, and got a number of first-aid men and took them back with me. All this took about a couple of hours. I am an automatic gun man myself."

The other officers of the old 15th who returned on the France were Captains John R. Outwater, Cummerford McLaughlin, L. E. Shaw, and E. A. Walter, and Lieutenant W. R. Lockhart.

Major Lorillard Spencer, who formerly commanded the 3d Battalion of the 369th, met them at the pier yesterday on crutches. He was severely wounded on Sept. 26, three hours after the fighting commenced, and turned over the command to Major L'Esperance.

North Carolina Brings 1,382.

The United States cruiser North Carolina docked at Pier 1, Hoboken, yesterday morning with 1,382 troops from France, including the 12th Battalion of the 20th United States Engineers, 11th Battalion of the 20th Engineers, Casual Company 469, mostly from Georgia, an air service casual company made up from Camps Kearny and Meade, Casual Company 333 from Pennsylvania, one officer and thirty-nine men of the United States Marines, eighteen casual officers, and twenty casual civilians.

The 850 officers and men of the 20th Engineers, chiefly from the Pacific Coast, were under heavy and continuous shellfire while building a bridge in the Vosges section, and were cited in general orders. Captain William A. Duckham of Pittsburgh, who was in charge of the Marines, told of the fighting they had done at Château-Thierry, Belleau Wood, Soissons, and Champagne, and added that the Marines were now with the Third American Army in Germany. Captain Duckham wears a wound stripe for his injusies at Soissons and the French War Cross with one star. He said the 5th and 6th Regiments of Marines have been decorated three times with the ribbon of the Croix de Guerre for three citations by the French General Staff.

Three American aviators who had recently been released from German prisons returned on the North Carolina. They were Lieut. William H. Pyler of Kersaw, S. C.; Lieut. Clifford McElvain of Albany, N. Y., and Lieut. Zenos Miller of Evanston, Ill.

Another passenger on the North Carolina was Sergeant G. Gallopy, of the Fifth Marines, of 115 Bridge Street, Spring City, Penn. He wears the Croix de Guerre and has been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross. He won the French War Cross and his citation for leading a battalion against a strong German machine gun nest, capturing twenty-five machine guns and hand grenades.

At the Naval Radio Station last night it was said that these transports were in communication and would arrive in this port in the next forty-eight hours, Duca Degli Abruzzi, El Oriente, Santa Barbara, Woonsocket, Metapan, Peerless, and Ancon.

Negro Troops Reach Camp Upton.

CAMP UPTON, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Six heavily laden trains brought 4,088 negro infantrymen and officers into camp tonight. There were six officers and 143 men of the 368th Infantry; the 3d Battalion of the 369th Infantry, which was the old 15th New York, and the medical detachment and machine gun company of the same unit, and 114 officers and 2,843 men of the 370th Infantry. The troops were lined up at the station long enough to be supplied with hot coffee and doughnuts by the welfare workers, and were then marched up to the area formerly occupied by the 367th Infantry, which was trained here and went abroad last June. The work of putting the men through the sanitary process was begun shortly after they had been assigned to their barracks.

Wounded Sailors Arrive at Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Feb. 9.—One hundred and forty-one patients, of which three were marines, the remainder bluejackets coming from many ships which were overseas, naval bases and elsewhere, were landed at the Newport Naval Hospital this morning from the hospital ship Mercy. Twelve of these were stretcher cases, and all came from the Naval Hospital at Brooklyn.

The Mercy sailed for Brest this afternoon.

CALLS BOLSHEVISM INSANE.

Dr. George C. Cox Attacks Doctrine in Y. M. C. A. Address.

Dr. George Clarke Cox, formerly of the faculty of Harvard University and of Dartmouth College, speaking yesterday before the West Side Y. M. C. A. on "Anti-American Influence," attacked Bolshevism, which, he said, was sweeping over the world, "and has led to the insane proposal that the railroad operatives of the country want to get the United States to buy the railroads, pay their wages, and then pay the interest on the bonds if there is any money left.

"The rotten thing about Bolshevism is that it proposes to take one class, not the best but the lowest, and have that class rule. It is the tyranny of the worst. Such insanity this country will not suffer so long as there are Ole Hansons to hit these Bolshevists on the head."

Dr. Cox said that the danger today, greater than Germany ever was, is that a doctrine would be disseminated that would foster the belief that the proper government is the government by the lowest and the least competent class. What he desired was the rule of the "real aristocrats, the men of power."

DR. EATON ATTACKS HERRON

Declares in Pulpit That Country Is in the Hands of a Set of Fools.

Dr. Charles A. Eaton, who preached yesterday at the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, paused in his eulogy of Colonel Roosevelt to attack the appointmen of George Herron, the exponent of free love, as a representative of this country on a mission to treat with the Bolsheviki.

"Today the country is in the hands of a set of fools," he said. "When I think of George Herron as the representative of this country on a great mission I bow my head in shame."

Speaking of the strike in Seattle, he said:

"I know Ole Hanson. He realized at once that this strike was not a labor strike based on grievances. He knew it for what it was intended to be, and he acted. He warned those people that they were still in America. It remains to be seen if the Government is made of mollycoddlers or men."

Asserting that the Government was without program or policy of reconstruche said:

"Thirty years ago we were ruled by money bags. Today we are ruled by wind bags."

Advertising Club and "full Havana filler"!

DOWN at the Advertising Club, on East 25th Street, Robt. Burns is in his element, as it were!

Advertising men are unusually loyal to advertised products—but even so, it is not altogether his "advertising" that makes Robt. Burns so popular at the Advertising Club. For advertising men demand real quality.

That being the case, it isn't at all surprising that mild Robt. Burns, his full Havana filler, "sits in" at most of the luncheon "conferences" held at the Club.

Robt. Burns is sold at leading New York hotels, clubs, cafes and cigar-stands.

Would You Sell Your Teeth?

JUST how large a sum would tempt you? When you think of them in that way, teeth rank as pretty valuable possessions.

Then why expose them to decayed matter that must destroy them?

Washing your face is merely etiquette, but cleaning your teeth is absolutely essential to health—and yet not over 20% of people ever clean teeth properly—and suffer accordingly.

Ask any doctor about the menace of bad teeth to general health.

A great many people, Dentists particularly, think that Mennen's Cream Dentifrice is the safest, the most scientific, the most efficient and the most antiseptic dentifrice ever compounded.

It is safe because it is non-alkaline. An alkaline dentifrice is always harmful and often dangerous, because it checks the flow of saliva, Nature's only agent for destroying the acids of food decay.

Mennen's is scientific and efficient because it cleans and polishes the teeth, and breaks down tartar formations, without scouring and grinding the enamel. It is antiseptic and refreshing because it has a 20% content of alcohol.

It costs 25 cents and the tube is smaller than many dentifrices selling for 25 cents, but Mennen's was made to deliver a result and not to fit a price.

GLASS ASKS NEW LIBERTY LOAN ACT AND WIDE POWER

Wants Authority to Issue Ten Billion More Bonds and Ten Billion in Notes.

TO RAISE INTEREST RATE

FINANCING OF EXPORTS

Would Extend Functions of War Finance Corporation and Aid to Foreign Governments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Asserting that with the cessation of hostilities the forthcoming Victory Liberty Loan in April cannot be successfully floated within the limitations imposed by existing laws, and pointing out what he called the imperative necessity of remedial legislation, Carter Glass, the new Secretary of the Treasury, today appealed to Congress for legislation granting him greater latitude in the exercise of discretion as to the terms of the new Victory Loan than Congress had conferred respecting previous loans.

In a letter to Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Secretary Glass asks for legislation to make possible by a victory loan, in the coming Spring, the funding of the floating debt incurred up to that time, and for other appropriate legislation. He submitted to Chairman Kitchin the draft of a bill setting forth the desired legislation.

Secretary Glass asks authority to increase the authorized issue of bonds from $20,000,000,000 to $25,000,000,000, which would increase the amount of liberty bonds authorized but not issued to $10,000,000,000; removal of the limitation as to interest rate so far as regards bonds maturing not more than ten years from date of issue, authority for an issue not exceeding $10,000,000,000 of interest-bearing, noncirculating notes maturing in from one to five years, authority to issue notes and bonds payable at a premium; the creation of a 2½ per cent. cumulative sinking fund for the retirement of the war debt, continuation of the existing authority for the purchase of obligations of foreign Governments and other important legislation.

Letter from Secretary Glass.

Secretary Glass's letter to Chairman Kitchin reads:

"Washington, D. C., Feb. 10, 1919.

"Dear Mr. Kitchin: Now that the Revenue bill has passed the House, I desire, in accordance with the intimation contained in my letter of Jan. 15 to you and my talk with you and Mr. Fordney, to ask the attention of the Ways and Means Committee to the necessity of the immediate enactment of legislation amending the Liberty bond acts so as to make possible the funding by a Victory Liberty Loan in the Spring of the floating debt which has been incurred and will be incurred up to that time. The Victory Liberty Loan could not be issued successfully, now that hostilities have ceased, within the limitations imposed by existing laws.

"After most careful consideration of the matter and after receiving and considering the views of bankers, Liberty Loan workers and others whose views are most entitled to consideration, very reluctantly I am constrained to say that I cannot wisely determine now in February the terms of the bonds or other obligations which it would be wise to offer for subscription in April, when the Liberty Loan campaign should probably begin.

"At the moment we are in a period of readjustment. To the slackening of industry and commercial activity incident to the termination of active warfare has been added the usual dullness of the Winter season. The necessary and desirable contraction of our credit structure has begun and will be greatly facilitated by the enactment of appropriate legislation to permit the liquidation of claims arising under informal army contracts. Steps have been taken to break the deadlock which had arisen, growing out of the maintenance, nominally at least, of war prices in certain basic industries. Upon the enactment of appropriate legislation to enable the Food Administration to protect the guarantees given by the United States, I am hopeful that it will prove possible to restore the operation of the law of supply and demand with respect to foodstuffs with, as I believe, a consequent reduction in the cost of living.

"A period of rising prices and of intense industrial activity, such as we have experienced during the past four years, is always a period of great apparent prosperity, and a period of falling prices and of the contraction of credits is always a period of depression. American Tank Steamer Sends Out Call for Help

SENATE AGAIN BEATS SUFFRAGE

Amendment Fails of Adoption by One Vote, Tally Being 55 For, 29 Against.

SOUTHERNERS STAND FIRM

Passage Expected by Republican Congress, and Democrats Look Askance at 1920.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—To the bitter disappointment of anxious suffragists who thronged the galleries, the Senate today, by a vote of 55 to 29, again defeated the resolution for the woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution. Despite the urgent cabled appeals of President Wilson, the bulk of Southern Democrats declined to support the measure.

The vote means that all hope of adopting the suffrage resolution in this Congress is gone. Senator Jones of New Mexico, in charge of the resolution, admitted that there was no further chance of putting it through, adding that without doubt the next Republican Congress would adopt it.

After the defeat of the resolution Democrats who had supported it did not hesitate to express their keen disappointment. The refusal of the Southern Democrats to comply with the desire of the President, they felt, would mean that the Democratic Party's hopes at the 1920 election were appreciably hurt. Some went so far as to say that the party could not hope to retrieve itself.

"It means the certain defeat of the Democrats in 1920," said one Democratic leader. "The Republicans will adopt the resolution, and the women of the country will give them full credit for it. The Democrats have perpetrated a stupid trick in defeating the resolution."

The vote came after half an hour of debate. Up to the time of the roll call the suffrage proponents held to the hope that at the last minute enough votes would be won over to adopt it. But on roll call it was found that the Senate stood exactly where it did two months ago, one vote short of the necessary two-thirds of those voting. The vote last December stood 63 to 33.

The Vote in Detail.

Railroads Surveying Labor Conditions With a View to Economic Operation

Following a report yesterday that the department heads of the Pennsylvania Railroad had been ordered to make a survey with a view to determining how many employes could be dismissed without crippling the service, inquiry was made at the office of A. H. Smith, the Regional Director for the Eastern District, to ascertain whether similar action had been taken with regard to the railroads of the East. Mr. Smith's assistant said that such a survey as the Pennsylvania is making would be made in the normal course of business, for the roads had to "cut their garment according to their cloth"; that, if traffic conditions demanded a cut of the operating force, the public would not want the waste and inefficiency incident upon the use of men who were not needed.

P. E. Crowley, Federal Manager of the New York Central Railroad, would not make a formal statement, when asked whether he had ordered such a survey, but he did authorize the following information:

"The New York Central is not making a sweeping survey with a view to wholesale reductions in its force, but it is true that a reorganization is taking place with the object of adjusting the working force to the marked changes that have taken place since the signing of the armistice. This readjustment is not an extraordinary procedure, but is the normal reaction to changes in traffic conditions, and is necessarily made frequently by railroads in the interest of economy and efficiency. Just what the result of the investigation will be is not known. However, although it is certain that some employes will be dropped, it is not likely that there will be many. The situation is complicated by the return of soldiers and sailors, who are being placed in their old positions, thereby making it unnecessary to retain some of those who have been hired in their places. While the pressure on freight has been relieved by the cessation of the war, some of the labor slack caused thereby has been taken up by augmenting the passenger service."

Inquiry at the offices of the Lehigh Valley and other Eastern railroads brought out the fact that "reorganization" is taking place on all the Eastern roads in the interests of economy and efficiency, but it was said in all cases that it was simply being carried out in the normal course of business, and that it was not expected that anything drastic would be done, although there had undoubtedly been a big reduction in business since the end of the war. It was pointed out that on some railroads committees are continually traveling about looking for chances to economize, and, further, that one of the methods being used to secure such economy was to institute in so far as possible the actual eight-hour day and thus eliminate pay for overtime.

BIG NAVY PLAN IS BLOCKED BY HOUSE RULING

Three-Year Plan Called New Legislation and Dropped from Bill.

FIGHT ON TO RESTORE IT

Special Rule Will Be Asked Today — Small Navy Men Attack Wilson's Plea.

IS IT FOR THREAT OR NAVY?

Text of President's Message Not Made Public—Strong Opposition to Acting Now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The group of "Small Navy Men" and opponents to enlargement of the navy until peace is concluded had a temporary victory in the House today when the three-year naval building program in the form advocated by President Wilson was eliminated from the bill by a point of order raised by Representative James R. Mann, Republican leader.

Mr. Mann, a few minutes before final action was expected on this controversial subject, made his point that the paragraph, together with the limitation, authorizing the President to prosecute the building program or abandon in accordance with final action of the Peace Conference, was new legislation, and as such had no place under the House rules in an appropriation bill. His position was sustained by Representative F. J. Garrett, who was in the chair, while the House was sitting in Committee of the Whole.

This sudden and unexpected development, apparently well thought out by the opposition and the small navy adherents, complicated the situation and forced Chairman Padgett into a position where he had to abandon the program advocated by President Wilson, with the modifying clause, or resort to a demand for a radical rule. This he decided to do after the Chair ruled out an amendment offered by him, saying that it fell within the same lines as the original ruling.

After offering a second amendment which eliminated the objectionable clause Mr. Padgett forced the adjournment with the intention of asking the Rules Committee tomorrow for a rule declaring the three-year program and the limitation proviso in order. The bitterest fight of the session undoubtedly will be waged tomorrow either on the rule or on an amendment framed to overcome the objections raised.

For more than two hours the House was regaled with a brilliant parliamentary debate. In brief, Mr. Mann cited precedent after precedent to sustain his contention that the three-year program read in connection with the following paragraphs which authorized the President to prosecute the program or abandon it, in accordance with the final action of the Peace Conference on armament, was new legislation.

An amendment offered by Mr. Padgett to defeat the ruling, provided for an appropriation of $5,000,000 for the building of ten battleships and ten scout cruisers. This contained the limiting clause, and a point of order was sustained against it. Finally, in order to keep the para-

Prince Henry Urges Return to Kaiser and Pre-War Plans

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 10, (via Copenhagen.)—The Hamburger Nachrichten addressed a circular letter to prominent persons connected with the old régime asking certain questions pertaining to the task of the National Convention. Prince Henry of Prussia, who received the letter, replied as follows:

"The National Convention's principal task must be the restoration of the power and dignity of the German Empire as at the beginning of the war.

"Secondly, the restoration and extension of German economic interests as before the war.

"Thirdly, the speedy return of law and order.

"These aims may be reached, firstly, by the restoration of monarchical Kaiserdom under the old dynasty and Prussia's leadership based on the Federal Constitution as historically developed.

"Secondly, by granting extensive parliamentary rights throughout the empire and individual States.

"Thirdly, by the restoration of the old historically legitimized dynasties of the individual States.

"Fourthly, by the speedy elimination of all costly, parasitic Governments, such as the Soldiers' and Workers' Councils which only impede the Government machine, and are subject to mere arbitrariness.

"Fifthly, by the creation of adequate land, sea, and air power by tried and well-known methods and in accordance with geographical position."

Prince Henry stands alone with his hope for the return of the Hohenzollerns or any other dynasties. Other persons, among whom are Admiral von Scheer, General Litzmann, Director General Heinecken, Helfferich, &c., merely advise incessant work, conscientiousness, a strong Government, and the like.

ROUND UP TO OUST ALIEN AGITATORS

54 Due from West Today Are First of Groups to be Deported.

RIGOROUS NEW ACT APPLIED

Undesirables to be Sent to Gothenburg—Caminetti Tells of Vigorous Action.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The two carloads of foreign labor agitators now on the way from the West to New York are to be passed through the immigration clearing house at Ellis Island for deportation to Russia and other countries as soon as ship transportation can be provided for them.

Most of this particular group, it was said here today, were rounded up in Seattle and the immediate vicinity, and more than fifty of them are in the party. There are also some odds and ends of agitators from other parts of the country who are being sent to Ellis Island for deportation.

The orders for their deportation have been signed by Anthony Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration, who has had a number of anarchist cases under consideration for some time. He is acting both under the authority of Section 19 of the immigration law of Feb. 5, 1917, and under the special enactment against anarchists passed by Congress in response to Mr. Caminetti's appeal on Oct. 16, 1918, which vests him with authority to expel from the United States aliens who are members of the anarchistic and similar classes.

More Cases Are Pending.

The movement of these agitators to New York and their deportation will continue for the next five or six weeks. A number of cases are pending for final action, and as soon as the order has been signed in their cases the men involved will be sent to Ellis Island for safe keeping, pending their deportation. Most of those now being sent to New York from Seattle are Russians, but there are some from Scandinavian and Mediterranean countries and several from England.

Some of these cases have been accumulating for several years. While the Government has had clear cases in many instances, the men could not be deported because shipping was not available, or because they came from Austria, Bulgaria, or enemy regions to which they could not be sent during the war.

One of the subjects that gave the officials of the Immigration Bureau great concern during the period preceding the signing of the armistice in November involved the activity of alien anarchists and persons affiliated with organizations, which, while they may not be avowedly anarchistic, spread the propa-

France Wants Sternest Measures to Render Germany Powerless

SEES HER GROWING BOLDER

DIFFERENT AMERICAN PLAN

Would Restore Germany to Normal Industry to Enable Her to Pay Her Bills.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Despite Marshal Foch's recent warning of Germany's potential military strength in April and the comparative weakness of the Allies at that time because of the present demobilization, France neither fears nor expects a resumption of hostilities in the near future. Such a resumption is admitted to be a remote possibility, but so remote as to be practically negligible.

The best proof of this is the fact that, contrary to a wide impression, France has not checked her demobilization in the slightest degree and has no intention of doing so. This does not mean, however, that Foch's warnings are not taken very seriously as something that should find tangible response from the Supreme War Council and the Armistice Commission, fixing terms for renewal of the armistice a week from today.

What France does fear is that what the French call the too easygoing methods of dealing with Germany will embolden that country to come to the Peace Conference later, not as a conquered nation but as an unbeaten country, making vociferous claims for "rights" and "immunities" which France is determined she is not to have.

It is feared, furthermore, that if Germany can have her own way during the armistice period, evading the terms and getting stronger and more confident every day, she will be able to take the next step and get what she demands in the peace treaty. Then, say the French, fighting would be resumed, not in a few weeks or months but in a few years.

Still Claiming Alsace-Lorraine.

Already the Germans are claiming Alsace-Lorraine as their own, which they will never permanently relinquish. Such a claim, said a French Foreign Office member to me today, is one of a thousand signs that Germany must still be considered as an enemy nation, not yet conquered and still full of menace for the future of France.

But the French do not wish to risk serious discontent at home by ceasing to demobilize because of danger across the Rhine. They prefer to get the same results by reversing the process and putting into the new terms of the armistice a rigid provision that Germany shall demobilize.

When fighting ceased, on Nov. 11, Germany had 121 divisions fighting. She is now supposed to have about a hundred under arms. The French would feel safe if Germany could be compelled to reduce these to twenty-five divisions.

There is no objection on the part of America or Great Britain to a large reduction of troops by Germany, but it is not thought sufficient merely to ask or tell her to demobilize. France would enforce the demand, if necessary, by restoring the blockade with all the wartime rigidity, preventing all food or raw materials going in so long as the old and the proposed new terms of the armistice are not complied with to the last letter.

But there is a difference of opinion in Paris as to the wisdom and expediency of such extreme measures. The American tendency is to restore Germany as fast as possible to normal industrial conditions, to enable her to pay her bills. The French fear of future German military activity is not shared by America or England.

France, on the other hand, is in the awkward position of wanting to achieve two big things which in the opinion of the other allies seem to be diametrically opposed, the accomplish-

League of Nations Plan Virtually Complete; Will Go to Full Peace Congress This Week

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The plan for the League of Na[illegible]as virtually completed today by the special commission, headed by [illegible]ident Wilson, which has the matter in charge.

This result was made possible by the report of a special committee clarifying certain passages in ambiguous language in the plan.

This assures consideration of the plan at a plenary session of the Peace Conference this week before President Wilson's departure.

The plan is understood to leave the formation of the permanent international court of justice to the Society of Nations after its organization.

The constitution of the society itself will be written by the representatives of the greater powers now here. Credit for the plan of the organization will be given to the United States.

To President Wilson has been accorded the honor of being designated as the one who shall issue the formal call to the nations of the world to join the Society of Nations after its machinery has been set up by the Peace Conference.

The League Commission is understood to have approved the plan providing that the President shall perform this function, it being considered that the distinction was due him.

This communiqué was issued tonight:

> The seventh meeting of the Commission of the League of Nations was held this morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Hotel de Crillon.
> At this meeting the commission finished its first reading of the draft under discussion. In addition the Drafting Commission, to whom the commission had intrusted the revision of certain articles of the draft, made its report. The meeting adjourned at 1:15 P. M. to resume work at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.
> Though certain of the earlier articles may be subjected to re-examination at tomorrow's session, it is confidently expected that the commission will be able to proceed with the second reading of the draft.

VLADIVOSTOK, Feb. 8, (Canadian Press.)—Reports from Omsk state that the Russian Government there has accepted an offer from Japan of men, money, and arms to settle the Bolshevist difficulty.

This step, it is stated, is due to reports that the Allies are to withdraw their forces from Siberia and also to a fear that the conference at the Princes' Islands will result in recognition of the Bolsheviki.

In return for the aid she is to give, the reports state, Japan will secure an iron and coal concession in the Priamur district.

A Vladivostok report under date of Jan. 27, received by the Canadian Press, said that all parties in Siberia were alarmed over rumors that the allied forces in Siberia would withdaw in the Spring or Summer.

PEKING, Feb. 10.—Although the Cabinet and Diplomatic Commission have advised acceding to the Japanese wishes that the Chinese peace delegates shall act in consonance with those of Japan, President Hsu Chih Chang has not yielded. Instead, he has cabled to Paris an expression of confidence in the Chinese delegates

The Japanese attempt at dominance has caused the delegates of the North and South, who are in conference endeavoring to reach an agreement that will end the civil war, to unite in telegrams of encouragement to the President.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Japan has notified China that China must work in harmony with Japan at the Peace Conference and must undertake not to reveal to the Conference secret Chino-Japanese agreements, according to a Reuter dispatch from Peking dated Feb. 3.

The correspondent says this information comes from Chinese sources, and Reuters says it should be regarded with some reserve.

According to the dispatch, Japan stipulated that failure by China to give such assurances would result in effective Japanese financial pressure on China.

TOKIO, Feb. 9, (Associated Press.)—The Hochi Shimbun and the Nichi Shimbun, in apparently inspired articles, both announce today that the Government has instructed Baron Makino, Foreign Minister and member of the Japanese Peace Mission, to reveal privately to the five great powers the contents of the Chino-Japanese treaties.

BERLIN, Feb. [illegible], (via Copenhagen.)—Six persons were killed and fourteen wounded in shooting affrays in the Schönhauser district yesterday. The Government forces' losses were a few slightly wounded.

Besides a number of secret arms depots and large stores of goods of all kinds stolen from army depots, the Government forces discovered and seized a counterfeiting establishment. Some Secret Service men accompanying the troops noticed four suspicious-looking men leaving a certain house and made them prisoners. Searching the house, they discovered plates, presses, and colors for producing counterfeit fifty-mark notes.

According to the police report, papers were also found proving that the four prisoners were of Polish nationality, and had some connection with General Pilsudski.

Toward evening the rioters tried to shift to the housetops again, but the troops followed them so rapidly and made so many prisoners that this method of guerilla warfare was soon ended.

When retiring through Münzstrasse, the troops were followed by perhaps a thousand desperate persons, who were only kept in check by an occasional threat to use the bayonet. Hardly had the soldiers turned the corner when a window opened and an old man appeared there and chided the mob for creating a disturbance.

"He is not an officer. Let's seize the churl," cried the crowd, and some young fellows fetched the offender from the house. He said he was very ill and annoyed at the disturbances. Nevertheless, he had to apologize to the mob.

On Brunnenstrasse, which resembles the Bowery in New York, some sailors and civilians having sneaked past the marching columns of Government troops, suddenly turned against a detachment of machine gunners and with revolvers and hand grenades sought to compel the surprised soldiers to disarm. When the latter refused, they fired their revolvers and threw their grenades.

One of the rioting sailors was literally torn to pieces by grenades thrown by his own companions, whom the soldiers soon dispersed with their rifle butts.

ZURICH, Feb. 10.—Grave Spartacide disorders broke out in Berlin Saturday evening, according to advices received here.

Soldiers and sailors, commanded by former Chief of Police Eichhorn, are reported to have occupied Alexander Platz, and Government troops opened fire upon them, eight persons being killed and four wounded, it is said. German censorship is withholding details of the trouble.

Resent Press Propaganda as Likely to Prevent Quick Settlement.

CLEMENCEAU TALK CITED

Newspaper Criticism and the Activities of Some French Officials Also Displease.

MUCH HINGES ON ARMISTICE

Satisfactory Agreement on Drastic Proposals May Allay the Present Tension.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Cable and Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The situation in the Peace Conference has reached a pass where some of the plenipotentiaries believe that drastic action is necessary to relieve it.

I am able to say that the American delegation intends to propose that the conference be moved out of France on account of the intensive propaganda here, which is construed as designed to delay the making of peace and obstruct generally the efforts to obtain a settlement that will restore normal conditions throughout the world. The dissatisfaction is such that concealment is no longer thought wise.

It was reported early that the British delegation also held this view, but later it became known that they would not be a party to the proposal to move the conference elsewhere.

The acute cause of this decision on the part of the American delegation, which, of course, means President Wilson, is supposed to be the Clemenceau interview with The Associated Press. The text of this interview was published in the Paris newspapers today.

In addition, the tone of the French press has impressed the American delegation with the idea that a concerted campaign is in progress to hamper action by the Peace Conference that will bring war officially to an end. For this reason, it is held, the conference cannot proceed in a manner free from influences of this character while the sessions take place in France unless there is a radical change in the methods that are being pursued.

No other place has yet been suggested so far as I know for the meeting of the conference.

Whether the proposal to move the place of meeting has been made formally I am not informed, but it would not be surprising if it was brought to the attention of the Supreme Council before this dispatch reaches New York.

Out of the discussions now in progress is likely to arise an agreement which will give the armistice terms the status of a preliminary peace treaty with Germany.

The armistice expires on Feb. 17. The confident belief is expressed that if certain proposals are accepted by the Supreme War Council the existing differences between the Allies will be straightened out. One difficulty arises over proposals for neutralizing both sides of the Rhine and giving Essen over to the Allies' control. There is some objection to this on the ground that subjects settled in the first armistice cannot be included in the new arrangements.

The American delegates do not oppose reducing the German Army to a fixed figure which is under discussion by the War Council or originating other measures to make Germany impotent in a military way, but contend that the terms in this connection should be definite. There is a growing belief that matters will be arranged satisfactorily, thus ending the French war scare and laying a foundation for lifting the German blockade and restoring the world to a normal condition.

These developments late today may allay American indignation over the French press propaganda and cause the abandonment of the proposal to hold sessions of the Peace Conference outside of France.

One difficulty is still unsettled. This is the proposal from the Armistice Commission that unless Germany complies immediately with the allied armistice terms the German Army shall be reduced to a negligible strength and additional territory shall be occupied.

"Certain French Officials" Blamed.

PARIS, Feb. 10, (Associated Press.)—The question of moving the Peace Conference from Paris to a neutral country may be considered by the conference if what is characterized as the obstructive policy of the French press and certain French officials continues, it developed today.

Representatives of various other powers taking part in the Peace Conference, it is stated, believe that the work of the body is being greatly hampered through unfriendly criticism by the French press of various leaders in the conference. They are represented, therefore, as inclined to consider the removal of the conference if the hostile attitude of the French press is maintained.

Should it be deemed necessary to take up the matter, it would be considered at a full meeting of the Peace Conference.

Just what is meant in the dispatch by the "obstructive policy of the French press and certain French officials" is not clear, possibly because there has been difficulty in obtaining full reports of developments in Paris in connection with the Peace Conference.

During the war there was seldom difficulty, despite the serious handicap of the censorship, in getting through news matter from France in reasonable time and plentiful volume, largely over the direct French cable lines. Since the delegates began assembling for the Peace Conference, however, and especially since the real work of the conference started, communication with France has been most uncertain.

Virtually no news has been received over the French cable line; the quickest means of communication, since the conference began. All the cable and wireless services have been greatly congested, but the chief difficulty has been that, although the French cable was nominally in service, there has been complete inability to transmit news matter over it, and that all the cable communication for weeks has been by roundabout routes.

COMMISSIONS TO KEEP BUSY.

Minor Subjects Will Be Taken Up While Wilson Is Away.

PARIS, Feb. 10, (Associated Press.)—Such headway has been made by some of the lesser commissions of the Peace Conference with the plans before them that it is expected that these commissions will be ready to report several important projects to the conference for its action almost immediately after the report of the Commission on the Society of Nations is disposed of.

The conference itself, while it appears likely to drop into a more leisurely pace after the departure of President Wilson and Premier Orlando of Italy and in the absence of Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain, who has already left Paris, plans to undertake the discussion of some of these topics. Interesting debates are expected to follow, occupying the time of the conference profitably during the comparatively brief absence of those leaders.

The Committee on Reparation held a session today, and this bulletin was issued tonight regarding it:

> The Committee on Reparation met this morning at the Ministry of Finance, with M. Klotz in the chair. After naming the members of the different sub-committees, the committee began the discussion of the principles upon which rest the right to reparation, and the examining of the memoranda submitted by the different delegations.
> William H. Hughes (Premier of Australia) set forth the considerations upon which the British memorandum was based.

The Commission on Ports, Waterways, and Railways also met today. This bulletin was issued:

> The Commission on the International Régime of Ports, Waterways, and Railways held its second meeting at the Ministry of Public Works today at 3 o'clock, under the Chairmanship of M. Crespi.
> Two proposals were presented to the commission. The first, presented by the British delegation, relates to the freedom of interior transit, and the second, presented by the French delegation, relates to a study of the questions involved in the international régime of ports, waterways, and railways, as well as the rivers and railroads to which this régime should be applied.
> After an exchange of views among the members of the commission, it was decided to appoint two small committees, one consisting of nine members, of which five should represent the great powers and four the minor powers, to study questions relative to the application of the international régime of ports, waterways, and railways; the second, consisting of ten members, five from the great powers and five from the minor powers, to study the relation of general questions.
> The second of these committees will hold its first meetings on Thursday, Feb. 13, at 3 o'clock.

If the Commission on Credentials ever begins to function some stirring developments are expected to follow.

The commission has not met thus far, even to organize, the conference having got along entirely without the right of any of the delegates to their seats being challenged, which is probably without precedent in the history of such international gatherings, it being recalled that the famous Westphalian Congress of 1647 spent the better part of a year in verifying the credentials of its members.

The usual course at these assemblages is for the delegates to present credentials as soon as they gather, any one of them being privileged to make objection to the credentials of another if he find ground to do so. It was stated, however, that the Committee on Credentials of the present conference would conduct any investigation found necessary of the sufficiency of the papers brought by each delegate, and that it would await the arrival of all the delegates before undertaking the work.

The delegates have been coming along in single file ever since the opening of the conference, and it has not been thought proper to begin the examination of the documents. Rumors, however, have been current recently that there was another reason for the delay—the apprehension on the part of the directing forces of the conference that objections would be immediately lodged against the presence of some persons who have already occupied seats in the conference and who, it is said, are not proper representatives of their Governments or are accredited by organizations that have no existence as Governments.

Leading members of the conference, who express confidence that these persons have a proper status in the body, have sanctioned their presence and have even admitted some of them to membership in the principal commissions, and it is understood that the conference leaders do not wish to have an issue raised now in this connection that might result in bad feeling and interfere with the smooth progress of the peace-making work.

"TIGER'S" FRANKNESS PLEASES

Figaro Praises Clemenceau's "Vigorous and Hardy Pessimism."

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Commenting on the interview given by Premier Clemenceau to The Associated Press, which occupies the place of honor in all the Paris newspapers today, Alfred Capus in the Figaro says:

"With its vigorous and hardy pessimism, it is an act of ardent patriotism. It is just the plain language which it is fitting to talk to France and her allies at the present moment. France should be made to recall that her enemy wished for fifty years to cripple her, and has not given up that design. The Allies must be told that the victory bought with so much blood and sacrifice will remain a precarious one if they do not know how to complete it. Finally, Germany must be shown that she can no longer deceive us and that it is our firm intention to make peace, also, to the finish.'

"Premier Clemenceau has never been more lucid or stronger than in these declarations, which will have a considerable effect."

CLEMENCEAU AIMING AT US?

London Paper Thinks He May Be Warning Against Generosity to Foe.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Feb. 11. — The Chronicle, commenting on The Associated Press interview with Clemenceau, says:

"It shows how absolutely the octogenarian statesman has realized the danger of relying upon the Hun's broken word, but some people will regard the utterance as a winged arrow intended for America.

"It is popularly supposed that Mr. Wilson is on the side of moderation, as against any seeming demonstration of an imperialistic spirit. On the other hand, Clemenceau is a most strenuous advocate of the fortiter in re, or the strong hand, in dealing with the enemy. Hence it may be assumed that the French Premier was anxious to inform public opinion in America before the arrival of the President of the dangers of too generous treatment of the foe."

ENGLAND MODIFIES EMBARGO ON SHOES

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The British Import Restriction Control Board has modified the proposed embargo be re-imposed on March 1, to allow the importation of American boots and shoes to the extent of 25 per cent. of the number imported in 1913.

This announcement virtually nullifies the efforts of the joint conference of importers and British manufacturers, which has been attempting to agree upon some modified plan of the import restrictions which would prove agreeable to both sides and which the British Government would accept.

TAFT BESPEAKS BACKING FOR WILSON

League of Nations Necessary, He Says, to Bring Permanent Peace.

PUTS WORLD COURT FIRST

Foresees Many Questions for Its Decision—President Lowell Speaks at Chicago Meeting.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—An appeal to American citizens to unite in support of President Wilson in his fight for a League of Nations was made today by prominent speakers at the opening session of the Great Lakes Congress of the League to Enforce Peace. The opinion was expressed that the proposed league should be based upon a constructive peace, justice, and sound principles.

William H. Taft, the principal speaker at the evening session, said that the defeat of Germany would not bring permanent peace without a League of Nations treaty, and that the many questions and disputes that would grow out of enforcing this treaty would have to be interpreted by an impartial international court.

Mr. Taft described the necessary machinery as follows:

First, we will have the international court; second, the council of conciliation; third, the agreement for organizing economic powers and military force if need be, and, fourth and finally, the congress of powers.

"All that this league proposes is that every nation shall enjoy complete sovereignty within the limitations of international law.

"Let us support any real League of Nations that is brought back, even if it does not give us all we desire, so that it will have fair consideration on its merits, so that we can discuss its provisions, not in a nagging, critical, unfair way, but with a constructive spirit, with team work for all to go on and realize what should be the glorious fruits of this war."

Dr. Henry van Dyke, former American Minister to the Netherlands, said that the League of Nations plan, far from abandoning the Monroe Doctrine, proposed to extend its application, not only to America, but everywhere.

Before Germany could become a member, Dr. van Dyke said, she must first repent and prove her repentance by works of restitution and reparation, and must tinstitute a Government directly responsible to the people, and "free alike from convicted liars and bloody Bolsheviki."

Other speakers were Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University; Dr. George Grafton Wilson of Harvard University; Oliver Wilson, Master of the National Grange, and Edward A. Filene, Director of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. The congress will close tomorrow.

POLES TAKE 3 TOWNS FROM GERMAN TROOPS

Chief Railroad Route From Fortress of Thorn to Berlin Reported to be Threatened.

BERLIN, Feb. 9, (Associated Press.)—The situation at Bromberg is rapidly growing worse, the correspondent of the Tägliche Rundschau telegraphs from the German-Polish front. The German troops there are said to be engaging in politics instead of in warfare.

The Poles have won new successes, the correspondent reports, having captured within one day the towns of Schubin, Netzwalde, and Gruenthal station. The town of Nakel was being bombarded by the Poles when the correspondent's dispatch was filed.

He declares that unless reinforcements for the Germans arrive promptly the chief railroad route from Thorn to Berlin will be interrupted. The border defenses, he reports, are proving wholly inadequate.

PADEREWSKI HARD WORKER.

Toils 18 to 20 Hours a Day as Polish Premier and Foreign Minister.

WARSAW, Feb. 9, (Associated Press.)—Poland has reached the first rung in the ladder of freedom and her prosperity is much nearer than her enemies would have the world believe, Ignace Jan Paderewski, the Premier and Foreign Minister, said in a statement today. He pointed to the result of the elections and the fact that the elections were conducted peaceably as proof of the union of all parties and added:

"One of the first of our needs is the opening of the Port of Danzig so that we will be able to bring in products to lower the terrific cost of living. To bring in products would automatically decrease the cost in local markets."

Premier Paderewski is bearing up well under the tremendous strain of the last two months. He lives at the Hotel Bristol, of which he is part owner, with Mme. Paderewski. There is always a guard of soldiers at the door, but the Paderewski suite is besieged daily by delegations wishing to express their admiration for M. Paderewski.

The Premier spends very little time at the Ministry of Foregn Affars, but works eighteen to twenty hours a day at the Hotel Bristol. He seldom gets to bed much before 5 o'clock in the morning. M. Paderewski reads and signs virtually every document of importance relating to the Polish Government, but he carries the burden cheerfully, saying: "The work has got to be done."

EISNER FLAYS BOLSHEVISM.

Proletarian Dictatorship Worse Than Capitalism, He Says.

BERNE, Feb. 10.—Kurt Eisner, the Bavarian Premier, who has been charged in several quarters with sympathizing with the Bolsheviki, made plain his position on this question yesterday by declaring himself strongly against Bolshevism.

"Bolshevism is the most terrible insanity of our time," said Herr Eisner in addressing a meeting of Berne students. "The Bolshevist idea is to replace the present régime by the dictatorship of the proletariat, which is much worse than capitalism."

ARMISTICE VIEWS CLASH

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

On one side is the French insistence that Germany shall pay the last franc that can be got out of her for the damage she has caused. The other desire is to make Germany impotent industrially and in every other way that is necessary to keep her impotent for all future time in a military way.

France seems to think it is necessary, and hence desires to prevent all supplies going to Germany and compel her to disband her armies.

These differences are to be thrashed out by the Allies within the next seven days. The outlook now is that France will adopt the view that her enemy must be kept going, to pay the bills if for no other reason.

WAR COUNCIL DEBATES ARMISTICE CHANGES

Klotz Reads German Document Telling How Foe Plotted to Ruin French Industry.

PARIS, Feb. 10. (Associated Press.)—The Supreme War Council, in which Marshal Foch and other military commanders sit with the council of the great powers, continued today the discussion of the conditions for the renewing of the German armistice, but reached no decision.

Discussion of the armistice took a wide range, including the German failure to execute some clauses of the previous armistice, the blockade, and the use of enemy merchant shipping. But the main issue turned on a series of proposals of a rather drastic nature, designed to place the enemy beyond the possibility of rearming and renewing the conflict.

From the French standpoint the menace of such a renewal is not past, and it is urged as a matter of foresight that suitable safeguards should be established. What these safeguards are has not been disclosed, but it is generally understood that they include the limitation of the production of field and heavy guns, and an exact accounting of heavy guns now on hand, also some limitation of the military organization which is to be of police service.

While some of the military commanders take the view that radical measures are needed to assure the Allies, particularly France, against a possibility of renewed peril, other views tend to place reliance on economic measures as the best means of averting any renewal of enemy activity.

Besides the discussion of the armistice terms, M. Klotz, French Minister of Finance, presented documents of the German General Staff, showing a systematic plan to destroy French industry, not only as a military measure, but as a means to promote German industrial interests. These documents were referred to the new Economic Council. Discussion of the armistice terms will be continued tomorrow.

This communiqué was issued after the council session today:

> A meeting of the Supreme War Council was held this afternoon from 3 to 5:30 o'clock at the Quai d'Orsay.
> The conditions of the renewal of the armistice were first discussed. M. Klotz, French Minister of Finance, then described the work, published in 1916, of the German great General Staff, proving the premeditated and systematic character of the destruction of French industry. He gave a detailed analysis of this work, which it was decided to refer to the Economic Committee.
> The next meeting will take place tomorrow at 3 o'clock. The Belgian delegates will first be heard.

TAKE SERIOUS VIEW OF GERMAN DESIGNS

Military Men in Paris Say She Is Not Demobilizing and Still Has Great War Power.

LONDON, Feb. 10, (British Wireless Service.)—British newspapers of all shades of opinion are devoting serious attention to the attitude adopted by the German Government toward the armistice conditions.

The Paris correspondent of The Daily News sends a dispatch from an "authoritative source," in which he says that his informant told him that he had the best reason to believe that Germany was not continuing to demobilize.

"She has now concentrated more than eighteen divisions under von Hindenburg on the western front," the correspondent quotes his informant as saying. "We also have the best reasons to believe that Germany is keeping her troops under arms on the pretext of economic necessity. Some of the military authorities think that Germany has sought more material to give necessary armament to 3,000,000 men. German demobilization is a condition to our demobilization, and, therefore, disbandment is impossible so long as Germany does not continue to demobilize.

"Allied military authorities consider that the time has now arrived for Germany to give up her military strength—that she be brought to such a condition that she cannot resist later the conditions of peace now being prepared. The Allied theory always has been that we shall frame conditions which Germany will have to accept, and that there is nothing to discuss, except as regards details.

"For this reason, Germany is trying to keep up her military strength so that she can send a delegate to the Peace Congress for a thorough military discussion of the peace conditions imposed. On this point the French National Socialist Party and its extreme left wing is strongly opposed to anything being done to save Germany from the consequences of defeat. In this matter the French Government will be supported by the entire nation."

The correspondent says that he has been informed by a competent British authority that Marshal Foch "made a declaration of a somewhat serious character at a meeting of the Supreme War Council."

"He feels," this authority is quoted as saying, "that the Germans are beginning to forget that they are beaten. They are apt to forget that we are in a state of war. They have been slow in handing over transport and other things. They are causing a great deal of difficulty.

"'We are demobilizing fast; they are not continuing to demobilize. There is danger of Germany saying, 'We do not care anything about your League of Nations, and we have got our troops.' Unless a change takes place, we might be faced with a situation in which Germany, as regards the number of men in the field, will have three men as against the Allies two.

"The question of demobilization has been taken up by the Supreme War Council. All the technical advisers have certainly been in favor of taking what additional measures may be necessary to prevent any danger to the Allies or their positions or any danger of their being able to dictate what peace terms they please."

The Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail credits Marshal Foch as having said to the Supreme War Council that there were many instances of Germany's failure to comply with the armistice terms, notably in the handing over of artillery, submarines, and agricultural machinery.

"As evidence of the German spirit," the correspondent continued, "Marshal Foch mentioned an occasion when he summoned a German commission to meet him and they failed to appear at the time and place indicated. It was only after strong pressure on his part that the meeting eventually took place.

"According to Marshal Foch's estimate the Germans are now capable of placing an army of 3,000,000 in the field in two months' time."

The correspondent adds:

"It is desired to make a renewal of the war impossible under the conditions laid down on Feb. 17. The terms suggested include the handing over of the whole of the German artillery, compulsory reduction of the German Army to twenty-five divisions, with machine guns for the internal policing of the empire, and occupation by the Allies of the Ruhr district, which includes Essen.

"During an important debate on these proposals the further suggestion was made that in view of Germany's attitude the Allies should also revert to the initial demand for the handing over of the transport, which was modified on account of Germany's plea of impossibility."

Under the terms of the armistice as amended in December the allied high command reserved the right, if it thought wise, to occupy the neutral zone on the right bank of the Rhine from north of the bridgehead of Cologne to the Dutch frontier. Occupation of this zone by the allied forces would give them control of a strip of territory about 43 miles long, running roughly in a northwesterly direction, and 6.2 miles wide. The eastern border of this zone is barely five miles from Essen, the great steel centre.

An extension of the occupation area to include Essen and the Valley of the Ruhr River would give the Allies a strangle grip on German industry, since it would give them a large measure of control over the Westphalian coal region, which produces 90 per cent. of the fuel of Germany, being one of the greatest coal areas in the world.

FOR JEWISH COMMONWEALTH.

Definite Proposal Is Presented to Conference by Zionists.

PARIS, Feb. 10, (Associated Press.)—A definite proposal was filed before the Peace Conference today favoring the eventual formation of a Jewish Commonwealth in Palestine on the lines already suggested by the American Jewish congress.

The document was signed by representatives of the World Zionist organization, the Zionist organization of America, and the Zionist organization of Russia on behalf of the Jews in Palestine.

In Pairs now and on their way to Palestine for work with the Zionist Commission are Dr. Harry Friedenwald of Baltimore, Robert H. Old of Washington, Louis Robinson of New York, Rudolph Sonnenborn of Baltimore, and Dr. Rubinow of New York. Dr. Rubinow is Director of the Zionist Medical Union.

The question of the disposition of Syria will probably come before the Supreme Council again tomorrow, when France's position will be more clearly outlined. France does not regard her treaty with England made at the beginning of the war with relation to Syria as effective until it has been definitely passed on by the Society of Nations. In fact, France does not regard any treaties entered into by the interested powers during the war as binding or void until the Society of Nations takes definite action thereon.

The suggestion that in consideration of being granted a mandatory over Togoland and Kamerun France would relinquish her claims in Syria has apparently been made without authority of the French Government.

SEES CRUSHING TAX FACING GERMANY

Finance Minister Suedekum Says State May Take Major Part of Incomes.

TELLS OF FEAR AT WEIMAR

War Minister Predicts Conscription to Raise Army for Eastern Defense.

BERLIN, Feb. 8, (Associated Press.)—The Weimar correspondent of the Lokal-Anzeiger reports that Prussian Minister of Finance Suedekum, in a discussion with the financial Ministers of the Federated States, painted an extremely gloomy economic future for Germany.

Herr Suedekum is reported to have said that Germany would be obliged to have assistance, that a state of bankruptcy was imminent, and that affairs might reach the stage where each individual would be compelled to give up the major share of his income to the State, being permitted to retain only enough to cover most urgent needs.

WEIMAR, Feb. 9, (Associated Press.)—At a meeting of representatives of all the political factions here yesterday Minister of War Reinhardt discussed the problem of sending troops to the German eastern frontier. He said that voluntary recruiting was not efficient for the purpose and predicted that conscription would be necessary in order to raise adequate forces.

Herr Reinhardt said that it was necessary to impress upon the youth of Germany the fact that the whole future of the nation was unsettled so long as insecure conditions prevailed on the frontier, and that for the moment the young men of the Fatherland were under obligation to fight for it.

The Poles, he argued, were assuming a grave responsibility, "in preventing the Germans from devoting their effort to beating off the Bolsheviki," and Poland would be better employed, if she were guarding her Eastern frontier against the Russian menace rather than invading German territory.

The political factions here are said to be a unit in favor of authorizing the Government to adopt such measures as are necessary to safeguard the inviolability of German territory.

HINDENBURG FACED SURRENDER OR TRUCE

Fehrenbach Tells of Marshal's Admission on Nov. 10—Bethmann Renews Inquiry Offer.

BERLIN, Feb. 9, (Associated Press.)—Field Marshal von Hindenburg, in urging last November that the armistice terms of the Allies be accepted, admitted that the German Army would otherwise be forced to surrender, according to a statement made by Konstantin Fehrenbach, Vice President of the National Assembly at Weimar.

Herr Fehrenbach said that he was present on Nov. 10 at a meeting in the Chancellery at which, after Dr. Solf, the Foreign Secretary, had read the terms of the armistice, a telegram from Field Marshal von Hindenburg was read, in which the German commander requested that the armistice conditions be accepted forthwith, as he could not hold his army together any longer. The army was already deserting him, the Field Marshal declared, and if the allied conditions were not accepted he would be forced to capitulate with his entire forces.

Dr. Theobald von Bethmann Hollweg, German Imperial Chancellor at the outbreak of the war, reiterates his willingness to go before an impartial tribunal for the purpose of accounting for his stewardship of Germany's foreign policy, in a communication to the Kreuz-Zeitung.

The former Chancellor's letter, which repeats utterances made by him last November, makes the condition that both parties submit complete records. He also takes it for granted that a neutral tribunal should hear his case and base its decision on his constitutional responsibility for the political acts of the former Emperor.

TELL OF RUIN OF LENS MINES

American Engineers Say Germans Wrecked Collieries Systematically.

At a meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, held last night at the Engineering Societies Building, delegates from these societies made their preliminary report upon conditions in France. A description of the condition in which the Germans left the Lens coal mines was given by E. G. Spilsbury. The requirements of the French for agricultural rehabilitation were outlined by George W. Fuller, and the need of improved technical education was emphasized by Dr. George F. Swayne. George W. Tillson spoke on the condition of the highways and L. B. Stilwell on hydroelectric power.

After giving a general idea of the sixty mines at Lens before the war, Mr. Spilsbury said that nothing remained of them but twisted masses of steel. He added that the Germans were exceedingly thorough in their method of destruction.

"They cut through the steel supports with the oxyacetylene torch, and then pulled down the whole structure. Of the electric motors and generators there is no trace. The shafts they flooded by ditches leading from the Somme Canal.

"The companies owning the works have already made their plans and specifications for rebuilding. The orders for material are being filled in Switzerland and Southern France, and the first deliveries are expected to be made in March or April. It is estimated that it will take 30,000 horse power for a year and a half to pump the water out of the mines, and they will begin to take coal out of the upper seams in about a year. The task of clearing away the wreckage is perilous, because the Germans connected the débris with unexploded bombs and hand grenades.

"One thing evident is that the French are not waiting, but are active in reconstruction work. They are not using foreign engineers, but are doing all the work themselves."

Mr. Fuller said that nothing was being done to rehabilitate the land, and pointed out that there were many obstacles such as the stress upon transportation facilities, the delay in demobilization, the difficulty in borrowing funds, and the peculiar political conditions.

Dr. Swayne explained that the delegates were invited to come to France by the Congress of French Engineers, which was convened in Paris last March. He said the French wanted whatever help they could get from America in rehabilitating their country, and the problems considered by the American engineers were those affecting ports, navigable waterways, roads, agriculture, water power, and technical education.

CECIL DISINCLINED TO BE ENVOY HERE

Personal Reasons in the Way of Absenting Himself From England Now.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Lord Robert Cecil, British representative on the League of Nations Commission, is still considering the question whether he will accept the appointment as British Ambassador at Washington, which has been offered him.

It is understood that he is not inclined to take the post. Personal reasons, it is said, stand in the way of his absenting himself from England.

Lord Robert Cecil, the third son of the late Marquis of Salisbury and for several years that famous statesman's private secretary, was made Minister of Blockade in 1916 at a time when the differences between the neutrals, led by the United States, and the British Empire in regard to blockade, contraband, search, confiscation, &c., had reached an acute stage. His administration, good-humoredly fortified by precedents which this country itself had created, served to clear the air.

Nor was this the first time that he had poured oil on the rising waters between England and America. In the Cleveland Administration, when the Venezuelan affair threatened strained relations between Washington and London, Lord Robert, fully cognizant of the American point of view as imparted to him by Henry Norman, had advised his father to "fo slowly and make a merit of necessity by yielding with grace," advice which the old peer studiously observed.

During the war Lord Robert's interpretation of the American policy—both officially and unofficially expressed—almost caused him to be regarded as an unaccredited American representative at 10 Downing Street.

Early in 1917 he adroitly paved the way for Europe to understand just why the United States should break with Germany. He praised the work of Hoover and his associates, often took issue with the German Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Bethmann Hollweg, when the latter complained of the moral support this country was giving the Entente, clarified the notes and messages of President Wilson, and, when Congress declared war, he became an out-and-out advocate of the President's idealism and an expounder of the practical machinery he saw working behind it. The Allies, he said in August, 1917, stood by the President's reply to the Pope—"It could not be improved."

In regard to the League of Nations Lord Robert has followed the lead of the President rather than those of British statesmen—rather than the definite proposals of General Smuts. He differs from the President in regard to the latter's views, as so far put into action, in regard to intervention in Russia—he believes in disinterested intervention in force—and, he has faith in Japan.

CHINA UNITING AGAINST JAPAN

to bear on Peking with a view to silencing the Chinese Peace Delegates in Paris. The following cablegram, signed by Lee To, Chairman of the Chinese Association, was sent to President Wilson:

"We, Chinese citizens, residing in New York, in a meeting assembled today, pray that the Far Eastern question be settled in terms of American policy as expressed in your Fourteen Points. We further pray the fundamental revision of the Chino-Japanese treaties of 1915, so that China may be able to develop along proper national lines."

A second cablegram was dispatched to the Chinese Peace Delegates in Paris, as follows:

"We consider a settlement of the Far Eastern question in terms of American policy as expressed in President Wilson's Fourteen Points vital for the development of China along proper national lines. To secure this the fundamental revision of the Chino-Japanese treaties of 1915 is imperative."

A third message was addressed to the President Hsu Shih Chang of China. It read:

"We beg that you will support our Peace Delegates in Paris and not yield to Japanese demands."

A special cablegram to THE NEW YORK TIMES from Peking on Feb. 5 said that Tokio's efforts to control the Chinese peace delegation had been advanced another stage by Minister Obata, the Japanese Minister to China, who had informed the Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs that if China chose to regard Japan's wishes in the matter the unpaid balance of 17,000,000 taels of the loan of 20,000,000 signed by Tuan Chi-Jui last September for the War Participation Bureau would be handed over. On the other hand, if China continued recalcitrant Japan would cancel the loan and demand repayment of the 3,000,000 taels already advanced.

It was added that, the exchequer being empty, the Government would probably end by complying with Japan's demands, unless money could be procured from other sources.

GERMANS CONTINUE TO ROB.

Outdo Reds as Bandits in Retiring from East Front Villages.

WARSAW, Feb. 9, (Associated Press.)—Bolshevist leaders in Lithuania are attempting to make their men behave circumspectly, but, according to reports reaching here, they are not having an easy task.

A band of 500 Bolsheviki operating in Novgorod reported to the leaders that the inhabitants were hostile, and that difficulties were in sight. The leaders of the band in Novgorod have posted notices that there would be no pillaging if food was given to the Bolsheviki, though when they first arrived they stole money and other valuables from homes. The Bolsheviki went to the servants in the town and tried to persuade them to quit work. The servants are said to have replied that they had to work to eat, and, when the Bolsheviki laughed at them, said that it was stealing to get food as the Bolsheviki did.

BOLSHEVIKI DEFEATED ON TWO BATTLEFRONTS

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 10.—The Lithuanians have arrested the Bolshevist advance on the Lithuanian front, according to news received by the Lettish Bureau in Berlin. The town of Ponievesk, north of Kovno, has been taken by the Lithuanians.

Kiev, the capital of Ukraine, is again in the hands of Ukrainian forces, according to reports reaching here through Berlin.

Dispatches from Warsaw dated Jan. 31 announced that Kiev had been taken by the Bolshevist troops, a portion of the troops of General Petlura, the head of the Ukrainian peasant Government, having gone over to the Bolsheviki. The seat of the Ukrainian Government, the message added, had been moved from Kiev to Winnitza, to the southwest. Kiev has changed hands several times since the Germans withdrew from the Ukraine.

SEES FREE ELECTION RUSSIA'S FIRST NEED

APPEALS FOR WAR ORPHANS

Grandmother of Revolution Raises $10,939 in Lecture at Carnegie Hall.

As many Russian sympathizers as could crowd themselves into Carnegie Hall last night paid a tribute to Catherine Breshkovskaya, "Grandmother of the Russian Revolution." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Civic Forum and the Friends of Russian Freedom, and $10,939 was contributed for the Russian orphans in whose interest Mme. Breshkovskaya is now in America.

From the moment when Robert Erskine Ely, who presided, first mentioned her name the occasion was a series of triumphs for the white-haired woman whose half-century of struggle for the Russian people is so well known to Americans. When Count Ilya Tolstoi bent low over her hand, when George Kennan, writer on Russian topics, kissed her on the lips American fashion; when Alice Stone Blackwell, her biographer, spoke her praises, "Babushka" was time and again shown the love and respect in which the gathering held her.

She spoke in a quaint English, and in the advance text of her address, translated from her own Russian version, to the general theme of which she held, she painted a vivid and appealing picture of Russian sufferings, and continued:

"Our greatest, deepest, most immediate need is the creation of conditions under which the Russian people will be able to convoke an All-Russian Constituent Assembly. Russia will never be quiet and satisfied until her representatives, freely chosen by the entire population, will establish a Constitution for the State, will lay the foundation for a stable, democratic Government, insuring laws that accord with the will and desires of the Russian people. The demand for a Constituent Assembly was one of the main aspirations of the Russian revolution. It was on the eve of its realization when the Bolshevist revolt, in November, 1917, tore out of the hands of the people the beautiful possibility to make laws for themselves, to trace the path for their future, to construct a new life in accordance with the interests of the masses, to strengthen peace and insure the common welfare. The Constituent Assembly, elected by the entire Russian people on the basis of universal, direct, equal, and secret suffrage, was dispersed by the Bolsheviki with bayonets.

"A year ago our allies, together with the devoted and proved friends of the Russian people, could have created the conditions necessary for the convocation of a Constituent Assembly. The opportunity was lost, and our masses, simple-minded, naive, and credulous, tired out by their past misfortunes, became a prey to the base and rapacious instincts of selfish, ambitious, and merciless people. Under the circumstances, Russia faces a long and cruel struggle with all the evil which has entered her life. She has to suffer all the pains inevitable in the conditions of a people clearing its way to a better future. Many opposing forces bar this way; they check the normal course of events and make the people suffer and suffer more in their struggle to get the right issue out of the insurmountable chaos.

"There is no doubt that Russia will be able to find the right path, but her pains, her bloody sufferings, will be known only to the millions of Russian mothers and the millions of our other innocent martyrs, our orphans. Flooded with tears and blood, Russia moans and cries out to the world. She is a living body, and her tortures cannot be looked upon cold-bloodedly as an extraordinary, never-before-witnessed experiment in social evolution. She is alive, and every pore of her body is shedding blood."

For two autographed copies of Alice Stone Blackwell's book, "The Life and Letters of Catherine Breshkovsky," William G. Willcox paid $1,000 each, and Paul M. Warburg bought a copy at $1,000, and Jacob Wertheim paid $500 for a copy, and Mrs. Stewart Hartshorn bought one for $1,000.

CHINESE SEIZED AS REDS.

"Emissaries" with 6,000,000 Rubles Prove to be Innocent Traders.

PEKING, Feb. 10.—The reports that Chinese Bolshevist emissaries supplied with enormous funds for use in Bolshevist propaganda in China had been arrested in Manchuria have now been elucidated.

It appears that these men were Chinese merchants from Irkutsk, Chita, and elsewhere who were proceeding homeward to Harbin carrying their profits for investment in new stocks. There were seventy-three of them and when they were arrested by Semenoff's troops 6,000,000 rubles were seized. Their bona fides having been established the merchants have been liberated and their money will be returned.

ALLIED AIRPLANES BOMB BOLSHEVIKI

Despite Extreme Cold in North Russia They Raid Towns and Marching Columns.

ARCHANGEL, Feb. 10, (Associated Press.)—British and Russian airplanes, flying low over the frozen timberland between the Vaga River and the Vologda Railway, are greatly harassing the Bolshevist forces. This is one branch of equipment in which the Allies are superior to the enemy, who has virtually no aerial defense, while the allied fliers are demonstrating their efficiency despite the extreme cold.

On Sunday allied planes bombed the enemy occupied towns of Taresevo and Shagovari, and, flying further south than the allied troops have yet penetrated, dropped bombs on enemy columns moving northward along the Winter trails.

There was considerable patrol and artillery activity yesterday in the Kadish and Sredmakrenga sectors. The enemy apparently was striving to regain the territory taken from him in the offensive raid south of Kadish last week. Other sectors are comparatively quiet.

The Russian Government is taking steps to bring its forces up to the largest number available. The Governor General has been authorized to mobilize all citizens up to 40 years of age, including officers up to 45 years. The previous mobilization order called out men under 26 years of age.

DOUBTS PEACE BY APRIL 1.

Balfour, However, Says It Need Not Wait on Formation of League.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—"The question of when peace will be signed is one that nobody can answer," said A. J. Balfour, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in discussing different peace problems with English and American correspondents today.

Asked if he thought it might be signed by April 1, he said the date was "rather sanguine." He added, however, that it was not necessary for peace to wait upon the formal establishment of a Society of Nations, because "it is not the society's business to determine the terms of peace."

In answer to an inquiry as to how Germany could pay indemnities if not allowed to recuperate her industries, Mr. Balfour replied:

"Germany's recuperation should not be at the expense of France and Belgium, but it is to nobody's interest that Germany should become a derelict nation."

ARMY BILL REPORTED; DOOMS SERVICE STRIPE

Size of Forces Left to President's Discretion—Estimate Cut to $1,184,721,466.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—In the annual Army Appropriation bill reported by the Military Affairs Committee to the House today, carrying an appropriation of $1,117,289,488.55, there is a provision that the Secretary of War shall not provide by regulations for a distinctive stripe or chevron to indicate overseas duty or service in the United States. This section, if passed by Congress, would abolish the distinction of wearing white chevrons by those who had served at home, while soldiers with overseas service would be prevented from wearing the gold chevrons.

The provision in the bill reads:

"That it shall be unlawful for the Secretary of War to provide, by regulation or otherwise, for any distinctive stripe or chevron of any kind, indicating service overseas or in the United States, to be worn upon the uniform of any officer or enlisted man in the service of the United States, and any regulation heretofore made on this subject is hereby invalidated."

The committee ignored the recommendations of the General Staff for an army of 500,000 and declined to fix a permanent military policy at this time. Instead it authorized the President to maintain the present units, or as many as necessary for the next fiscal year, ending June 30, 1920.

The original estimates sent in by the Secretary of War called for an appropriation of $1,916,905,572. These were subsequently reduced to $1,184,721,466, and the committee scaled these down about $68,000,000.

WOULD-BE TOURISTS WARNED BY ITALY

Railroad Facilities Will Not Be Anything Like Normal Till End of 1920.

MILAN, Feb. 10.—The Government has assigned $360,000,000 to urgently needed reorganization of the State railways, $200,000,000 of this being devoted to purchase of new rolling stock, considerable orders for which have been placed with the United States at present mainly owing to the coal shortage.

The single Milan-Rome daily express takes up hours in making the journey, and the railway directorate warns intending foreign tourists that a return to anything like normal conditions cannot be expected until at least the end of next year.

Apart from the tremendous wastage of material consequent upon the conveyance of over 28,000,000 combatants, which involved running 800,000 trains during the war, in addition to the ordinary passenger service, Italy has lately undertaken to provide prompt facilities for demobilization of the allied armies from Macedonia and bases in the Orient. In the case of the British forces alone this work will necessitate the organization of twenty-one troop trains weekly from Taranto across Italy toward England.

To prevent misunderstanding it is officially stated that 70 out of its total of 116 locomotives with transport cars and car supplies which Britain is sending on from its bases in France will be reserved for these military needs together with another 200 engines to be supplied from the American command.

WAGNER CLAIMANT DEAD.

Isolde Beidler Was Daughter of Frau Wagner's First Marriage.

BERLIN, Feb. 9, (via Copenhagen.)—Isolde Beidler, daughter of Cosima Wagner's first marriage to Hans von Bülow, died in Munich last night, aged 54 years.

She was married to Royal Bavarian Court orchestra director Beidler, who for some years acted as conductor at Beyreuth, but in 1914 had a falling out with Siegfried Wagner.

Isolde sought to prove in court that she was Richard Wagner's natural daughter in order to claim part of the Wagner fortune, but failed.

NEW LABOR CLAIMS CONFRONT BRITISH

Railway Employes, Miners, and Transport Workers to Press for Changes.

UNIONS STARTING PARLEYS

The Public to be Represented in Future Government Negotiations or Disputes.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—With the subway system running again and the hotel waiters' strike over, a lull has fallen on the vexed industrial situation here, but it is fully realized that this is merely a breathing space.

The Government and the employers must face almost immediately definite and far-reaching demands from three important bodies of workers. The railway men on Wednesday will open formal negotiations for their national "charter," which includes an eight-hour day, equal pay for men and women, permanent retention of the war advances in wages, and two weeks annual holiday on full pay.

It is estimated that this will cost the companies £50,000,000 annually, and the men will urge nationalization of the roads if the plan is declared impracticable.

The miners are asking for the nationalization of the mines and claiming a six-hour day and a 30 per cent. increase in wages, while the transport workers are asking for a forty-four-hour week and a 20 per cent. increase for some classes of labor.

The electricians at a national conference at Manchester yesterday resolved to take a ballot on the question of the forty-four-hour week, the members of their union returning to work in the meantime. The ballot is to decide whether in the event of the forty-four-hour week being refused, there will be a general strike.

Evidently these demands amount to an entire recasting of industrial conditions in Great Britain. There is general relief at an announcement that it is intended that representatives of the public at large shall be appointed to serve on the Government committees considering industrial controversies.

LONDON, Feb. 10, (Associated Press.)—On the Clyde 50 per cent. of the workers, it is estimated, resumed their tasks today. All the men are expected to be back at work Wednesday.

The shipyard strikers in the London district are also returning to work in large numbers.

Representatives of many London manufacturers met in conference yesterday delegates from more than twenty trade unions, in an effort to define the obstacles to more cordial relations. After a long discussion, in which Baron Balfour of Burleigh and W. A. Appleton, Secretary of the General Federation of Trade Unions, were the chief speakers, joint committees were elected with a view to arriving at an agreement on a program.

Large meetings of workers were held yesterday in most of the big cities in the country, and there were discussions of labor grievances, especially the question of working hours. At a mass meeting of locomotive engineers held in London, President Cooke of the Engineers' Union attacked the Government, accusing it of issuing "distorted statements" and "gross fabrications for the purpose of concealing from the public the true state of affairs."

He also asserted that a week ago a new understanding had been reached between the Government and the railway interests, by which Government control of railways should continue for two years after peace was signed, and that, therefore, nationalization would be long delayed.

DUBLIN, Feb. 10.—The All-Ireland Labor Conference, held here on Saturday, adopted a program calling for a forty-four-hour week, and an increase of 150 per cent., in wages over pre-war rates, with an absolute minimum of 50 shillings per week.

All the results of the conference have been passed on to the various labor unions for decision, it being stipulated that the unions' action on the program should be submitted to the National Executive Committee by March 1. The conference passed a resolution pledging support to the Belfast strikers.

PORTUGUESE REPUBLIC RELIES ON THE ALLIES

Foreign Minister Trusts in Moral Support of Campaign to Crush Royalists.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—In response to a message addressed to Admiral Castro, President of the Portuguese Republic, The Daily Chronicle has received the following cablegram from Coucelro da Costa, Portuguese Minister of Foreign Affairs, dated at Lisbon, on Saturday:

"The people of Lisbon have very quickly triumphed over the criminal insurrection of the royalists. The green and red banner floats over every fortress, all State buildings, and all houses in the city.

"The south and centre of the country have rallied firmly to the cause of the republic. Only at Oporto and some other small localities in the north have the royalists, by employing force, been able to overwhelm the republican spirit of the population.

"The army of the republic is marching upon the revolutionaries and compelling them to retreat upon their first positions. Braganza and Vizeu have been retaken, and at Aveiro the enemy has been put to flight after suffering heavy losses.

"The war fleet is entirely loyal in making the royalists feel the effects of our rigorous blockade, and only awaits the moment for showing once more its traditional heroism and its profound love of the republic.

"All the powers and constitutional organizations of the State are working with perfect harmony and regularity. The life of the nation has not been troubled at all, except in those places which the royalists have occupied.

"Hope in the future of the country is absolute. The people, the houses of Parliament, and the legitimate Government of Portugal, closely bound together in the same thought and the same action against the enemy, look with the greatest confidence to victory. The Portuguese Republic knows well that it can count upon the moral support of the allied countries and on liberal opinion everywhere throughout the civilized world."

CALLS HENRY TO COURT.

Minister Who Owns Gerard Hotel Accuses Police Inspector.

The Rev. John R. Rankin, Presbyterian minister and owner of the Gerard Hotel at 123 West Forty-fourth Street, obtained a summons from Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan in the West Side Court yesterday for the appearance of Police Inspector Dominick Henry. Mr. Rankin charges Inspector Henry with oppression. The owner of the hotel said that Inspector Henry caused his arrest on Friday, charging him with a violation of the tenement house law, and placed a patrolman on guard at the door, preventing the hotel from doing business.

Mr. Rankin told Magistrate Corrigan that there was no reason for the action of the Inspector. Magistrate Corrigan, in issuing the summons, said:

"I don't know what things are coming to. Here we have prohibition on July 1, and before long we will probably be told to stop smoking. I will gladly issue the summons you apply for."

CLASHES AT BERNE OVER PRISONERS

Eisner, Bavarian Premier, Joins French Delegate in Rebuking German Demands.

BERNE, Feb. 10.—Pierre Renaudel, a French delegate to the International Socialist Conference, rebuked the German Majority Socialist delegates yesterday for their demand that German prisoners should be returned by the Allies.

"You continue to insult the Allies," he declared, "by pretending that French militarism is retaining the German prisoners. You forget the deportations from Lille and from Belgium. You try to influence our working classes by alleging that the use of your prisoners is unfair competition for our workingmen. This is our business, not yours. You continue your propaganda in favor of the former German Government, but if you desire to reach results, you must adopt an altogether different attitude."

M. Grumbach, delegate from Upper Alsace, protested against the speech made in the German National Assembly at Weimar by Dr. David, President of the Assembly, in which David declared that Alsace-Lorraine belonged to the German people. Grumbach's remarks were indorsed by Karl Kautsky, German Independent Socialist, who declared that the election of Dr. David as President of the National Assembly was a challenge to the Entente.

This discussion was in connection with a resolution favoring the release by the Allies of the German prisoners of war.

There was a sharp exchange between Oscar Wels, a German Majority Socialist, and Kurt Eisner, the Bavarian Premier, the latter accusing the German authorities of ill-treating French prisoners. Herr Eisner was warmly supported in this charge by M. Renaudel.

Wels introduced the subject of prisoners by arguing that German prisoners should be released because they would compete with French and Belgian workers in France and Belgium. Eisner said that Germany had no right to protest after what she had done to France and Belgium during the war, adding:

"When any one has seen, as I have seen, French prisoners near Munich crowded into low, dark sheds with corpses and men in the agony of death from disease, no right to protest remains."

Finally, on the motion of Camille Huysmans, a Belgian delegate, a resolution was adopted declaring that as allied prisoners were returned home from the Central Empires, German prisoners also should be returned, independently of legitimate complaints against Germany.

A proposal was made by the Russian delegates that a commission of the conference, representing all shades of Socialism, should be sent to inquire into the political and economic situation in Russia. The conference will pass upon this question later.

Demands for presentation to the Paris Peace Conference were agreed upon by the International Labor Conference here today. The demands include the establishment of an eight-hour day, with an uninterrupted rest period of thirty-six hours weekly, insurance against accidents and unemployment, the forbidding of night work in all countries for women workers, and of the employment of children under 15 years of age, and a six-hour day for youths between 15 and 18 years.

The demands will be recommended for incorporation into an international agreement by the Peace Conference.

There are special stipulations in the demands concerning seamen, and it is asked that these stipulations shall be made a part of international law, the carrying out of the provisions to be looked after by special commissions in which the trade unions of the nations shall have equal representation with the employing interests.

14 ON CHANNEL AIR TRIP.

Machine Carried French Officers 200 Miles in 155 Minutes.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—After flying from Paris to Croydon yesterday, an airplane with fourteen French officers aboard made the return journey today, reaching Paris safely this afternoon. The machine covered the nonstop journey of 200 miles from Paris to Croydon in 155 minutes.

All fourteen officers, despite the cold weather, wore their ordinary uniform without being protected by flying "warm." When the Channel was reached in the flight a champagne luncheon was served aboard, and the officers smoked, played cards, and altogether had an enjoyable journey.

$5,000,000 Credit for Rumania.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—A credit of $5,000,000 has been established in favor of Rumania, the Treasury announced today. This makes total credits of $10,000,000 for Rumania, and $8,678,157,000 for all the Allies.

Red Cross Relief for Near East.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The American Red Cross today announced that it had made an additional appropriation of $250,000 for relief work in Palestine and the Near East during January and February.

SEATTLE STRIKE OFF AT NOON TODAY

Union Committee Says That Leaders Were Stampeded to Return to Work.

"RANK AND FILE STOOD PAT"

All Are Asked to Remain Idle Till Today, Then to Declare the Strike a Success.

SEATTLE, Feb. 10.—Seattle's general strike, the first of its kind ever attempted in the United States, will end officially at noon tomorrow.

The general strike was virtually over this morning, as nearly every labor union of importance to industry or business was at work. Seventeen hundred teamsters and truck drivers, nearly the entire street car company's force, milk wagon drivers, barbers, automobile drivers, and garbage drivers were back at their tasks. Schools opened. Two shipping terminals resumed work with nonunion and union men, and other terminals were preparing to start business in the course of the day or Tuesday morning with nonunion men unless the regular forces returned. Police guards watched the docks where nonunion crews worked.

Police and Troops Kept on Duty.

Tuesday, according to the strikers' calendar, will register the sixth day of the general strike, which has involved approximately 55,000 men, and has passed off thus far without a single instance of disorder. Hundreds of police officers, however, it is announced, will be kept continually on duty until all danger of trouble is past. Federal troops will continue to guard Federal property.

The Newsboys' Union, which returned to work Saturday, today charged that the official labor organ, The Union Record, was the first to violate union regulations by using nonunion boys to sell its papers.

Employes represented in the Seattle Amusement Federation voted to resume work at 6 P. M. As a result the city's theatres were in full operation tonight.

Chief interest tonight centred on the question as to how many unions, if any, would heed the request of the General Strike Committtee to refrain from working until 12 o'clock tomorrow, when the strike will come to an official end, and what effect the finish of the sympathetic strike would have on the strike of the 25,000 metal trades workers in whose behalf it was called.

Mayor Hanson's Statement.

Mayor Ole Hanson made the following statement:

"The calling off of the general strike will not replace union labor in the high position it held in Seattle. Without reason, without cause, our city lay prostrate. Union labor must clean house. Seattle may forgive, but it cannot forget."

The Mayor also declared that he favored the passage of a law, if that should be found constitutional, forcing employes of essential industries to swear allegiance to the United States Government in preference to any union and to make it illegal for them to quit their positions or strike unless there were others to replace them.

The decision to call the strike off was reached at 1 o'clock today by the General Strike Committee, composed of delegates from the 130 local unions after a four-hour session. Of the unions represented on the committee, 110 had voted to participate in the general strike.

Members of the various unions were confused by this request, and it was considered uncertain whether it could be generally obeyed.

Following is the resolution by the General Strike Committee:

Whereas, This Strike Committee now assembles in the midst of the general understanding of the true status of the general strike; and,

Whereas, The Executive Committee is sufficiently satisfied that regardless of the ultimate action that the rank and file would take, the rank and file did stand pat, and the stampede to return to work was not on the part of the rank and file, but rather on the part of their leaders;

However, Be it understood that this committee does not question the honesty of any of the representatives of the general movement; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the following action become effective at once Feb. 10, 1919:

That this Strike Committee, advises all affiliated unions that have taken action to return their men to work, that said unions shall again call their men to respond immediately to the call of the rank and file until 12 noon, Feb. 11, 1919, and to then declare this strike at a successful determination, and if developments should then make it necessary that the strike be continued, that further action be referred to the rank and file exclusively.

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 10.—In accordance with the decision of the Central Labor Council last night the general strike is off in Tacoma today, and members of the unions who went out in the sympathetic strike went back to work at 8 o'clock this morning.

With the exception of shipyard workers all strikers returned to their jobs. The general strike was never really wholly effective here because some of the unions affiliated with the Central Labor Council refused to obey the council's order to strike.

The Longshoremen's Union last night killed all hopes of the council of continuing the strike when it voted to return to work.

PATROLS IN BUTTE USE THE BAYONET

Major Jones Threatens to Punish Discharged Soldiers Joining in Strike Disorders.

Special to The New York Times.

BUTTE, Mont., Feb. 10.—Mining operations were again practically suspended in the Butte district today. The strike begun Friday under the leadership of local I. W. W. organizations has not become general, but the situation is becoming hourly more serious. Men who want to work in the mines are remaining home because of threats made by the radical elements, and unions that were at first not disposed to pay attention to the movement may be drawn into the trouble. Agitation for a general strike is proceeding on systematic lines, and a campaign intended to bring about a complete shutdown is being waged by leaders who have engineered similar movements in Butte.

The mining companies are doing all they can to operate. Managers repeated today that they hoped to be able to keep their properties going, but they frankly said that if the miners couldn't or wouldn't work, a shutdown would be inevitable. No demands were made upon the companies by any unions, organizations, or individuals representing miners or other employes today. None has been made, although resolutions have been passed by the strikers demanding a six-hour day with a $6 wage scale.

The crews of the leading properties were so greatly reduced today that very little ore was hoisted. In some of the properties only enough men were on hand to conduct surface work and to keep the pumps going and the workings patrolled. The East Butte Company was forced to close down its smelter at 11:30 o'clock this morning through a lack of men, and the mill went down before the 3 o'clock shift was due to come on. The timber Butte mill was closed yesterday.

Major Jones, in command of the United States troops in this city, this morning administered a lecture to discharged soldiers for participating in disorders which he said had disgraced their uniform and stamped them as persons of an undesirable character in any community.

LAWYERS IN DISPUTE AT PACKING INQUIRY

Armour Attorney Denies That He Offered Corporation Employment to Heney.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Frank J. Heney, who conducted the Federal Trade Commission's meat packing investigation, today gave the Senate Committee on Agriculture details of offers of employment which he said were made to him by Levy Mayer, counsel for Armour & Co., before and in the course of the present hearing.

Mr. Mayer, who spent the day on the witness stand, emphatically denied that he had made the offers or any of the statements attributed to him by Mr. Heney. At the close of the day Mr. Mayer stood up with a book in his hand, and, he said, for the purpose of assisting the committee to determine to whom it should give credence, started to make a statement which he said dealt "with Mr. Heney and the 'fixing' of a jury."

Mr. Heney was immediately on his feet and announced that if any such statement was introduced he would bring in the Attorney General to prove that any such charge against him was false. At this point members of the committee interrupted to say that they regretted that the two lawyers had become involved in a dispute, as much of the time of the committee which should have been given to the hearing had been consumed.

Early in the day Mr. Mayer entered his first denial that he had offered business to Mr. Heney before the latter arrived at the hearing. He also read a telegram from Frank P. Walsh, who Mr. Heney said Mr. Mayer told him had received a similar offer, stating that he had heard nothing of the offer.

Later in the afternoon, after Mr. Mayer had been giving the committee his views regarding proposed legislation regulating the meat industry, Mr. Heney began questioning him about their first meeting in Chicago last year and about a meeting between Mr. Mayer, W. W. Chapin of The Oakland (Cal.) Gazette, and a Mr. Slesinger of San Francisco.

"I'll tell you what I said to them," said Mr. Mayer. "Chapin and Slesinger came to my office, and the latter asked if I knew any San Francisco lawyers. I said I knew of you, Mr. Heney, and Mr. Slesinger replied that he was a good friend of yours. I replied that, that being the case, I could speak freely with him, and I told him your methods were unprofessional and dishonest."

This statement resulted in a heated exchange between the two attorneys, but finally Mr. Mayer, in response to Mr. Heney's questioning, told of discussing with Mr. Heney a visit the latter made to New York.

"You discussed New York lawyers," said Mr. Mayer, "and said that they didn't know how to try cases, and that you thought you would go to New York and open an office."

"Did you then offer to send me business?" asked Mr. Heney.

"Neither then nor at any other time," replied Mr. Mayer.

In opposing the legislation before the committee for control of the meat industry, Mr. Mayer said the big packing companies would not oppose regulation by a commission to be appointed by the President, to be composed of representatives of the producers, packers, and consumers.

FEDERAL UNION URGED FOR IRELAND

New Centre Party Proposes Provincial Parliaments on the Canadian Model

WITH ONE FOR ALL IRELAND

But Irish Would Still Be Represented at Westminster—Freedom of Religion Stipulated.

DUBLIN, Feb. 1, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—For the moment Ireland seems divided into two parties of extremists, one side demanding the overthrow of every vestige of British rule, and the other demanding the maintenance of the existing system of Government, to be varied, if at all, by an actual extension of Union principles and the treatment of Irish counties as if they were British shires. An attempt, however, is now being made to tackle the problem in a manner intended to reconcile conflicting interests by working out a plan for unity in diversity, such as obtains in America.

A moderate Centre Party is being formed in Ireland to advocate the solution of Irish Home Rule through the principle of federalism. Before Ireland swung over to Sinn Fein the most familiar demand of those Nationalists who were dissastisfied with Mr. Asquith's Home Rule act was for Dominion Home Rule. The new Irish Centre Party proposes to meet that demand. A scheme has been drafted which in the main follows the Canadian model of 1867. The political and religious differences between the provinces, the variety of their character and needs, it is argued, are no more acute in Ireland than they were in Canada, and the Canadian experiment has been a great success.

Ireland is declared by the sponsors for the plan to be large enough to provide for local divisions, while maintaining its national unity. There are in Canada Parliaments for provinces containing a much smaller population than the smallest of the Irish provinces, and in some cases a much smaller area. Moreover, of the States comprising the American Federal Union eighteen have a population smaller than that of Connaught, while eight others have a population smaller than that of Ulster.

The new Irish plan proposes a separate provincial single-chambered Parliament for each of the Irish provinces, though some suggest only three, with a grouping of Leinster and Connaught. Each provincial Parliament would have its own Executive and its own Exchequer, and have full control over all the purely internal affairs of the province. At the same time there would be established a Central Federal Parliament with its own Executive and Exchequer, controlling all affairs affecting Ireland as a whole. The plan differs from the Canadian model, however, in the proposal that Ireland as a constitutional unit of the British Empire shall be represented also in the Imperial Parliament.

The scheme of constitution for the Irish Federal Parliament is based on that of the Home Rule act of 1914, but it is suggested that both of the houses shall be elected by proportional representation. The whole scheme has been worked out in detail, and is presented as giving the amplest opportunity to the various provinces to work out their own destinies by their own methods. Belfast, it is pointed out, would be as free as Cork or Dublin from any interference with its local liberties. Powers of taxation, both Federal and provincial, are provided for, and a rearrangement of the judicial system has been devised.

The scheme prohibits both provincial and Federal Governments from any interference with religious equality. As to education, the proposal is made that the National Board of Education should be resolved into its constituent elements and two new boards be set up in lieu of it, one to consist exclusively of Roman Catholics and the other to represent the various Protestant denominations, each board to have its activities limited to its own denominational interests.

The plan was one of the many submitted to the Irish Convention last year; but it was not considered then, because the convention concentrated itself on an effort, which proved fruitless, to secure the consent of Ulster to the authority of a single Irish Parliament.

The men behind the new movement are from all the provinces and of all classes, mostly men of experience in affairs. The moving spirit is Captain Stephen Gwynn, who until the recent general election was member of Parliament for Galway City. He was John Redmond's right-hand man during the Irish Convention. Like Mr. Redmond, he was an enthusiastic supporter of the war and was a leader in the work of recruiting for the army in Ireland. He is now a member of a body charged with the work of providing for the demobilization and re-employment of Irish soldiers and sailors.

Leviathan Due Today with 9,295.

The United States transport Leviathan is due at Pier 4, Hoboken, at 5 o'clock today with 9,295 troops from Brest, but only seventy casual officers will be allowed to land. Her complement consists chiefly of negro troops and comprises the 371st and 372d Infantry Regiments complete, the 2d Battalion of the 369th Regiment, formerly the 15th Regiment of the National Guard, 2,132 sick and wounded and other units. Colonel William Hayward with the 1st Battalion of the 369th Regiment is expected to arrive tomorrow on the Swedish-American liner Stockholm.

ganda of destruction of property and the upsetting of the general doctrine of Government.

"Much evidence was obtained by Government agents as to the pernicious activities of this class of persons," said Commissioner Caminetti today. "It was hoped that the provisions incorporated in the immigration act of Feb. 5, 1917, would be sufficient to reach and deal effectively with them. While many of them were found, on investigation, to be subject to arrest and deportation under the immigration law and a large number of warrants were issued and served, there appeared to be a lack of conformity between the provisions of Sections 3 and 19 of the Immigration act, as a result of which some persons of the anarchistic class, while subject to exclusion upon their original arrival, might be able to frustrate deportation upon warrant procedure."

Finding that these two provisions of the law were not strong enough to enable the Government to deport certain of the most troublesome classes who had succeeded in gaining admission and who might be able to frustrate deportation by probable judicial interpretation of the law pursuant to habeas corpus proceedings, the Government, in October, enacted a special law for the deportation of anarchists.

"When this situation came to be realized," said Mr. Caminetti, "it was deemed advisable to defer action upon all but the clearest cases until Congress could enact amendatory legislation which would serve to eliminate the supposed weaknesses of the immigration statute of 1917, and the law of Oct. 16, 1918, was passed, providing for the exclusion or expulsion from the United States of members of anarchistic and similar classes.

"Under that law the Secretary of Labor has authority to issue warrants for the arrest and deportation, irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States, of aliens who are anarchists, who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or all forms of law, who disbelieve in or are opposed to all organized government, who advocate or teach assassination of public officials, or the unlawful destruction of property, or who are members of or affiliated with any organization that hold such beliefs.

"If after they have been deported any such persons try to re-enter the United States it will be considered a felony, and on conviction they may be imprisoned for not more than five years."

Commissioner Caminetti was careful to explain that the deportation of the present large group of agitators was not related to the labor or other present activities at Seattle, but that orders for the deportations had been signed before the Seattle situation had developed.

AWAIT AGITATORS HERE.

Will Probably Be Sent to Gothenburg with Others Rounded Up.

Officials at Ellis Island said last night that the train bearing the fifty-four foreigners ordered out of the United States would probably arrive at Hoboken early this morning. A cutter from Ellis Island will be at the army dock there and the arriving radicals will be escorted under heavy guard to the vessel and taken at once to the island.

It is likely, it was said, that the departing disturbers would be kept at the island until Feb. 18, when the steamship Stockholm is scheduled to sail for Gothenburg, the most direct route to Russia, whence most of the agitators came.

Several days ago twenty-nine foreigners, arrested in the East, were sent to Boston to await deportation from that port. Others are being held at Ellis Island, and still more at other places, the exact number not having been made public.

Several foreign-born anarchists and I. W. W. leaders who have been active in New York City may be deported on the same ship which carries the fifty-four men now on their way here. Assistant Immigration Commissioner Byron S. Uhl refused to give the names of any of those who are awaiting hearings at this port.

Superintendent W. M. Offley of the New York Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice said that there had been no general roundup of anarchists and Bolshevist leaders in this city for deportation under the revised and broadened immigration law of Oct. 16, 1918, although action had been taken under it in particular cases. As under this law an alien can be deported for belonging to the I. W. W., even though he has otherwise refrained from dangerous agitation, officials of the Department of Justice believe that it will be impossible for that organization to continue in existence.

Citizens by naturalization cannot safely preach Bolshevist doctrines or belong to organizations such as the I. W. W. under a construction of the naturalization law which has been urged by John Lord O'Brian, special counsel for the Department of Justice, and has been so far sustained by the courts. In the cases of naturalized citizens of German birth, who spoke against the United States, it was urged in the Federal courts that their naturalization should be revoked and that they should be put in internment camps with other dangerous enemy aliens. It was held that their anti-American remarks were proof that they were insincere in taking the oath of naturalization and that the oath was therefore void.

Under this ruling, naturalized citizens who become active in Bolshevist movements may hereafter be sent to the country of their origin, it was said yesterday.

Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, the anarchists who were sentenced to two years in prison each for seditious conspiracy, are to be deported at the expiration of their terms under the revised immigration law. Samuel Lipton, Mollie Steimer, Jacob Abrahams, Hyman Lachowsky, and Hyman Rozansky, Russians who were convicted recently of circulating anti-draft literature, are also subject to deportation when their terms have been served, the immigration law making compulsory the deportation of aliens guilty of crimes against the Government.

All of the aliens convicted at Sacramento, Cal., of participating in the conspiracy to blow up the Governor's mansion there, and those convicted in the I. W. W. conspiracies in various cities in the West, are due to return to their former countries as soon as their prison terms are over.

41 SENT FROM SEATTLE.

Deportations Planned Before the Strike Began There.

SEATTLE, Feb. 10.—The quiet departure of the forty-one Industrial Workers of the World and alien labor agitators, sent from Seattle last week by the immigration authorities, escaped publicity through the temporary suspension of newspapers during the first days of the sympathetic strike here.

"The departure was originally set for Jan. 27," said Federal Immigration Commissioner Henry M. White today. "Writs of habeas corpus and other legal proceedings instituted in behalf of some of the men delayed us in sending them east until last Thursday.

"It was purely a coincidence that they left here on the day that the general strike was called, as none of them had been arrested in connection with the strike. They were all foreigners whose activities during the war had led to their arrest."

GENERAL CLEANUP OF REDS.

Nearly Twenty More in Chicago Jails for Deportation.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—A cleanup to rid the country of aliens with criminal records or who are regarded as a menace to the nation is under way. Within a few days another carload of undesirables will leave Chicago for "an Atlantic port" to be shipped back to the countries whence they came, immigration officials here said today.

"The cleanup will be thorough," said an official. "There are nearly a score in Chicago jails right now who will be deported within a few days. Aliens who get into the country under pretenses and then attempt to stir up discord here with their Bolshevist and I. W. W. propaganda will find it hard pickings from now on. If this country doesn't suit them the Government has an effective way of helping them into more congenial climes."

LIEUT. SELLERS DEFIES I. W. W.

Infantrymen Protect Arizona Jail Holding Arrested Men.

JEROME, Ariz., Feb. 10.—Lieutenant John Sellers, commanding a detachment of twenty-five men of the 3d Infantry, defied a strike committee, said to have been recruited from the I. W. W., when it called on him tonight and threatened to lead an attack on the jail to release more than a score of men held on a charge of obstructing the streets.

Lieutenant Sellers told the committee that he and his men would be ready for action if any attempt was made to carry out the threat. So far no violence has resulted.

Late tonight the number arrested as traffic obstructors had grown to twenty-nine.

Trouble in Jerome started early in the day when the copper companies put in effect a cut of 75 cents a day in the men's wages. About 4,000 men were affected. The union miners, affiliated with the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, obeyed instructions from leaders to remain at work pending the arrival of Federal Mediator Hywell H. Davies, who, Secretary of Labor Wilson telegraphed, would start immediately.

A crowd of 250 men, said to have been recruited from I. W. W. ranks, met outside the town limits and voted for a general strike and to start picketing at 6 o'clock tonight. When a score of men were arrested charged with obstructing traffic, a mob besieged the jail demanding their release and threatening to tear down the building.

It was stated by police and mine officials that 90 per cent. of the strikers were unnaturalized foreigners, less than half of whom understood English.

PROHIBITION BILL APPEARS IN ALBANY

One Section Bars Cider as a Beverage After It is a Month Old.

DRUGGISTS TO HAVE PERMITS

Physicians Oathbound to Prescribe Liquor Only After Thorough Examination of Patients.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 10.—The Anti-Saloon League's bill to provide for the enforcement in New York of the Federal prohibition amendment was submitted to the Legislature tonight by Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara County and Assemblyman Walter S. McNab of Schenectady. The bill is based upon the various enforcement measures of the entire country and contains all the provisions of the present liquor tax law of New York governing dry territory.

Intoxicating liquors are not defined by the bill. The measure, if passed, would be enforced by the "Commissioner of Public Welfare," a new name for the present Commissioner of Excise. The bill would make it unlawful to deal in liquor in one's possession except by permit or on a physician's prescription. This section of the bill provides for the issuing of commercial permits to wholesale and retail druggists, manufacturers of alcohol or compounds for medicinal and sacramental uses and to makers of non-drinkable preparations. Physicians would be bound under oath to give prescriptions for liquor only after thorough examination of the persons seeking them. Records of sales must be kept by retail and wholesale druggists.

One section of the bill prohibits advertising of the liquor traffic under any conditions, but allows manufacturers to send price lists to persons entitled to buy. It would be unlawful for any newspaper or periodical to print any statement concerning the liquor business, directly or indirectly, without giving the names of the persons who paid for the advertisement.

The seizure section of the new law provides that no warrants shall be issued to search a private dwelling unless part of it is used as a store or shop, unless it is a public resort or liquor is unlawfully sold there.

Transportation of liquor by any means of conveyance, including aircraft, is prohibited, and any person found intoxicated may be compelled to tell where he obtained his liquor.

Cider, after one month, is nondrinkable, according to the bill. The bill, contrary to expectation, contains no prohibition against the manufacture and sale of alcoholic toilet, antiseptic, and culinary preparations where these are nondrinkable.

On motion of J. Henry Walters, President pro tem. of the Senate, the Prohibition Enforcement bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee instead of the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, which heretofore has been the custodian of measures dealing with the liquor traffic. Senator Walters explained that the change of reference was made at the request of Senator Henry M. Davenport, Chairman of the Committee on Taxation, owing to the severe pressure of work on his committee.

The resentment expressed by the military forces overseas to the section of the Army Appropriation bill, now before Congress, which would abolish the wearing of service chevrons, led the Assembly tonight to adopt a resolution memorializing the national lawmaking body to eliminate the provision. The resolution was unanimously adopted as offered by Martin G. McCue of New York. In the Senate the resolution was laid over.

After some debate, the Steinberg resolution calling for the appointment of a committee of State officers to welcome the 27th Division on its return from France was committed to the Ways and Means Committee on motion of Majority Leader Adler. The resolution was aimed at the Hylan-Hearst committee.

Minority Leader Donohue objected to the language of the resolution, which referred to "dissension and acrimony existing in New York" over the Hylan appointments. Assemblyman Steinberg agreed to remove the reference, but the resolution was referred to committee, which kills it.

Another resolution introduced by Assemblyman Joseph V. McKee of the Bronx, which would name a joint legislative committee to encourage building operations in New York City with a view to bringing rents down, was sent to the Ways and Means Committee.

The Assembly adopted unanimously the proposal of Assemblyman Bertrand G. Burnett of Westchester to name Oct. 27 Roosevelt Day.

CALLS PROCLAMATION OF PROHIBITION VOID

Providence Journal Argues That Ratification in States with Referendums Was Not Complete.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 10.—The Providence Journal will print tomorrow morning a statement declaring that the action of Acting Secretary of State Polk in proclaiming the Prohibtion Amendment effective and adopted was illegal, and that the proclamation is entirely void, for the reason that when it was made thirty-six States had not ratified the amendment. The statement reads:

"The National Prohibition Amendment to the Constitution was promulgated by Mr. Frank Polk, Acting Secretary of State on the 29th of January, the proclamation stating that it was effective as of the 16th day of January. The procimation recited thirty-six States which had ratified the amendment as of the latter date. This list of States included a number of States the Constitutions of which contain provisions for referendum of the acts and resolutions of their legislative assemblies. Among these States were Ohio and California.

"The Journal has consulted some of the best known constitutional lawyers in the United States regarding this question, and their opinion is unanimous that Mr. Polk's action was not warranted by the facts, and was illegal. The conclusions reached by these lawyers in agreeing with The Journal's contentions, are clear.

"The Constitution of the State of Ohio provides that any act of the Legislature may, upon the petition of a percentage of the voters filed within ninety days after the adjournment of the Assembly, be submitted to the vote of the people, either at the next general election held after the filing of the petition, or at a special election, if one be called by the Governor. This provision of the State Constitution has been before the courts of the State and the Supreme Court of the United States, and it has been held that the people of the State of Ohio under this provision, are a part of the Legislature of this State, and with the General Assembly constitute the Legislature of the State of Ohio. An amendment of this provision to the State Constitution was adopted at the general election in 1918 under the terms of which ratification by the Assembly of the State of a national constitutional amendment may be subjected to a referendum under the same terms as any other act or resolve of the Assembly.

"In the State of California the right of the people to subject the ratification of the national amendment to their acceptance or rejection is quite as clear as in the State of Ohio. In several of the other States listed as having ratified through their State Assembly, the propriety of a referendum is clear.

"The Journal's information is that referendum petitions are to be filed in all of these States within the prescribed period after the adjournment of the Assemblies, which have done their part in ratifying. Undoubtedly, the State of Ohio, for instance, has not ratified and ratification cannot be said to have occurred in the State of Ohio until the referendum proceedings have been completed, either by way of an approval of the Assembly's action or its disapproval.

"Therefore, Mr. Polk's proclamation declaring that thirty-six States had ratified as of Jan. 16, 1919, is void and without force. It assumed that the States listed as ratifying had completed their procedure when, in fact, their procedure was no more complete than it would have been if only one house of the General Assembly had acted, and the decision of the other house was still undetermined.

"In view of the fact that the revised statutes of the United States provide for report by the Secretary of State of national Constitutional amendments proposed by Congress to the several States, and for a return to him of their action thereon, and in view of the fact that the Secretary of State alone can furnish a definite statement of the time of ratification, so that the States of the Union and the people of the United States may know when an amendment has been duly placed in the Constitution, it is obvious that a proclamation containing within its own terms the evidence of its defects, is null and void.

"The situation, now, is that the Secretary of State has made and is now standing on the proclamation declaring the ratification of an amendment as of a stated date, when the list of States which he recites contains the names of States which not only had not completetd ratification as of that date, but, on the contrary, were in the very process of going about the final ratification or rejection."

Rhode Island is one of the States which refused to ratify the prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution.

SMITH REAPPOINTS RICE.

Tammany Jolted Again by Civil Service Board Nomination.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 10.—There has been very little in the administration of Governor Alfred E. Smith so far to give comfort to Tammany Hall. Some time ago he named to the important position of State Superintendent of Prisons Charles F. Rattigan, erstwhile political lieutenant of Thomas Mott Osborne, who has raised the banner of revolt against Tammany more frequently than any other Democrat in the State. Today he set Tammany politicians thinking hard again by reappointing William Gorham Rice of this city as Civil Service Commissioner for a term of six years.

Commissioner Rice has been one of Mr. Osborne's stanchest allies in the latter's fight against Tammany and its up-State henchmen, and, under the leadership of David B. Hill, was identified with the anti-Tammany wing of the Democratic Party even before Mr. Osborne became conspicuous in anti-Tammany warfare.

The nomination was sent to the Senate by Governor Smith at the session tonight, and was confirmed without reference to committee. The salary is $5,000.

Corporal Alfred J. Glynn of Brooklyn, a nephew of Governor Smith, was jumped to the rank of Major today when his uncle named him as his Military Secretary. The salary is $4,000.

Major Glynn took up his new duties at once. He is the youngest man who ever served as military aid to a Governor in this State. He is one of eight sons of Governor Smith's only sister, and was born in New York City in 1898. In 1917 he enlisted in the 106th Infantry, and after training at Spartanburg, was sent overseas last May. He was in action with his regiment at Knoll, Guillemont Farm, Quennemont Farm, on the Hindenburg line, and at Laselle River, in the Cambrai region. In the last battle he was gassed slightly, on Oct. 20, and was sent home as a casual, after receiving treatment at a base hospital in Rouen.

Governor Smith sent to the Senate tonight the name of Dr. Pearce Bailey, whom he had appointed head of the State Commission for the Feeble-Minded, to succeed Dr. James, who resigned. Dr. Bailey is a specialist in mental and nervous diseases and professor of that branch in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia University. Since the country has been at war he has been at the head of the Division of Mental and Nervous Diseases in the Surgeon General's office of the War Department, with the rank of Colonel.

The nomination of J. Dupratt White of Nyack and Franklin W. Hopkins of Alpine, N. J., to succeed themselves as members of the Palisades Interstate Park Commission; that of Herbert F. Gunnison of Brooklyn to succeed George F. Brower as manager of the Brooklyn State Hospital for the Insane, and that of Philip H. Minshull of Middletown to succeed William H. Rogers, whose term has expired as manager of the Middletown State Hospital, were also received by the Senate tonight.

The nominations of Bailey, White, and Hopkins were confirmed immediately.

FEW DIVISION PARADES.

New York Likely to See 27th, Boston 26th, Washington 42d.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—It is probable that parades of complete divisions of the American Army returning from France can be held only in a few cities in the immediate vicinity of the debarkation ports. The response to the request of many other localities for divisional reviews of troops is likely to be permission for the parading of not more than a regiment. This, it was learned today, is the conviction of officers at the War Department, who have been studying home-coming parade proposals.

Cities in which it is perhaps practicable to hold divisional reviews, these officers say, are Boston, New York, and Washington. To hold such a parade in an inland city, it was said, would be almost impossible and quite impracticable.

Secretary Baker and General March have already said that the proposal to parade the 27th (New York National Guard) Division as a unit in New York on its way from Camps Mills and Merritt to Camp Upton, where it would be demobilized, is entirely practicable. No serious railroad congestion would result, as the main lines would not be involved. Similar special arrangements might be made, it has also been said, for a parade in Boston of the 26th (New England National Guard) Division. It is also believed possible that definite plans for a parade in Washington of the 42d (Rainbow) Division will be taken under consideration when it is assigned for return.

MADERO GOES FREE.

Sentence Suspended After Plea of Technical Guilt.

Ernesto Madero, head of Madero Brothers, Inc., who pleaded guilty to an irregular transaction in warehouse copper receipts deposited with the National Bank of Commerce, was released on a suspended sentence by Judge McIntyre in General Sessions yesterday. Similar charges against two of his employes, T. L. Milic and Nathan Lazarus were similarly disposed of.

Madero, who was Minister of Finance of Mexico during the administration of his nephew, said he had pleaded guilty, although he was only at fault technically. No loss had been sustained by the bank, he said, and before any legal proceedings had been taken against him he had sought to supply sufficient copper to meet the valuation mentioned in the receipts.

The banking officials corroborated this and expressed confidence in Mr. Madero's integrity and requested leniency.

"Dry" Nebraska Still Wet.

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 10.—Governor Samuel R. McKelvie declared today he believed there was nearly as much intoxicating liquor in Nebraska when he assumed office recently as there was when the State had open saloons. He made this statement in connection with a request for an emergency appropriation by the Legislature to employ men to prevent the importation of alcoholic liquors. Nebraska has been a "dry" State for more than a year.

GLASS ASKS NEW LIBERTY LOAN ACT

adjustment by artificial means can only increase the evils inherent in the situation. Buying will not begin and activity will not set in until the community at large is satisfied that prices have reached bedrock. I am very hopeful that measures now under discussion may result in the rapid acceleration of the readjustment, and I am firmly convinced that if that be done America has before her a new period of great and growing prosperity. I am even sanguine enough to believe that it is within the range of the possible that so much may have been accomplished on the lines above indicated before the expiration of two months from now that the whole situation will have been changed and that we may look forward to the successful issue of the Victory Liberty Loan on terms which today would seem quite impossible.

"Furthermore, merely as a matter of the technique of bond selling, it would be a fatal mistake to fix the terms of the loan so long in advance of the offering. The issue would become stale and its attractions would have been discounted long before the loan campaign begins. It will be remembered that the Second Liberty Bond act was approved as late as Sep. 24, and the bonds were offered on Oct. 1, 1917; that the Third Liberty Bond act was approved April 4 and the bonds offered on April 6, 1918; and that the supplement to the Fourth Liberty Bond act was approved Sept. 24 and the bonds offered on Sept. 28, 1918.

"Therefore, and in view of the early expiration of the life of the present Congress and the apparent impossibility of convening and organizing the new Congress in time to enact further bond legislation before the Victory Liberty Loan campaign begins, I reluctantly ask greater latitude in the exercise of a sound discretion as to the terms of the Victory Liberty Loan than has been conferred by the Congress in respect to previous loans. I should be only too glad to have the Congress share with me the responsibility of this extraordinarily difficult determination, but, believing that it would be a grave mistake to reach a final determination at this time, I must ask authority to deal with the matter as the situation may develop.

"Holding these views, I have ventured to have prepared and I submit to you herewith a draft of a bill to amend the Liberty Bond acts and for other purposes. This bill would (1) increase the authorized issue of bonds from $20,000,000,000 to $25,000,000,000; (2) remove the limitation as to interest rate so far as regards bonds maturing not more than ten years from the date of issue; (3) authorize the issue of not to exceed $10,000,000,000 of interest-bearing, non-circulating notes having maturities from one to five years; (4) authorize the issue of bonds and notes payable at a premium; (5) exempt War Savings Certificates from income surtaxes; (6) confer authority upon the Secretary of the Treasury to determine the exemptions from taxation in respect to future issues of bonds and notes, and to enlarge the exemptions of existing Liberty bonds in the hands of subscribers for new bonds and notes; (7) exempt from income surtaxes and profits taxes all issues of Liberty bonds and bonds of the War Finance Corporation held abroad; (8) extend the period for conversion of 4 per cent. Liberty bonds on the lines suggested in my letter of Jan. 15 to you; (9) create a 2½ per cent. cumulative sinking fund for the retirement of the war debt; (10) continue the existing authority for the purchase of obligations of foreign Governments after the termination of the war, in accordance with the views expressed by Secretary McAdoo by letter and in his testimony before the Ways and Means Committee; and (11) extend the authority of the War Finance Corporation so as to permit it to make loans in aid of our commerce, thus supplementing the aid which may be given by the Treasury on direct loans to foreign Governments and in a measure relieving the Treasury of demands for such loans.

"I am sure that your committee will wish to discuss all of these matters fully with me, and I shall not burden you at this time with a fuller statement of my views concerning them.

"I am sending a copy of this letter to Senator Simmons. Very truly yours,
"CARTER GLASS."

Text of the Bill in Full.

The full text of the bill which Secretary Glass sent to Chairman Kitchin, with a request for its passage before March 4, follows:

"A bill to amend the Liberty Bond acts and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that Section 1 of the Second Liberty Bond act, as amended, is hereby further amended by striking out the figures $20,000,000,000 and inserting in lieu thereof the figures $25,000,000,000, and by adding the following clause:

"'Any bonds maturing not later than ten years from the date thereof may bear interest at such rate or rates, notwithstanding the limitation hereinbefore contained, and may be made payable at or before maturity at such premium or premiums as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.'

"Section 2. That the Second Liberty Bond act is hereby amended by adding thereto a new section to read as follows:

"'Section 18. That, in addition to the bonds and certificates of indebtedness and War Savings certificates authorized by the Second Liberty Bond act and amendments thereto, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to borrow from time to time on the credit of the United States for the purposes of said act and amendments thereto and to meet public expenditures authorized by law such sum or sums as in his judgment may be necessary, and to issue therefor notes of the United States at not less than par in such form or forms and subject to such terms and conditions and at such rate or rates of interest as he may prescribe, and each note so issued shall be payable at such time not less than one year nor more than five years from the date of its issue, and may be redeemable before maturity upon such terms and conditions, and may be payable at or before maturity at such premium, and the interest accruing thereon shall be payable at such time or times as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

"'The sum of such notes outstanding hereunder shall not at any one time exceed in the aggregate $10,000,000,000. None of such notes shall bear the circulation privilege. The principal and interest thereof shall be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value. The word "bonds" where it appears in Sections 8, 9, 10, 14 and 15 of this act and Section 5,200 of the Revised Statutes, but in said sections only, shall be deemed to include notes issued hereunder.'

"Section 3. That, notwithstanding the provisions of the Second Liberty Bond act and of any other act

"(a) War Savings Certificates of the United States heretofore or hereafter issued shall be exempt from taxation as fully and to the same extent as bonds of the United States issued under Section 1 of the First Liberty Bond act.

"(b) Bonds, notes, and certificates of indebtedness of the United States of any series hereafter issued shall be exempt from taxation if and to the extent prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury in connection with the issue thereof.

"(c) Subscribers for any subsequent series of bonds or any series of notes of the United States shall be entitled to additional exemptions from taxation in respect to bonds of the First Liberty Loan, converted; the Second Liberty Loan, converted and unconverted; the Third Liberty Loan, and the Fourth Liberty Loan owned by them if, as, and to the extent prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury in connection with the issuance of such subsequent series of bonds or of such series of notes.

"(d) Section 3 of the Fourth Liberty Bond act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'Section 3. That, notwithstanding the provisions of the Second Liberty Bond act and of the War Finance Corporation act and of any other act, bonds, notes, and certificates of indebtedness of the United States and bonds of the War Finance Corporation shall, while beneficially owned by a nonresident alien individual or by a foreign corporation, partnership, or association not engaged in business in the United States, be exempt both as to principal and interest from any and all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, any State or any of the possessions of the United States or by any local taxing authority.'

"Section 4. That the privilege of converting 4 per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted and 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan into 4¼ per cent. bonds, which privilege arose on May 9, 1918, and expired on Nov. 9, 1918, may be extended by the Secretary of the Treasury for such period upon such terms and conditions and subject to such rules and regulations as he may prescribe; provided, however, that, for the purpose of computing the amount of interest payable, bonds presented for conversion under any such extension shall be deemed to be converted on the dates for payment of the semiannual interest on the respective bonds so presented for conversion, next succeeding the date of such presentation.

"Section 5. That at the expiration of one year after the termination of the war, and annually thereafter until all bonds and notes hereinafter referred to shall be retired, the Secretary of the Treasury shall set aside, as a cumulative sinking fund for the retirement of the war debt, such amount as he shall deem necessary under the provisions of this section, and the amount so set aside by the Secretary of the Treasury in each such year is hereby appropriated for the purposes of this section to be available until all such bonds and notes are retired. Bonds and notes purchased, redeemed, or paid out of the sinking fund shall be cancelled and retired and shall not be reissued.

"The Secretary of the Treasury shall, from time to time, beginning one year after the termination of the war and continuing until the war debt is retired, purchase for the sinking fund bonds and notes issued under authority of the First Liberty Bond act, the Second Liberty Bond act, the Third Liberty Bond act, the Fourth Liberty Bond act, and this act, including converted bonds, at such prices and upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe. The aggregate par amount of all such bonds and notes purchased in any sinking fund year shall equal as nearly as may be, but shall not exceed 2½ per cent. of the aggregate amount of such bonds and notes outstanding at the expiration of one year after the termination of the war plus (in the case of any sinking fund year after the first) any amount herein authorized to be expended for such purchases not expended in any previous year or years, and an amount equal to the interest on all bonds and notes retired by means of the sinking fund. The sinking fund may be applied to the payment of bonds or notes at maturity, or to the redemption thereof before maturity, as well as to the purchase thereof. The average cost of the bonds and notes purchased shall not exceed par and accrued interest.

Financing Foreign Trade.

"Section 6. That the proviso at the end of Section 2 of the Second Liberty Bond act as amended by the Third Liberty Bond act and the Fourth Liberty Bond act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'Provided, that the authority granted by this section to the Secretary of the Treasury to establish credits for foreign Governments, as aforesaid, shall cease one year after the termination of the war between the United States and the Imperial German Government; and, provided further, that, for the purpose of promoting commerce with foreign nations, such credits may, after Feb. 15, 1919, be established by the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, to provide for purchases in the United States for export therefrom and for expenditures in the United States in connection with such purchases and for the payment of interest to the United States; and, provided further, that after the termination of the war such credits may, with the approval of the President, be established in favor of the Governments of such foreign countries as were previously engaged in war with enemies of the United States.'

"Section 7. That the obligations of foreign Governments acquired by the Secretary of the Treasury by virtue of the provisions of the First Liberty Bond act and the Second Liberty Bond act and amendments and supplements thereto shall mature at such dates as shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury; provided that such obligations acquired by virtue of the provisions of the First Liberty Bond act or through the conversion of short-time obligations acquired under said act shall mature not later than June 15, 1947, and all other such obligations of foreign Governments shall mature not later than Oct. 15, 1936.

"Section 8. That the War Finance Corporation act is hereby amended by adding to Title I. thereof a new section to read as follows:

"'Section 21. That the corporation shall be empowered and authorized, in order to promote commerce with foreign nations through the extension of credits, to make advances upon such terms, not inconsistent with the provisions of this section, for periods not exceeding five years from the respective dates of such advances, to any person, firm, corporation, or association engaged in the business in the United States of exporting therefrom domestic raw materials, agricultural products, manufactured articles and other commodities to foreign countries, or to make advances to any bank, banker, or trust company conducting business in the United States which shall have made advances to any such person, firm, corporation, or association after this act shall have taken effect.

"'Such advances shall be limited in amount to not more than the market value of the goods to be exported at the port of shipment and at the time of shipment, (as estimated and determined by the corporation,) plus insurance and carrying or transportation charges to the foreign point of destination, if and to the extent that such insurance and carrying or transportation charges are payable in the United States to domestic insurers and carriers. Provided, that any such advances to a bank, banker, or trust company shall not exceed the amount remaining unpaid of the advances made by any such bank, banker, or trust company to any such person, firm, corporation, or association, and provided, further, that the aggregate of the advances made by the corporation under this section remaining unpaid shall never at any time exceed the sum of $1,000,000,000.

"'Notwithstanding the limitation of Section 1 of this act, the advances provided for by this section may be made until the expiration of one year after the termination of the war, the date of such termination to be fixed by proclamation of the President of the United States. All such advances shall be made upon the promissory note or notes of the borrower, secured in each instance by indorsement, guarantee, or otherwise, as the corporation sholl deem adequate. The corporation in its discretion may extend the time of repayment of any such advance through renewals, the substitution of new obligations, or otherwise, provided that the time for the repayment of any advance shall not be extended beyond five years from the date on which the same was originally made.'

"Section 9. That the last sentence but one of Section 15 of the War Finance Corporation Act be and is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'Beginning twelve months after the termination of the war, the date of such termination to be fixed by a proclamation of the President of the United States, the directors of the corporation shall proceed to liquidate its assets and to wind up its affairs, but the directors of the corporation, in their discretion, may, from time to time, prior to such date, sell and dispose of any securities or other property acquired by the corporation.'

"Section 10. That the short title of this act shall be 'Fifth Liberty Bond Act.'"

Business Basis, Bankers Say.

When the Secretary of the Treasury's summary of the legislation he is asking Congress to enact was read to prominent bankers over the telephone last night, they were not inclined to comment upon it for publication until after they had had an opportunity to read both Mr. Glass's letter to Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and the draft of the bill that accompanied the letter.

But the concensus of opinion seemed to be that Secretary Glass had asked for a great deal more than he expected to get and had definitely indicated that he favored the placing of future Government financing on more of a business basis than had been expected. One item of interest to the bankers was the request for the authorization of an issue of bonds and notes payable at a premium. This brought forth the opinion that the new bond issue probably would bear a high rate of interest.

Mr. Glass's request for the removal of the interest rate limitation in the case of bonds maturing not more than 10 years from the date of issue also attracted attention, and it was suggested that the ten-year stipulation might bear some relation to the life of the Victory Loan issue which probably will be offered in April. The request that authority be conferred upon the Secretary of the Treasury to determine the exemptions from taxation respecting new issues of bonds and notes was not so well received, but the accompanying request that authority be granted to him to enlarge the exemptions of existing Liberty bonds in the hands of subscribers for new bonds and notes found favor.

TWO JOBS IN ONE QUEERED COSTIGAN

Enright Reveals a Dual Capacity in Which the Inspector Was Undone.

DID WELL IN VICE SQUAD

But the Many Arrests He Made There Showed Him Lacking as District Inspector.

NO DOUBT ABOUT ARRESTS

Mr. Enright Retracts Previous Statements in His Hylan Letter —Avoids Answering Goff.

For the first time since he demoted Daniel E. Costigan from Inspector of the First Inspection District to be Captain of the Beach Street Station, Police Commissioner Enright explained yesterday how he reached his conclusion that Costigan's record was "rotten."

Costigan, besides being Inspector of the First District, was head of the Vice Squad, and as such made arrests in his own and other districts. As Inspector Costigan he made forty-one arrests in his district. As head of the Vice Squad he made 296 arrests in the same district. Thus Costigan of the Vice Squad proved Costigan of the First District to be "rotten"—that is, vice raider Costigan out-Costiganed Inspector Costigan.

In his letter to the Mayor last Friday Commissioner Enright asserted that while in command of the First Inspection District Costigan made 41 arrests for gambling while 316 arrests for the same offense were made by outside squads acting independently. Costigan's friends assert that he made 296 of these arrests.

"Isn't it true that of these 316 arrests that you say were made by outside squads acting independently, 296 of these arrests were made by Costigan as head of the Vice Squad in the First Inspection District and only 28 arrests were made by Inspector McDonald, head of Squad No. 2, in the First Inspection District?" the Commissioner was asked.

"I don't know. However, they were not made by Costigan as head of the First Inspection District. In any event, Costigan was not given the Vice Squad to work in his own district only."

"By that you mean that Costigan as head of the Vice Squad went into Inspector Costigan's district and made 296 arrests over Inspector Costigan's head. Is that so?"

"That's the way it looks."

Asked to make public figures regarding arrests made for gambling in other inspection districts, Commissioner Enright gave out the following figures:

Inspection District No.	Arrests.
3	60
4	93
5	34
6	23
11	63
12	127
14	118
15	39
16	53
17	30
18	37

"But did not Costigan participate as head of the Vice Squad in most of these arrests?"

"Yes."

Asked to give figures on arrests Costigan made as head of the Vice Squad in these districts, Mr. Enright gave the following:

Inspection District No.	Arrests.
3	23
4	38
5	14
6	20

"In other words, Costigan, as head of the Vice Sqad, was instrumental in making 155 arrests which were not credited to him. Is that correct?" asked one interviewer.

Mr. Enright made no reply.

"These arrests in the districts enumerated were made by Costigan as head of the Vice Squad and of the First Inspection District. Is that so?"

"Yes."

"Then you feel that Costigan as head of the Vice Squad and of the First Inspection District had no right to go into other inspectors' districts to make arrests?"

"Inspector Costigan should have made the arrests in Inspector Costigan's District."

"Do you think that as head of the Vice Squad Costigan had no right to make arrests in Inspector Costigan's district?"

"Inspector Costigan, like any other inspector held to accountability, should make arrests in his own district."

"In other words, if Costigan made arrests as head of the Vice Squad they were credited to the Vice Squad. If he made arrests as head of the First Inspection District they were credited to the Inspection District and not to Costigan. Is that correct?"

"Good afternoon," was Mr. Enright's reply.

It was revealed through further questioning of the Commissioner that Costigan spent a good deal of time cleaning up his own district before and during the time he was working in the others, but that in doing this he was working with the Vive Squad consisting of fifteen men and not with the three men allotted to him as Inspector of the district. The First District included all of the lower east side from Fourteenth Street down, a region said to have more large and small gambling houses and other illegal places than any other district in the city.

Mr. Enright was asked whether it was not a mere technicality that he did not give credit to Costigan as head of the Vice Squad for his share of the 316 arrests made in Inspector Costigan's district by "outside squads acting independently." He replied that it was not a technicality, but that it reflected discredit on the Inspector because the arrests were made by agencies other than those under Inspector Costigan as head of the inspection district.

Commissioner Enright retreated from the position he took last Saturday, when he declared that the claim made by Costigan's friends, that the latter's men made more than 2,000 arrests last year was not true. He made public figures saying that Costigan's men made 1,400 arrests last year for disorderly conduct and 381 additional miscellaneous arrests, 1,781 in all. Of these 805 resulted in discharge of the defendants, he said.

The Commissioner declined to make a reply to the statements published yesterday in a copyrighted article in The Tribune quoting John W. Goff, Jr., who resigned on Saturday as Third Deputy Commissioner, as saying that Costigan was "on the toboggan from the moment Enright went in," and that there is "a combination of circumstances, including the Costigan affair, which are not for the best interest of the department."

Hollis (for) and King (for) with Knox, (against.)

An analysis of the vote shows that, had all the Senators who were paired been able to vote, the result would have been 63 to 33, which would have left the outcome just as it was without them—one short of the requisite two-thirds.

Stand of Southern Democrats.

Eleven Southern Democrats voted for the resolution, as against ten when it was voted upon in December. The new advocate was Senator Pollock of South Carolina. Senator Gay of Louisiana was a disappointment to the suffrage proponents. In a speech he told the Senate that, while he had worked to get woman suffrage through the Louisiana Legislature as a State measure, he was opposed to making it part of the Federal Constitution.

"I believe in the right of the States to decide this matter for themselves," explained Senator Gay. He denounced the militants for their attacks on President Wilson, saying they had hurt the suffrage cause.

Senator Ransdell, colleague of Senator Gay, voted with the suffrage supporters. Senator Trammell of Florida, upon whom the suffragists brought particular pressure, even to the point of bringing up a delegation of legislators from his State to urge his support of the resolution, and who received one of President Wilson's cablegrams, stood firmly against it. Senator Martin, the Democratic floor leader, was inflexible in his opposition, even though he was warned by Democratic colleagues supporting the resolution that its defeat might "dig a hole" for the Democratic Party.

The Southern Democrats based their opposition, as before, upon the argument that woman suffrage ought to be disposed of by the States. They feared giving the negro women the vote.

After the resolution had been voted down, Republican Senators began to forecast the attitude of the next Republican Senate regarding it. They calculated upon a gain of three votes in favor, and a loss of one, making a net gain of two; this, with the votes already secure, would give one more than the necessary two-thirds, if the entire Senate voted. The three Senators to enter the next Congress who are known to be suffrage advocates are Mr. Ball of Delaware, who succeeds Senator Saulsbury; Edge of New Jersey, succeeding Senator Baird, and Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, succeeding Senator Weeks. The loss will come with the vote of Mr. Dial of South Carolina, who succeeds Senator Pollock.

The galleries presented a display of Spring millinery fashions, as the Senate assembled. The ushers were careful to separate the militant suffragists, who yesterday burned President Wilson in effigy, from the less belligerent suffragists. The anti-suffragettes were allotted a gallery by themselves.

Preceded by Brief Debate.

The suffrage resolution came up just after 1 o'clock, when Senator Jones asked that it be considered. No opposition was raised. Senator Williams of Mississippi offered an amendment restricting the vote to white women, but it was ruled out of order, as the resolution was up on third reading.

Senator Pollock explained why he would support the resolution.

"For a century and a half we have had the privilege of the vote for one-half of our people and slavery for the other half," he said. "The pending amendment does not in any way interfree with State rights. It will have no effect whatever on the race question. It would not mean negro supremacy in the South. The white women would hold control over the negro vote just as the white men do with the vote of the negro men."

"I will vote for the resolution because I believe in it," said Senator Calder of New York.

Senator Wadsworth of New York, whose wife is a member of the anti-suffragists, did not attempt to defend his vote against it.

Senator Frelinghuysen offered an amendment to the resolution, as he did before, to provide drastic naturalization of alien women.

"I favor woman suffrage when proper safeguards are thrown around it for worthy women," said the New Jersey Senator. "But we face the situation of having too many alien women marrying Americans simply to get the benefits of American citizenship, and this, with our lax immigration laws, becomes a menace."

The Senator's amendment was ruled out of order. He voted, notwithstanding, for the resolution.

After Senator Gay had explained his attitude the Senate voted.

The National American Woman's Suffrage Association in a statement denounced the opponents of suffrage. They placed the blame for the defeat of the resolution upon the Democrats.

FIVE DAYS IN JAIL FOR 25 MILITANTS

Mrs. Havemeyer Among Those Sentenced for Anti-Wilson Outbreak—Threaten Strike.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Twenty-five members of the National Woman's Party, including Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer and three other women from New York, who participated in the demonstration in front of the White House yesterday afternoon, when President Wilson was burned in effigy, were arraigned before Judge Hardison in the District Police Court this morning and sentenced to five days each in jail. Another woman received a sentence of two days. All announced that they would go on hunger strikes.

In all there were thirty-nine women brought to the Police Court for a hearing, on charges of building fires on Government property, standing on the coping around the White House, or attempting to make disorderly speeches. The New York women, besides Mrs. Havemeyer, were Miss Edith Aings, Mrs. W. D. Ascough, and Miss Louise Bryant, each of whom was sent to jail for five days; Miss Lucy Burns, who was released, and Miss Cora Week, Miss Amy Gungling, and Miss Palys Chevrier, who escaped without a hearing because the court decided to adjourn before they were actually called before the bar of justice.

Miss Sue White of Nashville, Tenn., one of the women who helped to shove the effigy of the President into the flames after several attempts had been thwarted by the police, got a five-day sentence. Nine women from Philadelphia received similar sentences. The others sentenced to jail came from various sections of the country.

The militants apparently were not perturbed by the action of the court and showed no regret for what they had done. Mrs. Havemeyer, in fact, stoutly defended their action.

O'LEARY GERMAN AID VICTORICA TESTIFIES

Says He Selected Robinson to Carry Spy Messages to Europe for Her.

A FRIEND OF ROEDIGER

Witness Admits Addiction to Drugs—Nearing's Pacifist Pamphlets Introduced Against Him.

Marie K. de Victorica, also known as the Baroness von Kretschmann, who has been called Germany's premier woman spy in the United States by agents of the Department of Justice familiar with her activities, testified at yesterday's session of the trial of Jeremiah A. O'Leary before Federal Judge A. N. Hand. Under the interrogation of Assistant United States District Attorney James W. Osborne, she said that O'Leary had aided her in sending secret messages to Germany in connection with her activities here.

Victorica, who is confined in the internment camp on Ellis Island awaiting trial as a German plotter, was attired in expensive clothing. She wore a coat of sable with a muff to match, two cluster rings of diamonds and a ring set with a large emerald.

She testified that she came to the United States in January, 1917, as an agent of the Propaganda Division of the German Foreign Office, also on a special mission for the German Admiralty, the nature of which she did not particularize.

Victorica told of meeting O'Leary in an uptown restaurant in company with Carl Roediger, under indictment for treason in connection with German plotting against the United States. It was shortly afterward, Victorica declared, that O'Leary, Roediger, and herself met again and discussed the situation in this country.

"I told O'Leary," she testified, "that we needed somebody to go to the other side with a statement of the situation here in America. O'Leary said he couldn't promise, but maybe he could get some one."

Over the objection of Arthur O'Leary of counsel for his brother, Victorica swore that the defendant later suggested Jay Willard Robinson as a suitable messenger. O'Leary warned her, she added, that he would allow Robinson to go only on condition that there should be nothing against the United States in any message he might carry. O'Leary also insisted that she promise to take care of Robinson's mother should anything happen to him, the witness said. Robinson is awaiting trial for treason.

The instructions she gave Robinson in the presence of O'Leary, according to the witness, were to communicate with the Consul General of Germany in Amsterdam, Holland, that Schroeder (one of the names under which Roediger acted) needed men with chemical knowledge here to carry out his plans. She said she gave Robinson a written message also in which she warned the German authorities not to trust him with any work being carried on here.

Victorica declared that O'Leary urged her to give up an apartment she had taken at the Spencer Arms, in upper Broadway, and move to the Hotel Netherland as he believed a private apartment was dangerous for her. She did as he suggested, she said, because she knew she was being watched. After Robinson returned from his mission abroad, Victorica testified, she and O'Leary rode in an auto from Long Beach, where she was staying, to an uptown restaurant, where the three conferred together.

Under cross-examination, Victorica admitted being a drug addict, and told of taking treatment at Bellevue Hospital, the Florence Crittenton Home, and Waverley House, places where she had been confined since her arrest. She had been taking morphine for more than twenty years, she said, but in steadily decreasing quantities. She admitted that she had lied when she had told the doctors at Bellevue Hospital that she was born in Argentina.

"You would tell a lie to save your life?" asked Arthur O'Leary, after questioning her on her indictment and approaching trial.

"No, never," she replied, heatedly.

"Has any one promised you money to give testimony against Jeremiah O'Leary?"

"No."

"Did you ever hear anybody say the authorities were anxious to get evidence of an Irish plot?" she was asked.

She said she had, though she was unable to recollect who had told her.

The witness was also examined at length by Colonel Thomas Felder, chief counsel for the defendant, who sought to show that because of her addiction to drugs her testimony was valueless. The trial will be continued today with Victorica on the stand.

Pacifist pamphlets, one entitled "The Menace of Militarism" and another "The Great Madness," written by Scott Nearing after the United States had entered the war, were introduced yesterday at Nearing's trial in the Federal Court of Judge Mayer. Nearing is charged with attempting to obstruct the draft.

In the examination of Isaac Sackin, Recording Secretary of the American Socialist Society, it was brought out that the Rand School was endowed largely through the efforts of George D. Herron, one of the Americans sent by President Wilson to confer with the Bolsheviki in Russia. Sackin and George N. Cohan, Chairman of the Committee on Publications of the society, were called by the prosecution to show connection between the defendant and the American Socialist Society. Cohan identified pacifist pamphlets written by Nearing some of which he said he had seen in manuscript form in the Rand School. The trial will be continued today.

SAYS McKAY WAS PROFANE.

Woman Testifies Against Deposed Deputy Probation Officer.

Testimony tending to show that George D. McKay, former Chief Deputy Probation officer, who was deposed by Chief City Magistrate McAdoo after investigation of charges of insubordination and misconduct brought against him last Fall by Chief Probation Officer Edward J. Cooley, was discourteous to women court employes was given yesterday at the hearing into the affair before Commissioner of Accounts David Hirschfield. The present inquiry was ordered by Mayor Hylan on McKay's complaint that he had not received a "square deal."

Five witnesses for Cooley were examined, one of whom, Miss Rose McQuade, of 2,486 Concord Street, the Bronx, testified that she had been a probation officer in the Domestic Relations Court for five years, and came under the supervision of McKay when she was assigned to do field work. She testified that it was McKay's habit to use profane and indecent language and tell coarse jokes in the presence of women probation officers. She said that McKay on one occasion found fault with her work and cursed her before witnesses.

"I never went into his office," she said, "but that I felt that I would rather go anywhere else."

Joseph L. Murphy of 265 East 181st Street, the Bronx, who was formerly a stenographer for Mr. Cooley said that in his opinion McKay showed no interest in the former's endeavor to make the probation department better. On one occasion, he said, when the subject of getting the Board of Estimate to appoint sixteen more probation officers was under discussion, McKay offered to bet him $100 that the measure would not be reported favorably. Henry G. Rosenthal, of 415 Avenue C, Brooklyn, also testified that he had noticed McKay's alleged general discourtesy. The hearing will be continued on Feb. 13.

HOUSE PRAISES LEAGUE.

Sends Message of Congratulation from Paris to Taft.

The League to Enforce Peace received a cable dispatch yesterday from Colonel E. M. House congratulating its President, William Howard Taft, on the success of the National Congress for a League of Nations. The message, which came from Paris and was addressed to William H. Short, the Secretary of the Congress, said:

> Please convey to Mr. Taft my heartiest congratulations and felicitations over the admirable work that is being done by the organization of which he is the head.

Colonel House's message has been forwarded to Mr. Taft at Chicago, where he is now acting as Chairman for the Great Lakes Congress for a League of Nations. This is the third in the series, the second having been held in Boston. Mr. Taft and other speakers will go on to seven other cities in the West and South where similar conventions will be held during the month.

BIG NAVY PLAN BLOCKED BY RULE

graph before the House, Mr. Padgett offered an amendment to appropriate $2,000,000 for the building program contemplated. This did not carry the limitation. Representative C. B. Miller of Minnesota amended this to increase the appropriation to $210,000,000. Before acting on these amendments the committee rose.

If the committee tomorrow brings in a rule declaring the objectionable paragraphs in order, there will be a prolonged fight over the acceptance of the special rule. Unless such a rule can be obtained it is believed, judged by the attitude of the House today, the building program will be defeated.

The clause limiting the three-year building program, which was placed in the bill at the request of President Wilson, causing the trouble today, reads:

"If at any time before the construction authorized by this act shall have been contracted for there shall have been established with the co-operation of the United States of America any tribunal or tribunals competent to secure peaceful determination of international disputes and which shall render unnecessary the maintenance of competitive armaments, then and in that case such naval expenditure as may be inconsistent with the engagements made by the establishment of said tribunal or tribunals may be suspended when so ordered by the President of the United States and no contracts for the construction of vessels herein authorized shall be entered into prior to Feb. 1, 1920."

Speeches made both before and after the successful fight by Mr. Mann showed that the House was unwilling to take the responsibility of authorizing an enlargement of the navy on the terms apparently dictated by the President's confidential cable dispatch, the exact text of which has never been revealed.

"Now is the time for us to trim this naval program," said Representative Johnson of Washington. "It is time that we stopped blindly voting for enormous appropriations without knowing what they are for. I am one of the members of the House who has read the telegram that Secretary Daniels sent to the President regarding this naval bill, and the reply of the President. Unfortunately the President's cablegram was couched in such terms that it cannot be made public, but the general tenor of it has been made public.

"The telegram of Secretary Daniels was nothing but a polite invitation for the President to help this bill through Congress, and the President's message an attempt to comply with that request. It is time we put a stop to this kind of dictation."

"If we are going to punish the President," said Representative Emerson of Ohio, "we should not do it in the eyes of the world, but wait until we get him here where we can do it in domestic privacy."

"We are putting the cart before the horse," said Representative Wood of Indiana, "if we authorize an increase in the navy now. The navy program should be made to fit the peace program, and now we do not know what will be done over there. The one thing that the people of the country and of the world are interested in is the conclusion of peace and the greatest service that the President can perform for the world is to get down to brass tacks, and do the work that the Peace Conference has assembled to do."

Chairman Padgett again told the House that he had made public the substance of both messages exchanged between Secretary Daniels and the President on the naval program. He declined to divulge the actual text of these messages.

"Is the House asked to vote for a navy or for a threat?" asked Representative McCormick of Illinois during the discussion of this amendment.

"No threat is implied in any part of this bill," replied Mr. Padgett.

Quoting Colonel Roosevelt, Representative Osborne of California reminded the House of the late President's admonition, "Speak softly, but carry a big stick."

"That is a maxim worth following," said Mr. Osborne. "I am for a great American navy irrespective of the mistakes that the President may have made. I should have supported this bill if the President had said nothing about it."

Representative Mann, Republican leader, and Representative Madden of Illinois both charged the big navy men with an attempt to evade real legislative authorization for a greater navy by failing to appropriate for it.

"You are trying to hoodwink the American public," said Mr. Madden, "by authorizing a great navy without providing any money to build it. It is a deliberate attempt to deceive."

Representative Miller of Minnesota, Republican, urged that both Republicans and Democrats join in authorizing a new building program and in providing adequate funds to complete it.

"I have offered an amendment to appropriate $210,000,000, the estimated amount it will cost to build these ten battleships," said Mr. Miller, "and I am not bluffing about it. I have always believed in building a great navy. There is no nation that needs a great navy more than the United States. Everyone knows that with our present navy we cannot defend the Panama Canal, cannot defend our coast line, nor our interests in Alaska, the Philippines, and elsewhere. While we are about it, let us build the kind of navy that Theodore Roosevelt said we should build twenty years ago."

The committee has concluded consideration of the bill except the building program.

Keeping Your Teeth

THERE is a reasonable way—cleanliness first; and if you ever think they need drugs, go to your dentist or doctor.

Brushing the teeth with plain water will clear the mouth of acidity as well as a dentifrice will. No need of drugs. That's positive.

Dr. Lyon's is recommended by dentists and used by millions of refined people because it is as safe as water, cleans the teeth more thoroughly and quickly, removes the mucus plaque (film) and polishes at the same time. It removes also the possibility of the misapplication of drugs. It contains none.

The Aeolian Company Announces A Great Lincoln Day

SALE OF FAMOUS

WEBER PIANOLAS

97 Exchanged and Re-modeled Instruments costing originally $1000 and upward, marked for this Sale as low as

$585

On very low Monthly payments

Also a limited number of other popular models of the Pianola, including the celebrated Steck, Wheelock, Stuyvesant and Stroud. Prices $475 upwards. Monthly payments from $15.

IN this Sale Announcement is chronicled one of the most important selling events in the musical history of New York. There is no musical instrument made the value of which is so well established, both in the American and European markets, as the Weber Pianola. The Aeolian Company, its makers, hold seven Royal Appointments conferred on the strength of this instrument's magnificent quality and character.

The price of the Weber Pianola is at all times rigidly maintained. A new Weber Pianola, practically the same as those in this Sale, costs today from $1300 upward.

These exchanged instruments—97 of them—are, for the most part, priced under $600. They are absolutely unprecedented in value.

The advent of the wonderful new Duo-Art Pianola has brought back to the Aeolian Company these, and a large number of other regular Pianola models.

In the factories where they were made these exchanged Pianolas have been tuned, regulated, and re-polished until they are indistinguishable from new. Moreover, every one is fully guaranteed by the Aeolian Company exactly the same as when new.

Every one who has desired a Player-Piano—every one who longs for the pleasure and educational advantages which are brought to the home by a magnificent piano that every one can play—should certainly attend this great One Day Sale. The opportunity to obtain a Weber Pianola at such a price, will probably never occur again.

There are also a limited number of other Pianolas, with such celebrated names as the Steck, Wheelock, Stuyvesant and Stroud. All of these are in the same splendid condition as the Webers, and are completely guaranteed.

Every Pianola in the Sale is a full-scale, 88-note instrument with all latest improvements and expression devices.

Prices as low as $475. Monthly payments as low as $15.

IMPORTANT

This Sale is for one day only. As the number of instruments is limited, as early a visit to Aeolian Hall as possible is advisable. All Departments, including the Aeolian-Vocalion Salons, will be open all day on Wednesday.

ELEVEN MORE QUIT BROOKLYN GREETERS

TO DISMISS PAID WORKERS

Delaney Says No Action Has Been Taken on Return of Contributions.

Lawrence Abraham and ten other Brooklynites resigned yesterday from the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee in protest againsnt the attempted domination by the sympathizers of William Randolph Hearst, a member of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to the Homecoming Troops. Mrs. William A. Prendergast, wife of the former Controller, and several others demanded the return of contributions sent to the committee before Nathan S. Jonas resigned as Chairman.

Some of the letters referred directly to Hearst and Mayor Hylan and others said that the "political situation" had caused them to desire to retire. Mr. Abraham, who is one of the members of the firm of Abraham & Straus, operating the department store in Brooklyn, said that he resigned because "of the political situation which has arisen, and which will tend to divert the original purpose for which the committee was created." Mrs. Prendergast said that she did not wish her money used by the present committee "born, as it has been, out of circumstances which I heartily condemn."

John J. Delaney, the new Chairman of the committee, said yesterday that no decision had been made on the demands for the return of money contributed to the fund for the permanent memorial, but it was intimated by other members of the Executive Committee that the money would not be returned. It is their attitude that the money was given for the memorial and that a new committee could carry out that purpose. As one of his changes in the management of the committee Chairman Delaney said that all paid workers of the committee would be dismissed and volunteers recruited to take their places. He asserted that about $10,000 of the $40,000 collected had been expended and added: "How could we return all this money, even if we thought it desirable?"

Mrs. Prendergast also wrote a letter to Mr. Jonas praising him for his opposition to efforts of the Hearst sympathizers to dictate the course of the committee. Others who wrote him letters of the same tenor yesterday were: R. J. Perrine, Corbett McCarthy, Samuel F. Thompson, L. J. Filer, and Frazier Curtis, an American who served with the French Army. Mrs. Prendergast wrote:

"I want you to know that you have my entire sympathy and approval in the course you have taken in refusing to permit the committee, so long as you were its Chairman, to become subservient to any personal or political interests."

In resigning his place on the committee Frank Harvey Field, the lawyer, wrote:

"I cannot remain on a committee which is dominated by Hearst. I have served on a draft board and had a hand in raising the army now in France. I also have a boy there who is soon coming home. In my opinion a committee dominated by Hearst is an insult to the boys and to their families."

The others who resigned were Caspar V. Gunther, Louis Berger, Abraham Sterzelbach, Edward E. H. Cerner, Walter Rothschild, John F. Dower, John Skelton, Isaac Meseritz, Flora M. Crawford, Mrs. August Dreyer, and Mrs. Helen G. Daley.

It was announced yesterday by the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops that vaudeville shows and boxing bouts would be held tomorrow night as part of the welcome to the 57th Artillery, formerly the 9th Coast Defense command, and the 59th, formerly the 13th Coast Defense command. The 57th is to be entertained in the 71st Regiment Armory, at Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue, and the 59th at the 13th Regiment Armory, at Sumner and Jefferson Avenues, Brooklyn. Soldiers may obtain tickets at the committee headquarters at the Hall of Records.

In speaking of a complaint by an anonymous marine that the reception committees here were making complete plans to greet soldiers and sailors, but were neglecting marines, representatives of all the committees said that no such discrimination had been intended. It was pointed out by members of the Mayor's Committee that the marines have been named in every resolution of greeting, and their designation had been painted on every banner. Members of the Independent Citizens' Committee and the Brooklyn Victory Committee said the Marine Corps had been mentioned in all their resolutions and at all their meetings.

Anthracite Available

For all communities—For all purposes—In any quantity

By an order effective February 1, 1919, the U. S. Fuel Administrator permits the resumption of shipments of anthracite in any quantity, to any community and to any consumer, and suspends all regulations and restrictions on the price of hard coal. Coincident with the issuance of the order the Fuel Administrator gave to the press the following statement relative to the prices of anthracite which during the period of the war had been fixed by the Administration:

"By his Executive Order of August 23, 1917, the President adopted as maximum prices for anthracite coal, the schedule of prices which had been acquiesced in by the industry while under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission under the so-called 'Calder' resolution of the Senate. This involved one price for the railroad controlled coal companies, and a price of 75c higher for the individuals. With the exception of a reduction of sixty cents a ton in the prices for pea coal made October 1, 1917, and two adjustments to cover increases in miners' wages, the Fuel Administration allowed the prices fixed by the President to stand pending examination of costs such as were made in the case of bituminous coal.

"For the purpose of arriving at a fair increase in price to cover the increase in wages recommended by the War Labor Board last October, an examination was made to determine the costs of the various anthracite producing companies. The result of this examination showed that the general increases in the price of materials and labor had raised the cost of mining anthracite to such an extent that many of the companies were not receiving a fair return and that some producers of necessary coal were actually sustaining a loss on the sale of coal at the Government prices, in spite of the two increases allowed on account of advances to labor.

"At the time this situation was discovered every indication pointed to an early peace and it was deemed unwise to increase the maximum prices so near the time when, on account of the end of the war, price restrictions would in the natural course of events, be lifted entirely.

"The above statement made at this time, when price restrictions are about to be lifted, out of fairness to those companies who have patriotically kept up their production to war needs, even at a cost which resulted in many instances in a loss, not only by the individuals, but also by some of the railroad companies, so that the impression shall not exist that the Government prices of anthracite coal, in existence at the time of the lifting of restrictions were prices which the Fuel Administration had fixed on the basis of cost to the operators.

"Had the Fuel Administration's active control over maximum prices on anthracite coal been continued, the cost examination above referred to shows that it would have been necessary, on the basis of the present wage scale, to raise these maximum prices possibly as much as 50 cents a ton above those last fixed by the Government, in order to prevent financial embarrassment and perhaps the closing of companies producing a substantial per cent. of the necessary anthracite output.

"Such a curtailment of production would eventually result in the demand exceeding the supply to such an extent as to increase the prices much higher than they would be if that supply were continued."

TEX RICKARD GETS SIGNATURES TO CLINCH BOUT FOR HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP

DEMPSEY IS SIGNED TO FIGHT WILLARD

Salt Lake City Boxer Accepts Rickard's Offer of $27,500 for Bout.

STAGED IN FERRY HOUSE

Fighter and Promoter Affix Names in Weehawken—Challenger is Confident.

In an out-of-the-way corner of the Weehawken, N. J., terminal of the West Shore Railroad Jack Dempsey, Salt Lake City heavyweight, yesterday signed articles to box Jess Willard, title holder, in a heavyweight championship bout to be promoted in July, probably on Independence Day, by Tex Rickard.

Under the terms of the contract the bout will be any distance up to forty rounds. Willard will receive $100,000 and one-third of the moving-picture rights, while Dempsey is guaranteed $27,500, with one-third of the moving-picture privileges.

Rickard, by mutual arrangement with Dempsey and Jack Kearns, the boxer's manager, agrees to deposit forthwith the sum of $10,000 in a bank to be decided upon, while Kearns and Dempsey will post $5,000 as a guarantee of good faith. Forty-eight hours before the time of the bout Rickard agrees to deposit the remaining $17,500, Dempsey's share of the purse. Dempsey, with Willard, must be on the scene of the bout six weeks before the date of the proposed contest to complete training for the match.

With the exception of the financial differences and an additional provision, the contract signed by Dempsey is similar to the one which Willard signed Jan. 24 at Chicago. The additional provision sets forth that if the match is promoted outside of North America Promoter Rickard agrees to defray the traveling expenses of the participants. This condition will shortly be inserted in the Willard contract.

Dempsey, like the champion, is prohibited from taking part in any boxing match between now and the time he enters the ring against Willard, at a time and place to be announced by Rickard sixty days prior to the date of the contest.

Waste No Time Signing.

The actual signing of the contract by Dempsey was dispatched with an absence of much of the glamor and ceremonies which have marked the closing of negotiations for important ring bouts in the past. The forthcoming match will make pugilistic history, in point of purse moneys, particularly, yet there was no flourishing of huge sums of money or popping of corks or any of the other attending features which have come almost to be regarded as customary with the conclusion of preliminary details in connection with important ring happenings.

When this had been completed, Promoter Rickard and his party decided to repair to New Jersey, for the purpose of formally signing the articles. This was decided expedient, so that there could be no question about the legality of the agreement.

Emerging from the Claridge, Rickard, Dempsey, Dorgan, and Kearns were met by a battery of movie operators, whose machines were all posed for the occasion. The quartet was instructed to stand against the hotel wall and "look businesslike." On both sides were hundreds of animated faces, while on the farther cubstone were lined additional hundreds, all eager to get a peek at the challenger for Willard's crown. After the pictures were taken the party climbed into a waiting taxi and was driven to the West Shore ferry.

On the contract signed appeared the names of four Jacks. They were Jack Dempsey, Jack Kearns, Jack (Ike) Dorgan, and Jack Skelley, the old-time featherweight boxer.

Dempsey Going on the Stage.

Dempsey, with Manager Kearns, left this city last night for Uniontown, Penn., where the challenger is scheduled to open today with a theatrical company. This engagement will run for six weeks. Promoter Rickard will remain in New York until Friday, when he plans to journey to Texas for a two weeks' visit to inspect his oil holdings there.

Rickard was enthusiastic over the easy manner in which the details were concluded. Not a hitch arose at any time during the afternoon. He paid a tribute to the business methods of both Kearns and Dempsey when the articles were signed. Promoter Rickard has not yet made up his mind where he will promote the match. He is considering several offers from various parts of the country, and will make no definite announcement on the location for the bout until all these offers have been investigated.

Latest offers which Promoter Rickard has under consideration come from Fred Dyer, Australian welterweight boxer, and James Dougherty, Pennsylvania promoter. Dyer, who is boxing instructor at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., made a proposal to have the bout held in a huge stadium at the Illinois camp. This stadium can seat 40,000 spectators, according to Dyer, and the officials of the camp are favorable to the scheme to conduct the proposed bout there. Dougherty, who promoted the Benny Leonard-Johnny Kilbane six-round bout in Philadelphia last July, wants Promoter Rickard to entertain a proposition to conduct the bout at Eddystone, Penn., where twenty-round bouts are permitted.

Rickard yesterday delegated Dyer to confer with army and navy officials at Washington on the proposal to have an army-navy championship heavyweight bout precede the Willard-Dempsey contest.

Another veteran was lost to the Columbia swimming team yesterday when J. Cagney, acting Captain of the squad, announced that he would not remain in the university this Spring. He was a fast sprinter and one of the best divers in intercollegiate circles.

Hal Vollmer, who was Captain of Columbia's team in 1917 and was expected to return to the university this year, has decided to enter business. Although he is lost to college swimming, he will compete regularly for the New York Athletic Club.

MOORE SKATES TO VICTORY.

Defeats Shields in One-Mile Handicap Race.

Joe Moore of the Ice Palace Skating Club defeated a large field in a one-mile handicap race at the Ice Palace, 181st Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, last night. Moore started from scratch and finished with an advantage of about twenty yards on N. C. Shields of the Palace Skating Club. His time was 3:08. In a one-lap exhibition Raymond Murray, a seven-year-old skater, covered the distance in 0:14 1-5, eclipsing his best previous record by four-fifths of a second.

The summaries:

One-half Mile Race, Novice.—Won by M. Kaufman, Palace Skating Club; A. Peldai, unattached, second; J. Roland, Palace Skating Club, third. Time—1:43 1-5.

One Mile Race, Handicap.—Won by Joe Moore, Ice Palace Skating Club, (scratch;) N. C. Shields, Palace Skating Club, (70 yards,) second; H. D. Carter, Ice Palace Skating Club, (20 yards,) third. Time—3:08.

Crane Beats Barton at Snooker.

Raymond Crane defeated George Barton last night in the snooker pool tournament of the A. A. B. A. at Doyle's billiard academy by a score of 100 to 85. At English billiards J. Lawler overcame E. Sibley by a count of 140 to 96. Max Winchell gained the decision over Charles Holden in a closely contested game at pocket billiards by the score of 50 to 40.

Blaisdell Defeats Steinbugler.

J. M. Blaisdell defeated Robert Steinbugler last night in the Victory Handicap 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at the Rational Recreation Academy in Brooklyn by a score of 130 to 97. Steinbugler was playing for 140 points. Blaisdell completed his string in forty-three innings, for an average of 3 1-43. He had a high run of 14. Steinbugler scored the highest run of the match when he gathered 17 points. His average was 2 13-42.

The Glencoe A. C. track and field team has been strengthened by the addition of Eddie Weiman, a former Morningside A. C. distance runner. Weiman's affiliation with the Glencoe A. C. became known yesterday.

HARVARD CREW MAY DEFEND HENLEY CUP

Cambridge Oarsmen Likely to be Represented in Challenge Race on Thames.

A movement has been started to send a Harvard crew to England in July to defend the Grand Challenge Cup at the Henley regatta. The suggestion has been put before the Harvard authorities by the Harvard Alumni Bulletin in its latest issue. The second Harvard crew, coached by Robert Herrick and stroked by Charles Lund, won the cup at Henley in 1914, and since that year there has been no race.

The Harvard Bulletin, in discussing the probability of entering a Harvard crew in July, says: "Many rowing men believe that it would be good sportsmanship to have Harvard represented in the regatta by an eight made up either of undergraduates or of recent graduates, and that the entry of such a crew would tend to strengthen the friendship of England and the United States.

"It is taken for granted that Yale and Harvard will resume their boat races at New London. The rowing men in each college apparently desire to renew their annual contests on the course which has been used, with two interruptions, for about forty years. Harvard rowed at Poughkeepsie in 1896 and 1897, and because of the war there was no race in 1917. In spite of these two breaks, the picturesque races at New London have become almost as important rowing events in this country as the contest on the other side of the ocean between Oxford and Cambridge and the regattas at Henley on the Thames."

If Harvard decides to defend the cup this year, it is doubtful if the crew which races at New London will be available, although the New London race this year will probably be held earlier than usual. This would not give the crew a chance to go across in time to hold any practice after arriving there. It is very likely that a crew of undergraduates will not be chosen, because of the curtailment of sports at Cambridge this year.

There is a drawback to a crew of graduates because most of the promising oarsmen are members of the Union Boat Club of Boston. Lund, who stroked the Harvard second crew, when it won the cup five years ago, is now stroke of the Union crew. This crew has entered the American Henley at Philadelphia this year and will make every effort to win. The Union crew also expects to go to the English Henley in 1920. Bill Haines, who coached the Harvard crews, will also coach the Union Boat Club. If Harvard did choose to send a crew of graduates to defend the cup, their chances of winning would be far better than the under-graduate crew which will be developed there in the Spring.

The discussion of the race by Harvard oarsmen on this side will undoubtedly bring about a definite announcement about this year's Henley regatta. Guy Nickalls, the English oarsman who coached the Yale crews for several seasons, in discussing a regatta this year, writes as follows:

"As the standard of oarsmanship is unlikely to be high, it is not thought the Challenge Cups will be offered for competition or that the standard medals and cups will be given as prizes. A year or more must elapse before we can hope to bring the rowing at Henley regatta up to anything approaching either the quantity or quality of 1912, 1913, or 1914."

Henley regatta was inaugurated in 1839, and was carried on without a break until 1914. In this last race, all the crews were eliminated in the preliminaries except two American crews, the Union Boat Club and the Harvard second eight. The latter crew won the Grand Challenge Cup by defeating Union, and the trophy has been held there by Harvard since that time.

Princeton Hockey Team Loses.

Princeton's hockey team, which is scheduled to play Yale on Saturday night, was defeated last night by the Brooklyn Hockey Club skaters in a game at Brooklyn Ice Palace by a score of 2 goals to 1. The Brooklyn team's tallies were made by Fred B. Mohle and Frank Farah, Brooklyn high school players. Mohle registered the initial goal late in the opening period, while Farah's count came early in the second period.

ROVERS WIN POLO MATCH.

Kinney and Blackwell Star in Defeat of Squadron A Trio.

Standing of the Teams.

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
White Owls	2	0	1000
Meadow Larks	1	0	1000
Fox Hunters	1	1	.500
Rovers	1	1	.500
Eagles	0	1	.000
Squadron A	0	2	.000

The Rovers polo trio whitewashed the Squadron A poloists last night in the Phillips Cup tournament at Durland's Riding Academy by the score of 19½ goals to 9. The nine goals showing in the total for the Squadron A players represented a handicap which the Rovers conceded their rivals.

Archie Kinney and Dr. H. B. Blackwell did the bulk of the work for the victorious team. The defense of the soldiers was weak. The handicap they received enabled the Squadron A trio to end the first period in the lead by a score of 9 to 8. Kinney scored three goals and Dr. Blackwell five. In the second half Kinney accounted for seven goals while Dr. Blackwell added four more to his total. Another goal was registered by Grannis. In this period Dr. Blackwell committed a foul and he was penalized one-half point.

The lineup:

ROVERS, (19½.)	SQUADRON A, (9.)
No. 1—A. Kinney.	No. 1—G. Maynard.
No. 2—Dr. Blackwell.	No. 2—V. Grimwood.
Back—R. Grannis.	Back—R. Cooke.

Goals—First period: Kinney, (3.) Dr. Blackwell, (5;) second period: Kinney, (7,) Dr. Blackwell, (4.) Grannis. Referee—M. Phillips. Timekeeper—M. Wilder. Time of periods—Ten minutes.

TWO TIE FOR GOLF MEDAL.

Van Buren and Baxter Have Low Score in Florida Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 10.—The qualifying round of the annual South Florida championship, played today, resulted in a tie for the medal, J. N. Van Buren of Sherwood and W. J. Baxter of the Oakland Country Club both turning in cards of 75, which they will play off later in the week. Van Buren was winner of the medal in the Lakewood tourney, two weeks ago, in 77. Alfred Morrell was off his game, taking an 81.

The field, numbering 135, was one of the largest that ever started here. Five flights qualified. The 82s drew for the first flight. It took an 86 to get into the second, and it was necessary to break 90 for the third.

The scores, qualifying round, first flight:

J. N. Van Buren, Sherwood, 35, 40—75; W. J. Baxter, Oakland Country, 36, 39—75; A. J. Mendez, Siwanoy, 32, 45—77; Andrew Carnegie 2d, Myopia, 36, 43—79; H. C. Clarke, Myopia, 36, 43—79; G. W. Palmer, Miami, 38, 41—79; Charles E. Van Vleck, Jr., Montclair, 39, 41—80; W. R. Simons, New York, 37, 43—80; A. S. Ridley, Englewood, 39, 41—80; Alfred Morrell, Hackensack, 41, 40—81; Quintin Feitner, South Shore Field, 36, 45—81; G. W. Bowes, London, 40, 41—80; C. Grady, New York, 37, 44—81; A. H. Poehler, Minneapolis, 37, 44—81; Russell Colt, New York, 38, 44—82.

M'GRAW TO SETTLE HAL CHASE CLAIM

New York Manager Empowered by Herrmann to Adjust Suit Against Reds.

Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants returned from Cincinnati yesterday after an unsuccessful hunt for Hal Chase. That the temperamental first baseman will soon be in the Giants' fold, however, seems certain, as it is understood that President Herrmann of Cincinnati has given the New York manager authority to bring about a settlement of Chase's suit against the Reds. McGraw and Chase will get together today and it is believed that the first baseman's claim of something like $1,600 in back salary will be adjusted.

Chase maintains that, when he was suspended last August by Manager Christy Mathewson, three weeks' salary was due him which he has never received. Chase says that the club probably held back the pay because at the time many of the players were jumping to the shipyards. The first baseman argues that this holding back of salary in his case was unnecessary because he was over the draft age at the time.

When Manager McGraw got to Cincinnati he was informed by Herrmann that the deal for the first baseman could not be consummated until Chase's suit had been either withdrawn or settled. As Chase lives in the Bronx, McGraw was empowered by Herrmann to see the first baseman and fix up their differences. It is not expected that McGraw will have any trouble in coming to an understanding with Hal, because the first baseman is anxious to play with the Giants, and means to refute all suspicions about his indifferent playing by his work with the McGraw team this Summer.

With Chase, Doyle, Fletcher, and Zimmerman cavorting around the infield, the Giants should make a noise in the National League this year. Even with Slim Sallee absent, the pitching staff looks like the best McGraw has had for several seasons. The best news that McGraw has received in some time comes from Ferdie Schupp, the Giants' southpaw, who is spending the Winter at his home in Louisville. Schupp says that the rheumatic condition in his pitching arm which made his wing useless last season has entirely disappeared, and he expects that it will be able to pitch as well as ever.

Secretary Foster yesterday sent Dick Hemingway, the Giants' utility infielder, who was sent to the Phillies last season, to the Indianapolis Club.

Two more members of the Yankees joined the fold yesterday. The signed contract of Ping Bodie arrived, so the weighty left fielder will again decorate the outer garden. Muddy Ruel, who is expected to relieve Truck Hannah of much of the catching duty next Summer, has also signed his contract.

President John A. Heydler of the National League is in Washington, where he is maknig an effort to locate the several players who are in the service on the other side. It is expected that most of these players will be back within the next month.

TAFT HOCKEY TEAM WINS.

Choate School Skaters Are Defeated by 5 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERTOWN, Conn., Feb. 10.—Taft School's hockey seven overwhelmed the Choate School of Wallingford skaters on the Taft rink here this afternoon by the score of 5 goals to 0. The Taft hockeyists scored most of their points in the opening period. J. Stevenson led the attack and sent the puck into the Choate net for three goals. Captain Valentine Ely scored another goal before the period ended, with the score at 4 to 0. In the second period Stevenson continued his good work and accounted for Taft's remaining goal.

The lineup:

Taft, (6.)	Position.	Choate, (0.)
Vogel	G.	Pattison
Carpenter	P.	Pierce
Weeks	C. P.	Healy
W. Stevenson	R.	Moffatt
Ely	C.	Wilson
J. Stevenson	L. W.	Orth
Chapin	R. W.	Fish

Goals—First period: J. Stevenson, (3,) Ely; second period: J. Stevenson, (2.) Referee—P. Welton, Taft School. Time of periods—Twenty minutes.

Middies Report for Baseball.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 10.—A baseball squad of more than 150 reported this afternoon to Coach Billy Lush, who will handle that sport after having concluded a successful basket ball season. Only one regular player and one change pitcher of last year have left the squad. The prospect of the renewal of the West Point contest has livened up the whole squad.

Joie Ray in Millrose Games.

Joie Ray, the sturdy little runner of the Illinois A. C., has entered the games of the Millrose A. A. to be held in Madison Square Garden Feb. 25. Ray will compete in the Rodman Wanamaker special one and one-half mile run. This will be Ray's third competition in this race. If he is successful he will become permanent owner of the silver cup.

AMERICA WILL SEND TEAM.

Conference May Determine Place for Next Olympic Games.

"America stands ready to send a representative athletic team to the next Olympic Games, regardless of the time or place which may be designated." This was the answer of prominent Amateur Athletic Union officials to the query of the Swedish Athletic Association made through United States Minister Morris at Stockholm recently.

Sweden, however, is not the only nation which desires to hold the games, and it is probable that a conference of the International Olympic Games Committee will be necessary in the near future to pass upon this phase of the situation, especially if the meet is to be staged in 1920, as appears probable.

Many nice letters reach us in the daily course of business, but now and again one specially hits our fancy.

Here, for example, is a note addressed to the Manager of our Warren St. Store, telling about a letter of introduction which in a nutshell says all we could say and more!

"In my hurry to get my train yesterday I forgot to tell you that I have given a letter of introduction to my friend, Mr. B——, who has taken a great fancy to that Scotch tweed suit you sent me a few weeks ago. He has always been to a custom tailor and was much surprised that I bought this ready made; wants to come in and see you; also surprised at the cost, $42. Mr. B—— is a fine fellow and I think you should make a good customer of him. I know you will take good care of him when he presents his letter of introduction."

These cheery words are especially appreciated because the writer is not only a successful merchant, but a good judge of values, and the sort of friend who, should occasion require, never hesitates to tell us of our faults, for our own good as he puts it, as indeed we hope you all will when things go wrong.

A REYNOLDS LEADS OLD MASTERS' SALE

Sir Joshua's "Portrait of Anthony Chamier" Brings $7,000 at the Plaza.

81 PICTURES FOR $48,840

Van Gelder's "David and Bathsheba" Fetches $4,000, and Murillo's "San Fernando" $3,500.

Eighty-one pictures of English, Dutch, and other old masters, sold by executors and trustees of different estates and for a number of private owners, at the Plaza last evening, under the auspices of the American Art Association, brought $48,840. Sir Joshua Reynolds's "Portrait of Anthony Chamier" brought the highest price, going to Lewis & Simmons for $7,000. To the same buyers went Aert Van Gelder's "David and Bathsheba," which brought the second highest price of the sale, $4,000. "San Fernando," by Murillo, which brought the third highest price of the sale, $3,500, went to A. Reiman.

A large and attractive portrait, "Miss Broughton Holding a Mask," by Francis Cotes, sold for a private collector, went to Mrs. George Leary for $1,000, the gross returns to go to the Red Cross. This was purchased by the owner as a gift for her son, who was not able to use it in his house. The seller offered the net returns to the Red Cross and the American Art Association made the contribution of the selling cost.

'LE CHEMINEAU' SUNG AGAIN

Leroux's Fine Lyric Drama Splendidly Given at the Lexington.

Leroux's "Le Chemineau," possibly the finest French lyric drama to reach this public in the last decade, was performed for the second time last evening at the Lexington before a distinguished audience recalling the old Manhattan days. The public had evidently found in the Chicago company's latest production something akin to the poetic moods of "Pelléas," the musical realism of "Louise."

The singing actors engaged gave a superb account of themselves, the final interview of the dying Baklanoff and the wanderer, Maguenat, holding the assembly till near midnight. Yvonne Gall showed again a new power as actress, and the minor rôles were handled with the art of the Paris stage by Claessens and Huberdeau, Dua and Sharlow, Nicolay and Defrere. Conductor Hasselmans received an ovation.

Leginska Recital Postponed.

Ethel Leginska of the leonine mane and brilliant pianism did not play her recital at Aeolian Hall as announced yesterday afternoon. This young artiste had played on Sunday afternoon in Brooklyn in the Academy of Music with the Philharmonic Society under the baton of Josef Stransky, thereby replacing Yolanda Mero, and as the concerto was Rubinstein's D minor, it is not difficult to imagine that she gave all that was in her artistic self. Result: recital postponed till March 30.

DRAMA

George Marion Bows.

TOBY'S BOW, a comedy in three acts, by John Taintor Foote. At the Comedy Theatre.

James Bolston Blake	Norman Trevor
Yama	T. Tamamoto
William Bainbridge	Eric Snowden
Valerie Vincent	Christabel Hunter
Edward Dubois	Charles Esdale
Mona Tonelia	Marie Maddern
John Paige	Charles A. Stevenson
Uncle Toby	George Marion
Eugenie Vardeman	Doris Rankin
Mrs. Vardeman	Alice Augarde Butler
Thomas Bagby	Frederick Howard
Colonel Botts	Wright Kramer

The heroines in romantic comedy of the South "after the war" have a curious way of seeming neither very graceful nor very lovable. To the cold, Northern view, at least, they combine provincial awkwardness of mind with intense aristocratic pride—a forbidding and a fearsome combination. But in the beauty of the old Southern homes and in the amiability of the old colored people one believes with a full heart. The one really convincing and delightful figure in the little new play at the Comedy was Toby, the old family servant, and the one performance that scored unmistakably with the audience was that of George Marion, who played him.

Toby is much more than the conventional retainer who remains faithful in poverty and ruin. Mr. Foote has seen him with a fresh eye, given several new and diverting turns to his character, and woven him very skillfully into the spirit of the comedy, even into its romance. In one scene, in order to account for the disappearance of the family wine cellar, (which has been sold to pay bills,) he professes to have drunk it, first involving himself in a network of sacrificial lies and then extricating himself from it in a manner worthy of Hopkinson Smith. There are excellent passages of comedy with the young hero's Japanese servant, whom he alternately bullies and fears, which defy description.

And then there is that matter of his bow—a rite with which he most graciously and amusingly signalizes the triumph of the young northern lover, welcoming him into the family. In a word, Toby is priceless. To the eye of the professional Southerner, Mr. Marion's performance may seem somewhat lacking in unction and in accuracy of local color; but in all other respects it is notably skillful, subtle and humorous, a genuine little masterpiece.

Far less is to be said of the play as a whole. It is very thin, somewhat slow in movement, and lacking in romantic interest. The hero is a young New York novelist of "genius" who has lost his soul in fast living and best sellers and who finds regeneration and inspiration in Virginia. It is a part easily within the scope of Norman Trevor, who invests it with all possible grace and charm; but it is essentially pastiche, affording no real opportunity and how, when and why Mr. Trevor falls in love with that Virginia belle will forever remain a mystery!

The heroine, alas, is one of those fatuous, twisted, and ingrowing young Southern ladies who have been so frequently and so convincingly portrayed that one is forced, however reluctantly, to believe that they are no mere myth. Only last week we saw her sister in the spirit in the young heroine of "Mis' Nelly of N'Orleans." Doris Rankin embodies her in a manner quite acceptable to the eye—even investing her with a rare and tenuous beauty; but, unfortunately, instead of palliating her fits of pride and unlovely anger Miss Rankin accentuates them.

The "Ole Mis'," Mrs. Vardaman, is a far more persuasive character, and is acted with much sympathy and delicacy by Alice Augarde Butler. The comrades of Mr. Trevor's Bohemian revels in Webster Hall (in the first act) are presented with much vigor, if with little raiment. Marie Maddern excels in the way she "takes on," and Christabel Hunter in the garments she takes off.

"THE NET" HAS SUSPENSE.

Mystery Plentiful in the Amnesia Victim in Thompson's Play.

THE NET. A Melodrama in Three Acts. By Maravene Thompson. At the Forty-eighth Street Theatre.

John Royce	Francis Byrne
Ella Lenox	Claire Whitney
Albert Page	Alfred Shirley
Bruce Norman	Byron Beasley
The Man	Charles Millward
Allayne	Kathlene MacDonell
Billy Norman	Graham Lucas
Nurse	Lucy Sheldon
Inspector Blake	Walter Horton
Thomas	Arthur Eldred
Lizzie	Cicely Barcham
Dr. Morris	Charles Dalton
Sir Henry Drake	Ben Johnson
Martin	Elbert Johns

"The Net," the first play by Maravene Thompson, the novelist, is an interesting but rather slow-paced melodrama of the murder mystery type. The audience witnesses the murder and is accordingly not required to speculate as to the identity of the guilty man, but is requested instead to focus its speculative powers upon a mysterious intruder to whose door the guilt is falsely laid. The latter, being a victim of amnesia at the moment, is unable to clear himself, and the wife of the murderer, who witnesses the crime, feels her lips sealed by the fact that she cannot, for the sake of her child, fasten the taint of murderer upon its father. And so the titular net binds her.

The strength of this net—that is, the necessity of the wife's continued silence—is likely to be variously felt by succeeding audiences. The dying man has whispered the name of his murderer with his last breath, and the fleeing husband forces his identity upon the amnesia victim, but even when the latter comes to claim his rightful place as husband the wife remains silent. It is, of course, a situation which must eventually "out," and in the circumstances the wife's silence becomes a trifle forced. Not even the sight of a golden-haired youngster was proof positive that the wife was in the right. The husband is a scalawag, and the wife has long ceased to love him, but still the silence continues.

Audiences which do not feel this weakness too acutely are likely to derive a good deal of genuine entertainment from the play. There is mystery aplenty in the amnesia victim and his elusive identity, and Mrs. Thompson has contrived to juggle these factors sufficiently well to impart the necessary note of suspense to the proceedings. Aside from the amnesia victim, also, the audience is interested in observing the effect of the various revelations upon the other characters, and between this pair of pursuits all but the most exacting can contrive to keep themselves busy.

The best performance of the evening is given by Charles Millward in the rôle of the amnesia victim. He grades skillfully the successive steps and conditions, and makes the scene of the recovery of memory the most moving in the play. Kathlene MacDonell plays the harassed wife sufficiently well, and with commendable repression in a rôle which would call for at least five handkerchiefs in the hands of many an actress. Charles Dalton as a doctor who looks every inch a villain, is, nevertheless, a stanch friend of the hero, and other leading parts are in the hands of Francis Byrne, Byron Beasley, and Ben Johnson.

HEMPEL SINGS FAREWELL.

In "Crispino e la Comare" She Takes Her Metropolitan Leave.

Frieda Hempel took her leave of the Metropolitan last evening in the quaint "Crispino e la Comare," singing a Patti rôle and one announced at the rival shop next Monday for Galli-Curci. The Monday subscribers broke their customary reserve to give Mme. Hempel a special tribute at the close of her seventh season here, and she was called back after the "Carnival of Venice" variations for an encore, adding the "Last Rose of Summer."

Mr. Scotti, Miss Braslau, Messrs. Chalmers, de Segurola, and others appeared, and Mr. Papi conducted. After the opera the ballet danced for the second time Stravinsky's "Petrushka," with Bolm, Galli, and Bonfiglio, conducted by Monteux.

Is "Acid-Mouth" destroying your teeth?

When your eyes light on the shrunken jaws of a toothless person, you read the last chapter of the story of "Acid-Mouth."

PEBECO TOOTH PASTE

Counteracts "Acid-Mouth"

Your chances to escape "Acid-Mouth" are only 1 in 20 according to dental authorities. But twice-yearly visits to your dentist and the twice-daily use of Pebeco Tooth Paste should check this condition.

Pebeco not only counteracts "Acid-Mouth," but also whitens and polishes the teeth, and promotes the health of the whole mouth.

PROGRESS WITH THE LEAGUE.

In outlining "the progress that had been made" with plans for the League of Nations, M. FERDINAND LARNAUDE of the French Commission communicated to the correspondents at Paris on Saturday morning four articles of the proposed organization. In respect to two of these articles we beg leave to make a considerable reservation of doubt. They can hardly have been accepted by the Conference in the form given to them by M. LARNAUDE in his statement.

No. 4 of these articles, as outlined by M. LARNAUDE, is as follows:

> There is to be an international military force, consisting of an army as well as a navy. Each nation is to maintain its part of this army within its own borders, subject to call by the executive body of the League to serve wherever needed.

This point has been subject to more dispute than any other in the plan of the League of Nations. The objections to the article will be readily understood if we apply its terms to our own case. It would be required of the United States that it maintain an army of American soldiers always subject to call for war service by the League of Nations, an exterior body. Under our Constitution we can make war only when Congress declares it. Under this article we should be required to make war when the League of Nations declared it for us; we should have to give a general pledge to engage in war at any time when the League issued the call for troops to punish a State breaking the covenant.

It has been understood that in the interchange of views at Paris this objection has been looked upon as fatal to any proposal of an agreement making the use of force compulsory upon all the members of the League. In the English plan the first resource against a quarrelsome nation is nonintercourse, refusal to trade or to have any relations with the offending country. Force is contemplated as an ultimate resort, but emphasis is put upon the constraint of the "boycott," which might even take the form of a blockade. If military force is to be used, it is obvious that participation in the measure must be voluntary, at least in the case of the United States, where the consent of Congress is requisite.

To redress an international wrong, to punish a flagrant violation of the pledge to the League, and to extinguish at the very beginning a flame of war that threatened to spread, it might be safe to assume that the assent of Congress would always be given. This naturally leads to the suggestion that armed force could be made up of volunteer troops. Congress might give permission to the League or to the injured nation to recruit in this country soldiers for the required service. To an appeal made in such a case there can be no doubt that volunteers would respond in sufficient numbers. In that way the quota of the United States would be quickly furnished, the burden and the cost of maintaining an army for service abroad would be escaped, and the constitutional obstacle would be removed.

Again, M. LARNAUDE's third article revives in an objectionable form one of the controverted points which we had supposed was laid aside almost at the beginning of the discussion. It is as follows:

> There is to be an international parliament, sitting once a year, with delegates from all the member nations, to consider world legislation.

A parliament is a body that makes laws. Laws of the British Parliament receive the sanction of the sovereign as a matter of course. Our Congress is not less supreme, for it may always override the Executive veto. We may be very sure that the Council at Paris is not going to destroy the League of Nations before it has been established by attempting to set up a super-parliament, a paramount legislative body, vested with power to make laws for all the nations. M. LARNAUDE says, to be sure, that this body "is to consider world legislation," but "parliament" is not the word. The League may establish a Conference, like that at The Hague, or like the Conference from which the Declaration of London issued, but that is a very different thing from a parliament. The codes, articles, or amendments of international law proposed by the Congress would necessarily be subject to ratification by the Powers represented. They might be accepted, rejected, amended, or modified by reservations of the individual States. A commission is not a parliament.

UNGRACIOUS WORDS.

Nothing but the tolerance of Mr. WILLIAM H. ANDERSON can save the Rev. Dr. CHARLES A. EATON from trial for Majestätsbeleidigung. Dr. EATON said that "thirty years ago we were "ruled by money-bags; today we are "ruled by windbags." Now Mr. ANDERSON, whatever differences of view separate him from many of his fellow-citizens, can certainly not be classed as a windbag; his achievements are evidence to the contrary. That he rules the country, however, or at least New York State, he himself admits. His statement issued yesterday established his sovereignty: "The "Anti-Saloon League will not, and "presumably the Commissioner of "Excise, whom the league proposes "to make responsible for law enforcement, will not undertake to disturb "such small amounts of liquor as individuals may have for private consumption."

There you have it. Not the people of New York, but the Anti-Saloon League, will make the Commissioner of Excise responsible for this and that. The Anti-Saloon League is graciously pleased not to invade the home, just yet. A prudent decision; it must not be said that the little finger of ANDERSON shall be heavier than the loins of Barleycorn. But there is a menace in a later sentence: "After these major issues are disposed of the smaller matters, if they "remain, will have due attention."

Cheer up, Mr. ANDERSON. The amount which the foresighted and provident can afford to lay in at present prices is not so great that there is much likelihood of any of it remaining long after July 1.

OLE HANSON AND THE UNDESIRABLES.

Fifty-four Bolsheviki are on their way from the Pacific Coast to the Atlantic, doomed to deportation. Among them are alien convicts, stars of the I. W. W., a whole gang of alien agitators who have been kind enough to use the United States as a recruiting ground for labor troubles without cause, for violence, murder, anarchy, all the happinesses of the Bolshevist State. As these missionaries from Russia and Finland and way stations pass through a country unworthy of them, deported under the Immigration Act passed by a Congress which has no claims on their respect, not being a collection of Soviets; as this band of foreign troublemakers leaves the country, for the country's good, it is pleasant and profitable to recall that the useful activity of the United States Immigration Service which sends this pack of propagandists back to whatever nation is unfortunate enough to receive them coincides with that great movement of Americanism which has just made itself quietly and irresistibly felt in Seattle and has endeared to every American the name of Mayor OLE HANSON.

At the urging of foreign agitators seeking to introduce here the amene and merciful methods that have made Russia so peaceful and prosperous, a general strike of 45,000 union men, in sympathy with 25,000 shipyard workers, was devised in Seattle. Every arrangement was made for the overthrow of the constituted authorities and the setting up of the volunteers of violence. That was the moment when OLE HANSON swam into the ken of millions of Americans, who rejoiced in him as the living proof that Americanism, that respect for law, is not dead. "Any man who attempts to "take over Government functions "here will be shot on sight." "The "seat of City Government is still at "the City Hall." Mayor HANSON issued a proclamation that life and property would be protected, that business would go on as usual, that municipal street cars, light and power plants, water, and so on would be run. He organized 1,000 extra police, provided with rifles and shotguns. He "told them to shoot on sight any one "causing disorder. We got ready for "business. We had already had "trouble in two instances heretofore "and had completely whipped the "Bolsheviki. They knew we meant "business and they started no "trouble."

Many Mayors have talked. Mayor HANSON acted. The revolution failed. As OLE HANSON says: "It never got "to first base and it never will if the "men in control of affairs will tell "all traitors and anarchists that death "will be their portion if they start "anything. Law and order are supreme in our city." The great Bolshevist strike has struck out. The fifty-four Bolsheviki who are soon to be exposed to seasickness and their own reflections are but a collateral "side" issue of the great Seattle strike. The cardinal, triumphant, and American thing about it is that a man in official place, a man of known, long, and generous sympathy with all legitimate aims of labor, a man who has brought himself up by his own efforts to wealth and power, was strong enough and brave enough to stand up against the insolent alien efforts to reproduce here the horrible disorders that have ruined Russia. Unconsciously and instinctively OLE HANSON defended and represented the inbred, undying, and ineradicable American spirit of ordered freedom. All over the country, as all over the world, the insidious destructive intrigue of the agents of universal disaster is at work. There are demagogues that pander to it. There are fools that toy with it. There are cowards that yield to it. In one splendid moment OLE HANSON, a man two or three days ago quite unknown to a world that is but too familiar with officials infinitely his inferiors in self-respect, in courage, and in that essential and unyielding Americanism without which no American will go far or long in politics, has made himself known and beloved through the United States. In his case, as in that of GROVER CLEVELAND, the path of courage is the path of glory.

DEMOBILIZATION NEAR HOME.

Economically the War Department's practice of returning soldiers to civil life near ports of debarkation, when their homes are elsewhere, sometimes far distant, is wrong, and it may prove a detriment to men released from service. Many of them soon spend their pay, and with it goes their mileage, which should be used for transportation to the places from which they were drafted or where they enlisted. At a time when thousands of unskilled laborers are being dropped from Government work and are themselves seeking employment, without finding it in many cases, ports of debarkation can do little or nothing for the soldier looking for a job. In a letter addressed to Secretary BAKER Mr. WILLIAM FELLOWES MORGAN, President of the Merchants' Association, says:

> This method of discharge (at or near home ports) results in arbitrarily creating a surplus of labor in the areas in which those cities are located, so that the power to absorb labor in these communities has more than reached the saturation point.

Such is the case in this city. Thousands of soldiers without funds are walking the streets and seeking employment. They believe that they can obtain higher wages in New York than they could expect in the interior, and they are loath to go home and confess failure. Moreover, the conditions of life in a great city are attractive to them. The consequence is that thousands of soldiers without prospects are added to an already considerable army of the unemployed. Upon the ordinary youngster, reacting from the tension of military duty and the excitement of service in France, the moral effect is not good. The condition created is not well either for him or for overcrowded New York with its serious labor problem. Idleness and disillusion make a soil fertile, as Mr. MORGAN observes, "for the reception of radical and anarchistic "theories."

The Merchants' Association has sent to Congress and to the Secretary of War a resolution providing that demobilization be turned over to the Selective Draft Boards throughout the country, in order that soldiers may be paid and discharged in the home neighborhoods. This is so sensible a thing to do that the wonder is the War Department needs the advice. The Government, which took millions of men from their work and organized them into armies, owes them something more than pay and mileage when they walk down the gangplank of a transport. It should not leave them to their own devices and let them shift for themselves. A great many of the soldiers are neither worldly wise nor prudent, and their experience of life is very limited.

The Government should make arrangements to set them down in their home towns, where friends would help them to obtain employment. Every community regards its own soldiers as heroes, and the desire to restore them to their old places is particularly strong in the smaller towns.

WHERE ARE THOSE DOCUMENTS?

However much HUGO HAASE's attack on the Majority Socialist Government of Germany may be inspired by considerations of German internal politics, and however he may exaggerate in his account of HINDENBURG's army, (which can hardly be so terribly formidable by this time,) he makes a reference to one thing which the allied world will do well to remember. SCHEIDEMANN, he says, dares not expel the HOHENZOLLERNS because he is afraid they will reveal to a Socialist nation the secret relations which SCHEIDEMANN had with the Imperial Government during the war.

So far as concerns SCHEIDEMANN, this may very well be true; the leader of "his Imperial and Royal Majesty's loyal socialism" was certainly during a good part of the war the left hand of a power whose right hand was striking on the battlefield, and disclosure of his relations with the Foreign Office of the old unregenerate days would be edifying both at home and abroad. But HAASE's remark serves as a reminder that these are not the only revelations that are waiting to be made. Where are the German official documents dealing with the outbreak of the war—not the carefully expurgated White Book, but the real documents—above all, the correspondence between Berlin and Vienna in July, 1914? Without doubt, some of them have been destroyed; even if the last Imperial Governments did not take elementary precautions, it is hardly likely that Dr. SOLF let any grass grow under his feet during his tenure of the Foreign Office in the transition period. But undoubtedly some of them are left, and we have the best of evidence that no authentic publication is likely to come from the present German Socialist Government.

This matter was brought up at the very beginning of the Socialist conference at Berne last week, when ALBERT THOMAS started the trouble by proposing an inquiry to establish the responsibility of the Governments that started the war and of the Socialist leaders "who had made themselves the accomplices of these Governments." This last phrase was the fatal one; for the German Socialists had their solution all ready. It was familiar enough. Blame for the war was to be shuffled off on the imperial scapegoat now fled to the wilderness of Amerongen; not a word was to be said about the Socialists who stood by and were consenting, who voted for the war credits, and who smiled approval when the All-Highest told his people that henceforth he knew no parties, only Germans.

THOMAS's resolution provoked a huge debate with no decisive ending; the question of responsibility was put aside; the German Socialists said that KARL KAUTSKY had been charged with investigation into the responsibility for the war, but they made it very clear that he would not be allowed to tell anything inconvenient. This inquiry must depend on similar inquiries into their own governmental archives by Socialists of the allied countries, and the Germans adjudged this question in advance by announcing that the chief cause of the war was the imperialistic and capitalistic organization of all Europe. Opinions in conflict with this view were inadmissible.

There was no doubt good reason for this; a Majority Socialist majority might not have been returned to the Constituent Assembly if the German people had known all about the origin of the war and the relation of Socialist leaders to the Government. But the German leaders of today may find eventually that it would pay them to let the truth be known. Only one German, KURT EISNER, has shown any real willingness to find out how the war was begun; until the others are willing the rest of the world may have its doubts as to how far Germany can be trusted.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Premier Defends His People. M. CLEMENCEAU has deemed it necessary, or at any rate judicious, to add to the official denial already made by the French Government his personal assurance that the Americans have not had to pay "trench rent" or rent for the ground where their dead are buried. He knows that lies, once well started, go far and are hard to overtake. The origin of those particular stories is as yet unknown, but there is warrant for the suspicion that they are a part of the effort making in various quarters to create ill-will in American minds against the Allies by any convenient method that malicious ingenuity can devise.

As for the tales about comparisons adverse to the French made by American soldiers stationed in Germany, the Premier contented himself with saying that he did not believe American judgments could be so superficial or so unjust. His confidence is highly complimentary, and one must wish, rather than hope, that it has been in all cases deserved.

His defense of his own countrymen from the current charges of extortion was in effect what the lawyers call "in confession and avoidance." Had he known all that is known here—and been less courteous than he is—M. CLEMENCEAU might have said that it was not in France that the American soldier was first the victim of more or less ruthless profiteering on the part of "the natives." He chose to explain the overcharging of our soldiers in France as the result of the "spoiling" of French tradesmen and innkeepers by the lavish expenditures of our tourists in years past. That theory serves as well as another to excuse a human peculiarity everywhere manifested in some degree.

An Untimely Display of Sorrow. A report that seems to be lamentably well confirmed is to the effect that when New York offers its official welcome to the returning soldiers they are to march through two blocks of Fifth Avenue where every building has been heavily draped in funereal black and purple. This, it is said, will be "The Court of the Dead," or "The Court of Sacred Memories."

Of course nobody wants to forget, and nobody does forget, that not all of the men who went across the sea have come back to march in triumphal procession, but thus to intrude sorrow in a day devoted to rejoicing is—well, call it the strangest of taste, and probably about the worst. That the returning soldiers will both dislike and resent such a manifestation of grief on such an occasion is more than probable—it is certain.

Whoever has any influence with our remarkable municipal administration should exert it to the end that this lugubrious plan may be abandoned.

Two Wrongs Worse Than One. To the War Department's original mistake in regard to service chevrons—that of making obligatory the wearing of a white stripe for each six months of home service—there has now been added, in intention, at least, the much greater mistake of taking away from the men who have served abroad the right, hitherto accorded and exercised, of wearing the blue or gold stripes indicative of that fact.

In theory, of course, and to some degree in reality, there is an element of injustice in any mark that establishes a distinction, sure to be regarded by some civilians, and to be felt by some soldiers, as invidious, between men presumably of equal loyalty and courage, and differing only in that to one group of them there came an opportunity of which another group were deprived by the fortunes of war. The members of both groups obeyed the orders received from their superiors, as every soldier must, and those who remained at home—in the great majority of cases much against their will and to their bitter disappointment—are fully warranted in claiming that they did their full duty and are deserving of honor and respect. That opportunity to go overseas did not come to them was their misfortune, not their fault, but naturally they did not care to have that misfortune advertised.

Their protests seemingly went unheeded by the departmental officials, but it was only seeming, evidently, for now those same officials propose to remove all visible distinctions of service. That is going to the opposite extreme, and it remedies one evil by creating another much more serious.

Decorations Have Real Value. It is easy enough to smile at army men for putting the high value they do on bits of colored cloth on a sleeve or bits of metal pinned on a coat. So to value them, however, is a human tendency so nearly universal that it is entirely normal, and it is a "weakness" of which those whom it amuses would certainly be guilty if they had a chance. But it is not a weakness; it is a variant of the idealizing and symbolizing faculty that plays a part so fine and high in life, and it needs defending no more than does reverence for a national flag. As to the injustice of distinguishing the man favored by luck from him who was not favored, that, too, is and always has been such common practice that there must be an essential rightness in it.

There is nothing derogatory to him whose chance for heroism or a particular form of service has not come, when he to whom that chance has come and has been well utilized gets a badge of honor for all to see. He may be no better than his undecorated brother, but he has done something which the latter has not yet done, and that does count.

The soldiers on foreign service were by no means all on the firing line, and the blue or gold stripe in itself does not say that they were. It merely tells an indubitable truth and it creates a grievance no more than does the fact that not every soldier who took part in the actual fighting won a medal or a cross. That, also, was a matter of opportunity—of opportunity that did not come to all.

REDUCING ARMAMENTS.

Nations Should Have Option of Decreasing Either Armies or Navies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Among the many topics to be considered by the Peace Conference that of the reduction of armaments is surely one of the most important. While it is ardently desired, one has also the utmost sympathy with those nations of Europe which feel they must protect themselves against possible future treachery of near-by States.

The reduction of armaments would require, as I understand, an agreement by which the different nations would pledge themselves to reduce (more especially) their armies and their navies. It is customary to hear this spoken of as requiring with each nation separate agreements, one for the army and one for the navy. But why treat these as two separate questions? Why not one combined army-navy-armament-reduction agreement for all nations?

This would mean that each nation (the quota of reduction having been agreed upon and assigned) would be free to make her army and navy reduction in such proportions as she herself might decide. A previously agreed upon general schedule would, of course, be necessary, in which would be stated the relative values, as fighting forces, of, let us say, warships and army corps—so many fighting ships being considered equal to so many fighting men, &c. The practical outcome of some such plan might be (would it not?) that a nation like England might prefer to make her reduction-of-armament quota in the form of a larger navy and a smaller army; while France, on the contrary, might prefer a larger army and a smaller navy; other nations, ourselves included, as they might deem best for their own protection. Would not this be just to all? L. L. S.

"Mandatary" and "Mandatory."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I be permitted, by drawing attention to the somewhat more familiar case of "depositary" and "depository" to illustrate and support the discrimination between "mandatary" and "mandatory" made by Professor Munroe Smith in your issue of this morning? The distinction rests in the main on the difference in value of mediaeval Latin adjectives (whether or not becoming also substantives) ending in arius or orius. The dictionary I have nearest at hand says correctly (one is always glad when the dictionary happens to be right): "In the best usage, 'depositary' denotes a person with whom, and 'depository' a place in which, anything is deposited for safe keeping." The analogy between the two pairs of words, "mandatary-mandatory" and "depositary-depository," is not complete, but such analogies seldom are complete. The point of interest is that deviation in such word-pairs is not freakish, but rests generally on good grounds. Thus, "stationery" is applied to goods sold by a stationer, (one who keeps a stand,) while "stationary" derives from mediaeval Latin "stationarius."

A SWITCH IN TIME.

There is a nimiety, a too-muchness in all Germans.—Coleridge, "Table-Talk."

There's still too much too-muchness,
Assertive such-as-suchness,
Complacent over-Dutchness
In German thought and act:
Both root and branch need thinning,
Bismarckian disciplining—
If left to think they're winning,
They will have won in fact!

They must be taught the blunder
Of legalizing plunder,
And should be taught it under
The victims whom they robbed.
What is there harsh or spiteful
In yielding to the rightful
The taming of the frightful
Who struck them when they sobbed?

Why should we give a button
That wolf should lack his mutton?
It's only fair a glutton
Should tighten up his belt.
Have done with mush and twaddle:
No conscience-stricken model
Strayer for saints to coddle,
This shark of Lys and Scheldt!

OPPOSES COMPLETE BAN ON PROPAGANDA

Council on Foreign Relations Says Some Economic Advertising Should Be Permitted.

PROPOSES OVERSIGHT HERE

Letter to Senate Committee Suggests That Foreign News Bureaus Submit Books for Audit.

Declaring that certain members of Congress were awaiting the end of the Senate inquiry into propaganda before introducing a bill which would make it illegal for foreign Governments to circulate legitimate propaganda or "economic advertising" in this country, Lindsay Russell, Chairman of the Council on Foreign Relations, yesterday gave out copies of a protest sent to Senator Lee S. Overman, Chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee. Mr. Russell also pointed out the dangers which he thought would result from prohibiting "good propaganda." This is the letter to Senator Overman:

Council on Foreign Relations,
165 Broadway, Feb. 10, 1919.
Senator Lee S, Overman, Chairman
Committee Investigating Propaganda, United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

The Council on Foreign Relations is in full accord with legislative action aimed to make impossible the sowing of secret and insidious propaganda in the United States. Nothing too stringent can be done to avert any repetition of the underground propaganda of Germany. On the other hand any action by Congress which makes illegal the maintenance in America of foreign bureaus of information such as the bureaus conducted by Great Britain and other allied nations during the war, would be a step in the wrong direction.

It is the opinion of the Council on Foreign Relations, however, that any prohibition against the establishment in this country of recognized foreign bureaus of information tends to encourage and aid, rather than to suppress the evil propaganda against which Congressional action is now aimed. If foreign Governments and foreign peoples maintain responsible bureaus of information whose reputations must be built upon the truth of their output, and whose expenditures may be subjected to the visé and approval of the State Department or other competent authority, not only will the cause of international friendship be served by better understanding in America of foreign nations, foreign peoples and their aims, but the existence of an outlet of honest and open expression of foreign nations will tend to make unnecessary and unwise the use of secret and surreptitious propaganda.

The Council on Foreign Relations, speaking after investigation and with knowledge, approves the work of several of the foreign bureaus of information established in the United States during the war. To forbid their continuance under the belief that prohibition of truth and honest expression is necessary to suppress lies and propaganda, would be an offense to good sense and to the courtesies we owe to other nations and their peoples and to the principle that it is desirable to have for the use of our own people good sources of foreign information and good services in international understanding.

LINDSAY RUSSELL,
RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD,
MARK O. PRENTISS.

"It is desirable that Congress regulate, rather than attempt to eliminate, propaganda of foreign Governments in the United States," said Mr. Russell, "because propaganda in its best sense is nothing more than national advertising. To have other nations with whom we are on friendly terms, and with whom we are doing business, advertise themselves in the United States, is helpful from an economic as well as an educational standpoint.

"Its economic value is that it encourages travel; it encourages commerce; it makes a market for securities of foreign countries which, in turn, constitutes the basis of foreign trade. In an educational sense it may be said that the tendency of international intercourse is between peoples rather than between Governments. Individuals intermingle and communicate internationally more freely than ever before, but more significant is the organized intercourse among peoples through the church, trade organizations, labor organizations, educational organizations, commercial bodies, social organizations, and mediums such as the Pan-American Bureau, the Japan Society, the Italy-America Society, and the Pilgrims' Society.

"This tendency toward increased intercourse results in increased knowledge, and knowledge is the basis of better understanding. It is important that any instrumentality which increases our knowledge of foreign countries should be welcomed by our Government for the benefit of better international relations. Who is better able to interpret France and England than those countries themselves? Why not regulate that interpretation? Any country desiring to carry on a legitimate campaign of education in the United States should have the permission of the Department of State, which, in turn, should know about the money to be expended and who is to administer the funds."

RESUME CATHEDRAL WORK.

Nave of St. John the Divine to be a Memorial to New York Soldiers.

After a halt of four years in the building of the nave of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, plans have been accepted by the Trustees and the work will be resumed in a short time. Ralph Adams Cram, consulting architect since 1911, presented his drawings yesterday to the Ways and Means Committee of the Diocesan Auxiliary of the Cathedral at the home of Mrs. Orme Wilson, 3 East Sixty-fourth Street, and also showed views of high Gothic spires which he plans to erect on the west front of the cathedral, but which have not as yet been accepted by the Trustees.

"The nave is to be a memorial to the soldiers of New York who have given their lives on the battlefields of France and also to those who have served their country in the conflict," Mr. Cram said. "Not only will it be a memorial, but also a peace offering.

"The central span of the nave will be fifty feet in width and the columns will be the tallest ever provided for any building in the world. The four immense bays at the sides of the nave will be memorials of four great battles of the war. These were Verdun, which represents heroic fortitude; Soissons, self-sacrifice; Rheims, martyrdom, and Noyon, courage. The chapels will have immense windows of glass stained with figures of saints representing the virtues for which they are designated.

"After the memorial nave is built, we can then resume work on the west front with its Gothic towers and finally erect the other smaller buildings."

Pre-war estimates on the construction of the nave as planned by Mr. Cram amounted to $3,000,000, but the price now will be considerably higher. The exact date upon which the work will start will probably be decided at the meeting of the Trustees of the cathedral on Feb. 25.

VISCOUNT GREY NOW BLIND.

Former Foreign Secretary Loses Entire Use of Eyes.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The eye trouble with which Viscount Grey, former Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has been afflicted for years has now culminated in total blindness, says The Daily Mail today.

Viscount Grey is learning to read by the Braille system of characters for the blind.

It was told in THE NEW YORK TIMES several days ago how Sir Edward Grey was rapidly losing his eyesight.

ART NOTES.

Abel Pann's Paintings and Drawings in Pratt Institute Gallery.

In the Pratt Institute Art Gallery, Brooklyn, until Feb. 15, is a collection of paintings and drawings by Abel Pann, a Russian, who struggled for his art education against great odds, worked in Paris under Bouguereau and Toudouz, and later in Palestine making drawings for a pictorial edition of the Bible. He was in Palestine at the outbreak of the war, and his studies illustrating the terrible condition of the Jews during the war are included in the exhibition and form its strongest feature.

Although the Bible pictures are interesting from the originality of their point of view, Mr. Pann is at his best in showing reality, and reality at its worst. There is no sentimental sauce to his account of the devastated countries of Poland and Lithuania, and the dreadful sufferings of the Jewish refugees, the fear and horror of the maidens and the profound despair and misery of the old people.

He refrains from urging his palette to extremes in the effort to communicate emotion, depending upon the slender resources of black and white, heightened by an occasional touch of colored chalk, in his most moving subjects. These dusky little drawings convey his message. In depicting the Eastern landscape he is more dramatic in his color schemes, and this no doubt is due to the intensity of the atmospheric effects. He says in a published description of the place: "In Palestine nature is magnified. The blue of the heavens is too blue, the rays of the moon are too silvery. There the shadows are deep and gloomy and the light is blinding in its brilliancy. When it rains the drops are large. The thunders are more deafening, the lightnings more blinding, everything is exaggerated." This exaggeration of the natural aspect of a scene is puzzling to an artist, and Mr. Pann has not always escaped the tendency to empty these intensities of their significance; but his work is often finely imaginative as well as true to outer facts.

For Better Industrial Design.

The National Dry Goods Association will be entertained by the Art Alliance of America in its galleries at 10 East Forty-seventh Street on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 13, from 8 to 10 o'clock. The object of the reception is to show the dry goods firms how much they can be benefited by coming in contact with the artistic products of the country.

The Art Alliance for the last three years has been carrying on a propaganda for better merchandise designed in America and made in America by Americans. It has held contests for textiles, for containers, advertising, toys, &c. The result is that its membership includes a great many clever people, who design and make beautiful objects—not wholesalers, but clever people who have small studios and workshops all over the country.

The special exhibit just opened includes original designs for textiles, and the materials actually made therefrom; scarfs, portieres, and gowns decorated by the processes of batik, tied-and-dyed and block printing; a completely furnished living room; original sketches for advertising and the prints therefrom; and, in addition, there is a gift shop with many attractive handmade objects. The exhibition offers an opportunity for members of the Dry Goods Association to see the important part that art plays in most types of merchandise.

BIGGEST BLOCKADE CASE.

British Prize Court Accuses Neumonds for Efforts to Feed Germany.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—What the British Attorney General describes as "the most expensive, sustained and carefully organized effort to supply the Central Empires with foodstuffs yet exposed" came up in the Prize Court today. The foodstuffs are valued at $1,415,000 and were contained in shipments covering a period of eighteen months.

Fourteen ships were engaged in the attempt. Two of these vessels were of American register, four Norwegian, four Swedish, and four Danish.

The Crown Attorney suggested that, although the names of different persons appeared as shippers, all the consignments were in fact made by K. & E. Neumond of New York and Frankfort, acting for the German Government.

He charged that the cargoes shipped on the steamers Americo and Henrik were intended for capture by the Germans, while the cargoes on the other boats were to be forwarded to Germany through Denmark.

The Crown Attorney stated that earlier in the war and prior to the present case the Neumonds had been held in the Prize Court to have acted as agents of the German Government. He charged that in the present case the Neumonds had put other names than their own as shippers on the bills of lading. This, the attorney declared, amounted to the fabrication of false papers. He asserted that an elaborate code was used in connection with the transaction.

Karl Neumond, one of the members of the firm of K. & E. Neumond of Frankfort, came to this country just before or soon after the beginning of the war, in 1914, and opened at 25 Broad Street a New York branch of the German house. The firm and its American representative first came to public attention in July, 1916, after the publication of the names of American firms with German connections blacklisted by the British. Neumond denounced the action of the British Government, but took little part in the violent efforts made at the time to get President Wilson to intercede in behalf of the American firms.

Soon after this country entered the war Neumond was interned on Ellis Island as a dangerous enemy alien. At that time the Federal authorities announced that he had participated in shipping millions of dollars' worth of American foodstuffs to Germany via neutral countries. It was also understood at the time that Neumond was instrumental in loading ships with foodstuffs which were eventually "captured" by German raiders, though details of this part of his enterprise were never made public.

Neumond was sent to Fort Oglethorpe in July, 1917, and his offices were closed. He appealed to friends in all parts of the country to obtain his release, but, so far as is known, his efforts have not thus far been successful.

Cuba Has an Earthquake Shock.

HAVANA, Feb. 10.—A slight earthquake shock was felt this morning at Santiago de Cuba, on the southeastern coast of the island. There are no reports of any damage.

PROCLAIM THE VALOR OF SECOND DIVISION

Fifth and Sixth Marines Share in Unit's Glory as Told in General Orders.

HELD IMPORTANT POSTS

General Le Jeune Declares Men Excelled in Skill, Endurance, and Determination.

Marines who are now with the American Army of Occupation have sent to this country copies of the general order issued to the 2d Division on Nov. 11 by Major Gen. John E. Le Jeune of the Marine Corps. In recounting the history of the division at the front he said:

"At the end of May the enemy broke through the allied lines on a wide front west of Rheims and reached the Marne near Château-Thierry. The safety of Paris and of the allied army itself was at stake. It stopped his advance, it drove him back, and it demonstrated for all time that the American is second to none in valor, in endurance, and in unyielding determination to conquer.

"Again, on July 18, during the last great enemy offensive, the 2d Division, after a night march of unparalleled difficulty, struck near Soissons the flank of the enemy's salient, penetrated his lines, and brought his offensive to a standstill. This was the beginning of the allied offensive, which has increased unceasingly and untiringly until today.

"On Sept. 12-15 the American Army fought its first battle in France under American leadership. To the 2d Division was assigned the most difficult and the most important task, the capture of Thiaucourt and the Paulny-Xammes ridge. It reached its second day's objective on the first day, drove off the enemy's counterattacks, and clinched the victory.

"In the Champagne district, Oct. 2 to 10, the division fought beside the Fourth French Army. On Oct. 3 it seized Blanc Mont Ridge, the keystone of the arch of the main German position, advanced beyond the ridge and, both flanks unsupported, it held all its gains with the utmost tenacity, inflicting tremendous losses on the enemy. This victory freed Rheims and forced the entire German Army between this city and the Argonne Forest to retreat to the Aisne, a distance of about thirty kilometers.

"During the latter part of October the division was ordered to join the First American Army for the great attack of Nov. 1. It led the advance. It drove through the enemy's fortified lines to a depth of over nine kilometers, seized the heights of Bayonville and destroyed the enemy division on the front. On Nov. 3 it advanced to Fosse, and attacked and captured Vaux. At night it pressed forward through the forest of Belval by a single road and occupied the ridge near Beaumont. On the night of the 4th it again attacked and advanced its lines to the Meuse. Finally on the night of the 10th it forced its way across the Meuse and seized a commanding position on the eastern bank.

"This superb division of fighting men is unsurpassed in valor and skill, in endurance, in determination to conquer, and in service to the Allies. In this great struggle many of our comrades have made the supreme sacrifice for our country, but their heroic spirit dwells in the hearts of the officers and men of the 2d Division."

The units in the division were the 9th and 23d Infantry Regiments, the 5th and 6th Marines, the 12th, 15th, and 17th Field Artillery Regiments, the 2d Trench Mortar Battery, 2d Regiment of Engineers, 1st Field Signal Battalion, 2d Division Headquarters Troops, the 4th and 5th Machine Gun Battalions, and the 6th Machine Gun Battalion of the Marine Corps.

WAY CLEAR FOR TAX BILL.

Passage in the Senate Expected This Afternoon or Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The War Revenue bill, which was held up temporarily today by the debate on woman suffrage in the Senate, will be brought up in that body tomorrow by Senator Simmons of the Finance Committee.

A vote probably will be taken either late tomorrow afternoon or Wednesday, the time of final action being dependent upon the number of Senators who ask to be heard. It is generally conceded that the bill, which was approved by the House on Saturday by a vote of 310 to 11, will be adopted in the Senate by a large majority.

Senator Lodge presented petitions today signed by 10,000 persons protesting against Section 904 of the excise title, and other Senators announced that protests were coming to them in every mail. This is the section dealing with taxes on articles of clothing and other semi-luxuries which will be made the subject of a joint resolution calling for its repeal after the bill has been adopted by the Senate. There has been an agreement between Senate and House leaders which practically assures the approval of such a joint resolution.

Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, a member of the conference committee which reported the bill, and who will probably become Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee when the Republicans come into power after March 4, prepared a statement today in which he reviewed some of the more important provisions of the measure, gave expression to criticism and predicted important changes which he believes must be made by the next Congress. For one thing, he said that he felt the Republican Congress must readjust the taxation on insurance.

"It is sufficient to say that the bill is very far from perfect and the taxes are too high, particularly on individual incomes," said Mr. Penrose. "The taxes, however, come down considerably next year. One thing must be kept in mind, that no taxation system can be devised in the United States or any other country which can keep pace with the reckless expenditures which have become the fashion during the war.

"From now on rigid economy, retrenchment, and regulation of expenditures must prevail or no system of taxation will be adequate and the country will drift into bankruptcy.

"Important changes were made by the conferees in the provisions affecting the computation of net income. The Senate bill authorized the taxpayer to deduct a loss sustained in one year from the net income of the preceding or succeeding year, this provision applying to losses sustained in any taxable year beginning after Dec. 31, 1916. This beneficial provision, designed to allow business concerns to do what they have been allowed to do in Great Britain for many decades, i. e., average their income for three years, thus offsetting losses against gains—was restricted by the conferees to recognition of net losses sustained.

"Some of the best features of the Senate bill had to be sacrificed in the inevitable compromises which accompany a mixed settlement of this kind. The Senate changed the estate tax to an inheritance tax, thus making the tax dependent upon the size of the legacy or inheritance and not upon the size of the entire estate. This real reform has been lost, and the bill returns to the existing estate tax with some reduction in the rates.

"There is a little comfort in the thought that the worse the form of the Federal tax the sooner in all probability will this source of revenue be given back to the estates to which it properly belongs.

"Worst of all, in many respects, was the retention of the House provision relating to the taxation of insurance companies. They are uncertain, unscientific, and more productive of litigation than of revenue.

"The Senate offered a plan of insurance taxation that was equitable, definite, and simple. Moreover, the Senate plan would have produced far more revenue than the provisions of existing law, which are in substance repeated in the House bill. However, the future will give a Republican Congress the chance to place the taxation of insurance companies upon a sound and scientific basis."

NEW MOTOR TRUCKS ON EXHIBITION HERE

Sixty Makes of Commercial Cars and Six Makes of Tractors Shown.

BIG CROWDS SEE MODELS

War Experience Reflected in Popularity of Heavy Machines and Worm Drive.

New York's Motor Truck Show was opened in a thoroughly successful manner last night in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory. It is the first time that a commercial car exhibit has ever been held here, and it started the second week of the big Automobile Show. While there was no question as to the sustained public interest in passenger cars, there was, on the part of the Show Committee, considerable curiosity to see just how a purely business motor vehicle exhibit would take with the New York public. That question was answered by an attendance very much larger than would have been accepted as satisfactory, and, what was of more importance, a great majority of the visitors showed that they were keenly alive to the necessity of highway transportation.

Several belated exhibitors made it imperative to open the exhibition hall in the Garden. More than sixty different makes of trucks are displayed in both buildings, about half a dozen makes of farm tractors, and several trailers. Each make of truck shows several models, bringing the total number of vehicles in both buildings to more than 200, ranging all the way from the lightest half-ton delivery wagon to powerful seven-ton trucks for heavy hauling. Dealers and truck makers agreed that it was the most comprehensive exhibit ever made of the development of the American motor car industry into the commercial field. The show is an object lesson of the present success and future possibilities of highway transportation, whether looked at from the efficient city delivery system, from the rural motor express, or the carrying of freight for quick delivery over the roads for long distances.

The Maxwell display of one-ton light delivery wagons accentuates this phase of long-distance motor hauling in the exhibit of the original truck which made the transcontinental record for a fully equipped commercial car of seventeen and one-half days from San Francisco to New York last Summer. The wheels and lower part of the body are still liberally besmeared with the original Western dust and dirt.

Dodges Show Half-ton Truck.

The Dodge Brothers half-ton commercial car is another popular type of the lighter class. Three different bodies are shown, one being specially designed for use by large department stores. The Oldsmobile one-ton car is a newcomer, having been brought out this season. It is shown with a neat express body. The Reo one-ton models are shown with several body types, including an ambulance, a Fire Department wagon equipped with hook and ladder appliances, an express delivery, and two omnibuses, one with a closed body having wide windows on the sides.

Among the heavier trucks, the Packard shows a new six-ton horizontal-hoist body, designed especially for the use of contractors in the New York territory. The chassis has a wheel base of thirteen feet. The steel convertible body has a capacity of four cubic yards. Steel towing hooks in front and a trailer drawbar are added conveniences. The cab is inclosed, and the driver's seat will accommodate three men. An electric starter may be installed as special equipment. Other Packard models are a well-finished five-ton chassis of the five to five and one-half ton truck, a three-ton truck with a stake-side body, and one of the two to two and one-half ton models.

The two models of the United States trucks, two and a half and five tons respectively, have their radiators painted in the patriotic red, white, and blue colors to add distinction to the name. The Giant trucks, whose name suggests power and efficiency, are shown in several models, from two to three and a half tons, including a fine chassis of the latter size. The valuable feature of the Giants is that by a patented device they are enabled to operate with the greatest efficiency on low-grade fuels, including not only the low-grade gasoline, but with kerosene, and many of them in successful use are operated entirely by kerosene.

Another newcomer in the New York exhibition field is the Day-Elder truck, which is made in large sizes. A chassis of the six-ton model is shown and also one of the same type equipped with a capacious contractor's dump body, which may be raised and lowered by a hoist. The Day-Elders are also made in one, two, and three ton models. Among the tractors, of which more were made last year for farm use than in any previous season, are the new Fordson, in the Armory, which was the centre of a curious crowd during the evening; the Maxim, and the E-B farm tractor equipped with three large plow blades.

Four cylinders are the universal truck motor power. There is a tendency to make the engines somewhat larger than formerly in relation to the load capacity. More models than formerly carry their gear boxes amidships and the gearsets of the four speed types are gaining in number on the larger vehicles. Less than [illegible] per cent. of the new models are driven by side chains, the worm drive being well in advance, thus reversing their respective positions in popular use five years ago. There is also a considerable increase in the number of chassis models equipped with internal gear, while the bevel and the double-reduction types are fewer in number.

In load capacity, next to the small light delivery wagons, the three and one-half ton truck appears the most popular. The demand of the United States and the Allied Governments influenced the large increase in the three-and-one-half-ton trucks. There are seven times as many manufacturers of this type as was the case in the year before the war. The popularity of the one-and-one-half-ton type is also seen in the fact that that size is now being produced in twenty-four models, which were not on the market last year.

In connection with the truck show the members of the Automotive Electric Association, composed of manufacturers of electric equipment for automobiles, held the first session of its semi-annual Winter meeting yesterday at the Hotel Astor, and the annual dinner will be held tonight at the Astor. The metropolitan section of the Society of Automotive Engineers held a dinner last night at the Automobile Club of America. C. T. Morris, who was associated in the design of the army transport Class B truck, and Captain Lord of the Motor Transport Corps were among the speakers.

The motor truck show will be open in both buildings during the remainder of the week.

EDISON, 72, DENIES HE IS GROWING OLD

Kicks His Outstretched Hand and Dances When Former Associate Chides Him.

On the eve of his seventy-second birthday, Thomas A. Edison was the guest at a luncheon given in the Robert Treat Hotel in Newark yesterday by the men with whom he was associated in inventing and experimenting thirty-five years ago. After renewing old acquaintances he left with Mrs. Edison and their son, Theodore, for a six weeks' vacation on his plantation at Fort Myer, Fla., his first vacation since America entered the war.

The Edison Pioneers, embracing men who are now prominent in science and manufacturing, arranged the reception to Mr. Edison as a reunion and birthday testimonial. Some of those present had not seen him in thirty years. As the members filed up to shake hands with their old associate, one remarked that the inventor "was growing old."

"Getting old?" Edison replied. "I should say not. Look!"

He extended his arm, touched his hand with his foot and then whirled on one foot while his friends cheered.

T. Commerford Martin, Executive Secretary of the National Electric Light Association, showed the inventor a souvenir he had kept since 1870. It was a frame containing a photograph of Edison and his first phonograph. Mr. Martin also exhibited the data on an experiment begun in 1870 and never completed. One of the exhibits was a sheet of paper with the inscription "Thomas A. Edison, Aug. 30, 1870," written on it in raised characters. An explanation above the name said: "Written with an ink that raised the paper and intended for use of the blind." Mr. Edison said he did not finish the experiment because he was "too busy with other things."

Each of the fifty guests handed Mr. Edison an envelope. Knowing Mr. Edison's aversion to public speaking because he cannot hear perfectly, the committee wrote the members to bring written messages to give to the inventor. A letter of congratulation was received by Mr. Edison from the New York Electrical Society, which expressed the wish that "he may live to be as old as his great-grandfather." Mr. Edison said that his great-grandfather lived to be 104.

"Edison has laid the foundations for many great industries. In some cases he has put in the cornerstone, and in several instances he has put the key to the arch. It has been estimated that there are a thousand million dollars invested in the industries which he has either created or for which he has laid part of the foundation; and a million employes are in these industries.

"Mr. Edison's friends are, of course, very much interested in what he has done, but we can state that he has been actively employed in a great many different directions and as we all know these employments must have meant a multiplicity of wonderful ideas and enormous amount of work and great results. One of the greatest achievements of the war by the United States Navy was the transporting to Europe, without loss, of a great army of men. That this was done practically without loss required many intense activities, many improvements, and great inventive skill."

FRENCH ACT MAETERLINCK.

Give a "Disappointing Performance of "Pelleas et Melisande."

PELLEAS AND MELISANDE, by Maurice Maeterlinck. At the Theatre du Vieux Colombier.

Arkel	Marcel Millet
Genevieve	Valentine Tessier
Pelleas	Jean Sarment
Goland	Robert Bogaert
Melisande	Suzanne Bing
Yniold	Pascal
Un Medicin	Henri Dhurtal
Le Portier	Romain Bouquet
Les Servantes	Luciene Bogaert. Renee Bouquet. Jeannine Bresages. Jane Lory.

The French company of Director Jacques Copeau, minus, among other sadly missed elements, the brilliant and versatile acting of Charles Dullin, whose departure from the company has been announced, gave a performance of Maeterlinck's "Pelléas et Mélisande" at the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier last night. To those familiar with the poetic beauty and pathos of Maeterlinck's sombre yet delicate tragedy, the performance last night was distinctly disappointing.

The stage-setting, in the first place, was conspicuous by its absence; persons lost themselves in dark and tangled forests about which they declaimed their lines—but there was not a tree, except an occasional curtain fold, in sight; they stared through non-existent mists, and staggered blindly through the stifling atmosphere of black subterranean dungeon passages non-existent to the eye and consisting of precisely the same corner of the stage-setting as had served a few moments earlier as a bright sunlit pool in the castle park. The little French theatre has done infinitely better heretofore in the matter of mise-en-scène. It has never done worse.

Suzanne Bing, as Mélisande, did not help restore the lost illusion. The wondrous long golden tresses with which Maeterlinck's beautiful "little mother" is adorned, and to which Pelléas so ardently pours out his addresses of love, were last night a most glaring assortment of brilliant white yarn, of which, yellow in the moonlight, luxurious hanks fell tangled and tumbling down over the castle window-sill and over the enamored lover beneath, amid general and very disconcerting laughter in the audience. Mlle. Bing's expression, too, was rather unpleasantly querulous when she spoke, and her portrayal too dead when she was silent. One regretted that the pretty Renée Bouquet and the skillful Lucienne Bogaert were relegated to the rôles of scrubwomen in the play. Jean Sarment's rendition of the part of Pelléas was likewise too monotonous. Robert Bogaert gave a strong and effective portrayal of the part of Golaud, and Marcel Millet a passable performance of Arkel, the ancient King of Allemonde, whose gentle wisdom, however, was made to suffer by a certain Polonius-like long-windedness. By odds the most winning acting of the evening was furnished by the little child that appeared under the name of Pascal, as Ynlold, the son of Golaud and stepson of Mélisande, and whose excellent performance of the part was generously applauded.

HOSPITAL REJECTS PLAN FOR A MERGER

WANT ENTITY PRESERVED

Heavy Vote Recorded Against Measure Which Was Advocated by the Institution's Trustees.

After a protracted meeting of members of the Association of the Lenox Hill Hospital, Seventy-seventh Street and Park Avenue, held last evening in the Krackowizer Hall of the dispensary, the proposal to merge the institution with Columbia University was beaten by a heavy majority. That which brought about the defeat of the proposal was the appeal to keep intact that which was known in New York for many years as the German Hospital.

The question of the merger had been under discussion for some time. It had been proposed by Columbia and the Board of Trustees of the hospital heartily approved of it. The hospital's Association of Physicians and Surgeons, of which Dr. George W. Jacoby is the President, disapproved of the merger by a considerable majority. The chief objection to the plan of merger was that it gave to Columbia eleven trustees and to the hospital only ten.

The meeting last night was presided over by Fritz Achelis, President of the Board of Trustees. From the very minute of calling the meeting to order, it was evident that there were many opponents of the proposal present. After the Secretary had announced the nominations for the Board of Trustees to fill the places of those whose terms expired yesterday, Mr. Achelis offered the suggestion that the question of merger be referred to a committee of nine, three from the membership of the association, three from the Board of Trustees and three from the staff of the hospital's physicians and surgeons.

Charles Miehling, a member of the association, moved as an amendment—the Chairman's suggestion came to be regarded as a motion—that the proposal be disapproved and the trustees be instructed to break off all pending negotiations. The question being fairly before the house, the debate started. Bernard Ridder, one of the trustees, spoke for the appointment of the committee and deferring action.

"There are some here," said Mr. Ridder, "who are showing splendid, but unusual enthusiasm, for the institution we all love. If this proposal has done nothing else, it has aroused the members of the association to take the trouble to have at least one meeting in many years fairly well attended. If the enthusiasm of the opponents of the plan is a real enthusiasm, it will be still vigorous a month from now. If it won't last a month, then it is not worth much to the hospital."

Dr. A. Jacobi spoke in favor of the amendment, and so did Dr. Meyer of the hospital staff. Dr. George W. Jacoby said that somebody had given out misinformation. At the meeting of the Trustees and physicians held on Jan. 22, he said, those present understood that the merger had been completed. It was apparent now that such was not the case, and he was glad to know it. Dr. F. Krug said that what was needed most in the Lenox Hill Hospital was not a merger, but new blood.

"Why," said Dr. Krug, "there hasn't been an independently elected Board of Trustees of this institution in fifteen years. Let's have one, at least, that represents something besides themselves. They tell us that we will have some fine things when Columbia gobbles us up, as she has tried to gobble up other hospitals and failed. They say we are in debt and can't meet our running expenses. But Columbia needs $600,000, and yet she promises us new buildings and pretty much new everything else. Drop this plan and the doctors who have stood by the hospital for years will see to it that the needed money is raised."

The treasurer called attention to the fact that there had been annual deficits for several years, the deficit for 1918 being $46,740, and he added that it was because of the financial condition of the institution that the trustees favored the merger. The amendment was put and carried.

The following retiring trustees were re-elected: Fritz Achelis, Adolf Kutroff, Bernard Ridder, Daniel Schnakenberg, and Julius A. Wursberg.

MISS BLAIR BETROTHED.

Daughter of C. Ledyard Blair to Wed Lieut. Pierpont M. Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Ledyard Blair of New York and Blairsden, Peapack, N. J., have announced the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Marie Louise Blair, to Lieutenant Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton and a grandson of the late J. Pierpont Morgan. Miss Blair, who made her début a year or so ago, is a sister of Mrs. H. Rivington Pyne, Mrs. William Clark, and Mrs. Richard Van Nest Gambrill.

MACDONOUGH CRAVEN DEAD.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Under Mayor McClellan Was 60.

Macdonough Craven, who served as Street Cleaning Commissioner under Mayor McClellan, died yesterday at his home, 263 Eighty-second Street, Bay Ridge, from heart disease. Mr. Craven was in his sixty-first year and had been in feeble health for the last eight years.

Mr. Craven served as Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner under Commissioner Waring and was later appointed by the Mayor to take charge of the department.

Charlotte Thompson, Dramatist.

Miss Charlotte Thompson, writer and dramatist, died suddenly yesterday of heart disease at her residence, 92 Grove Street, in her thirty-sixth year. Her best known work was the dramatization of "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie," in which Margaret Anglin starred for several seasons. She was the co-author with Kate Douglas Wiggin of the stage version of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Chicago Tribune Extends Its Service

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—The Tribune will make this announcement tomorrow: "An extension of Tribune service of greatest importance has just been effected by the appointment of William H. Field, Second Vice President of The Chicago Tribune, to be Eastern representative of The Tribune, with headquarters in New York. Mr. Field will be in charge of all Tribune activities, both editorial and business nature, in the East."

Nat Goodwin's Estate.

Nat C. Goodwin, actor, who died suddenly on Jan. 31, left no will and had an estate of only $6,000 in this State, and real estate of an undetermined value in the West. This was disclosed yesterday when his father, Nathaniel C. Goodwin of 72 Forest Street, Roxbury, Mass., applied for letters of administration, and stated that he and his wife are his son's only heirs. Mr. Goodwin is 85 years old, and his wife is 80.

MILITARY SENTENCES WILL BE REDUCED

Baker Announces a Revision of Judgments Passed by General Courts-Martial.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Revision of sentences imposed by general courts-martial for offenses committed during the war is to be made by a board of officers constituted in the office of the Judge Advocate General of the Army. Secretary Baker announced today that the result would be "a substantial reduction of the sentences in nearly all cases save those of the gravest character, or where aggravated circumstances exist."

The exact number of military prisoners held since the beginning of hostilities affected was not made known, but Mr. Baker recently informed the Senate that 22,000 trials by general courts-martial had been held since the beginning of hostilities. Approximately 350,000 other cases were heard, but as the charges were not of a serious nature the trials were by special or summary courts.

HYLAN AT PALM BEACH.

Mayor Says the Big Question Is the Control of the Trusts.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 10.—Mayor John F. Hylan of New York arrived at noon to begin his usual Winter vacation, which he said would last from two to three weeks. He is accompanied by his wife and daughter. He accepted an invitation awaiting him here from E. G. Sewell, President of the Miami Chamber of Commerce, to judge boat races in the annual regatta there Saturday. The other judges will be Henry Watterson, ex-Governor Capper of Kansas, ex-Governor Durban of Indiana, Carl G. Fisher of Minneapolis, John H. Hanan, and Samuel Untermyer of New York.

Talking about public matters, the Mayor said the biggest question for the people is the control of the trusts that deal in necessities, milk, ice, coal, beef, and transportation. Of the milk controversy in New York he said: "If it hadn't been settled the way it was there would probably have been some indictments." He added that the whole country was now in the grasp of the meat trust.

Firm Price Tone Reflects Short Covering, with Business Dull—U. S. Steel Bookings Decline.

The strength which the industrial stock list as a whole showed yesterday was not promoted by news developments, and thus was emphasized again the highly professional character of the market. The upturn of some of the steel stocks, particularly United States Steel common, the shipping issues, the copper stocks, and equipment shares, was considered in the main the result of short covering after traders found the undertone of prices of a character which forestalled a continuation of last week's decline. The comparative ease with which prices have moved forward after periods of pressure for some days past has strengthened the belief in trading quarters that a substantial short interest exists. Whenever short sales have brought into light a firm substructure, it has required comparatively little buying to cause recoveries of a point or more among the favorite speculative stocks in the course of the day. The Liberty bond market again lost ground, the Fourth 4¼s reaching a new low level at 93.90. Before the close a fair recovery occurred, but the quality of dealings all the way along was of a sort to discourage dealers in Government issues, who had expected a month ago to find some improvement before the middle of February. Bonds of the Fourth issue stood on a 4⅞ per cent. income basis, a fact which brought forth predictions that the next loan might have to be issued at 5 per cent. unless special provisions were made for increasing the investment attraction outside of the interest rate.

The Steel Corporation's monthly report on bookings showed a decrease of close to 695,000 tons in January. In the two months ended Jan. 31 advance orders have declined more than 1,400,000 tons, which reflects with considerable force the shrinkage of new business since the armistice was signed and war work began to taper off sharply. The fact that unfilled orders at the end of last month were the smallest reported for more than three years was worth considering against the background of the corporation's largely increased facilities in this period. The corporation's mills are still fairly busy, considerably more so in fact than many competing plants, but it is understood that much of the output is going to replace depleted stocks in warehouses which have no province in reflecting the actual state of current buying. How long this production will continue is problematical, but it hardly seems reasonable to expect the corporation to lay by stocks on a large scale at current high costs and with the price outlook uncertain. It is to be noted, however, that quotations in major lines have not been readjusted downward since the December reduction was announced.

The latest statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany, issued as of Jan. 31, shows that circulation is still increasing. During the week of that date the expansion was more than $63,500,000, while the total of notes outstanding was expanded by less than $340,000,000 during January. Gold holdings declined about $420,000 in the week. Russian bonds on the local market fell back rather suddenly yesterday when speculators decided that the early expectations of conferences with Bolshevist leaders in connection with the peace terms had been perhaps too enthusiastic. The call money market by moving up to a 6 per cent. basis in the afternoon probably reflected preparations for the offering of $600,000,000 of new Treasury certificates.

To Close Bond Transfer Books.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York announced yesterday that the transfer books of the Third Liberty Loan will close at the end of business Saturday, Feb. 15, and will reopen at the opening of business on Monday, March 17. During this period no transfers of registered bonds or exchanges of registered and coupon bonds of this sort will be permitted.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Mexico for Discussion Tonight.

Conditions in Mexico are the subject of animated discussion and debate whenever men get together who have knowledge of things south of the border. There promises to be much said on Mexico at a dinner tonight at the Hotel Astor of the Council on Foreign Relations, as some of the members are vitally interested in business in that country.

Liberty 4¼s Near 5 Per Cent. Basis.

The fourth 4¼ per cent. Liberty Loan bonds around 93.90 yield almost 5 per cent. The entire group receded yesterday and their future movements will draw closer attention in banking circles than heretofore because of the relationship between the existing market and the forthcoming Victory Liberty bonds.

Tobacco Stocks Up.

Tobacco Products' advance of something more than 3 points was accompanied by rumors that the annual report for 1918, which is expected to be made public shortly, will show approximately $17 a share earned on the common stock before deducting the war taxes. In the previous year the earnings before taxes amounted to $9.32, and as taxes in 1917 were not especially heavy, and as they are not expected to be as heavy this year as the taxes of some other corporations will be, the Street found little difficulty in making a "bull argument" out of the rumors of $17 for 1918. American Tobacco, which has been attracting some attention of late, was also strong yesterday.

Stock Exchange Commissions.

The Governing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange is expected to take some action on the very troublesome question of commissions at the meeting this week, which will be held on Thursday owing to the holiday on Wednesday. A member of the committee yesterday expressed the opinion that nothing definite would be done at this meeting. The proposed advance in rates, he thought, was warranted in view of the increased cost of operation, but, he felt that against this would be the question of business policy. To retain present schedules, he believes, will be best for the Exchange in the long run.

Marine Preferred.

International Mercantile Marine preferred, after going off about 1½ points early in the day, shifted about and by 3 o'clock had not only recovered all of its loss, but had scored a net gain of nearly 2½ points on the day. Accompanying this performance, there was vague talk of how something very good would eventuate to the shareholders if only the United States Government would withdraw its bid for the company's British ships and allow the disposal of them in the open market. Just why this should be so, with ocean freights coming down alarmingly—for the ship owners—is not easily explained, and, in all probability, a truer reason for the advance in the stock quotation would be that a top-heavy short interest had decided the time ripe for covering, said covering being for purely technical reasons.

Mexican Bonds Down.

There may or may not be coincidence in the fact that while Rafaelo Nieto, unofficial financial missionary from Mexico, was conferring with local bankers anent the rehabilitation of Mexican finances, Mexican 5 per cent. bonds due 1945 changed hands on the Stock Exchange at 61, or 9 points below the last previous sale of this issue, which took place on Jan. 13.

Shipping Uncertainties.

While exporters and importers have welcomed the recent reduction in shipping rates announced by the United States Shipping Board as a removal of restrictions which had caused them a great deal of inconvenience and in many instances substantial loss, criticism is becoming more widespread from day to day that the rate reductions in some trade channels have not been of particular benefit, as there have been too few Shipping Board vessels available for use in those channels, and privately controlled tonnage has been held at a prohibitive rate. It is asserted in some quarters that shippers find it more profitable to send consignments by way of England because the rate asked by private shipowners who are operating vessels in a direct French service is so high. The private rate to French ports is reported at $55 a ton, while the British tonnage quotation to the United Kingdom is $20. To transfer to France from England costs about $10 a ton more, and the advantage of the roundabout shipment is obvious. The private rate, however, is reported to be softening considerably, with some space rumored as available at as low at $40 a ton.

Another Copper Dividend Cut.

The announcement yesterday by the Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation of the regular $1 quarterly dividend payable March 1 and the passing of the payment of 25 cents a share, which has been declared coincidentally with the regular $1 payment in each quarter since December, 1917, came as a surprise. The Directors were not due to meet for dividend action until Wednesday, but the meeting was moved forward because of the holiday on that date. No official announcement was made in connection with the passing of the extra dividend, but the action was attributed in authoritative quarters to a desire to conserve the company's cash because of the existing uncertainty regarding the future for copper.

An Oil Rush.

Attention was called to the information received in the financial district yesterday that the Texas & Pacific Railway was having a hard job to transport all of the material booked for shipment over its lines to the Ranger Oil fields in Texas, and the crowded condition of the carrier was compared with the old-time gold stampedes and mining rushes. It was said that between 800 and 1,000 cars of materials billed to the Ranger field were on the railroad's tracks east of the town of Ranger each day. This surplus the company is able to distribute only gradually, and material for the construction of storage tanks is given preference over everything else.

Utility Buys Spokane Company.

The Washington Water Power Company of Spokane, Wash., has bought the Spokane Heat, Light, and Power Company, according to advices received in Wall Street yesterday. It is understood that the deal was put through on a small cash payment, the creditors and security holders of the light and power company, which has been in the hands of a receiver for several months, agreeing to take an issue of $1,400,000 twenty-year unsecured debentures of the purchasing company, which will bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent. for the first six years, 4 per cent. for the next seven years, and 5 per cent. for the remaining seven years. It is also understood that the Washington Water Power Company will continue the operation of the heating company's steam distributing plant and will operate the acquired property as a subsidiary. The Washington Public Service Commission has approved electric lighting and power rate increases in Spokane recently and it is expected that revenues will improve because of this.

PLAN FOR BELGIAN CREDIT.

Syndicate of Banks to Accept $50,000,000 Trade Bills.

The $50,000,000 credit to Belgium, to be granted by a syndicate of New York bankers, including the Guaranty Trust Company, the National City Bank, the National Bank of Commerce, and J. P. Morgan & Co., is about completed, with only a few details yet to be arranged. The plan, it is understood, calls for the selling of goods by American merchants and manufacturers to Belgian merchants and manufacturers. The American merchants will draw on the Belgian consumers of American goods, these bills will be accepted by a syndicate of Belgian banks, and, in turn, by the American syndicate managers.

The American syndicate managers will form a syndicate of banks throughout this country. This syndicate, it is believed, will purchase the acceptances at a rate said to be [illegible] per cent. The syndicate managers, under this plan are expected to receive a commission of one-half of 1 per cent., thus making the accommodation cost Belgium 7 per cent.

GARRETSON FAVORS PLUMB'S RAIL PLAN

Conductors' Chief Tells Senators All Brotherhood Heads Agree with Him.

CALLS YEAR'S TEST UNFAIR

But Says He Sees in It the Germ of an Ideal Form of Government Ownership.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—A. B. Garretson, President of the Order of Railway Conductors, appeared today before Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to support, in behalf of the four brotherhoods and the fourteen railway unions, the plan presented last week to the committee by Glenn E. Plumb, who would have the Government own the railways, but have them operated by a private corporation composed of railway employes.

Garretson told the committee that he was the only actual advocate of Government ownership in general among the four brotherhood heads, but that the other three had become convinced thtt, in the matter of the rairoads, Government ownership was the best solution of the rail problem. The other three brotherhood heads, W. G. Lee of the trainmen, Warren S. Stone of the engineers, and Timothy Shea of the firemen, like Mr. Garretson, indorse the Plumb plan.

"Stone, Lee, and Shea believe in private ownership as a general thing," the witness told the committee. "But they believe that Government ownership of the railways is the best thing."

"What took place during the year of the railroads under Federal control that induced railroad men to change their minds and favor Government ownership of railroads?" Senator Townsend of Michigan asked Mr. Garretson.

"Because they saw within that operation, the germ of what might be perfected," replied the witness.

He had just told the committee that "efficiency never had any test," under Government control because of the troubled war conditions.

"The wonder is," he said, "not that the railroad operation failed in many directions, but that it did as well as it did."

In the course of his testimony Mr. Garretson emphasized more than once that, while he stood for the principles of the Plumb plan, he would not say he indorsed all its details. He also made the point that he spoke only for himself in giving opinions, "for," said he, "during the discussion here before the committee things may come out that we have never talked about among the railway men."

Senator Underwood asked if Mr. Garretson considered that in case of a return to the private ownership of railroads a budget system should be adopted.

"Yes," replied Mr. Garretson, "and if it is in the power of man to do it, a plan to equalize and aid the weaker roads should be devised."

A considerable part of the witness's time on the stand was devoted to answering questions touching on the financial status of the roads.

"It might excite derision if it was said that a walking delegate had studied the high finance of the roads," said Mr. Garretson. "But I have."

When he was asked his views upon passing laws beforehand, in case the roads were sent back to the private owners in twenty-one months, the Brotherhood President said:

"I don't believe there is a man in the country who would dare advocating turning back the railroads untrammeled."

Mr. Garretson will testify again tomorrow. Today, Charles E. Cottrell of the Southeastern Traffic League, protested to the committee against what he termed "the arbitrary power" of the Director General in revising rates.

CANCEL BUSINESS MEETING.

Conference Called for Mr. Kahn's Home Postponed.

A meeting of prominent bankers and business men which was scheduled for today at the home of Otto H. Kahn to consider certain matters of public interest, has been postponed indefinitely. The invitations were recalled by Mr. Kahn yesterday for reasons which were not made known. The meeting was to have been a continuation of conferences which began in Chicago several weeks ago having as their primary purpose the preparation of ways and means to present the position of business, banking, and industry to the public during the current period of readjustment.

Reports from the Western cities that men representing capital were uniting to combat the spread of Bolshevism in this country were said by local bankers to be inadequate in describing the purposes in mind. Bankers who were to have attended the meeting at Mr. Kahn's house asserted that the idea in view was not only to undertake an educational campaign against Bolshevist theories, but also to bring leading representatives of business and industrial employers into greater prominence than they have been in the past in the conduct of public matters covering a wide field.

COTTON MAKES A NEW LOW.

Recovers from 5 to 25 Points in Late Trading.

The new week began with little encouragement for bulls in the cotton market. The opening was steady enough, with first prices up 15 to 25 points from Saturday's closing, and there was some moderate buying in the first few minutes. Then the usual liquidation of old long accounts, the expected selling from the South and no support worthy of the name from any source developed and the market turned downward. The ring sold freely and houses with foreign connections also were sellers.

By midday the market was distinctly weak and shortly after noon prices stood at the lowest yet recorded for the near months. May sold at 19.80c and July was at 19.80c, while among the far months, October, the most active, sold off to 18.40c. These prices were the extremes for the day, as it turned out, for following the fall into new low ground, the market rallied sharply and before the close all of the losses had been recovered and net gains of 5 to 25 points had been scored.

In the afternoon rally, most of which was crowded into the last hour, there was wholesale covering of shorts and some pretty good speculative buying by Wall Street houses, as well as some trade buying. Foreigners did not take much, if any, in the rally, which was purely a domestic affair.

Nothing in the news could account for the late turn of the market. The early weakness was explained by a general bearishness and by the reduction of prices in many lines of cotton goods. The latter, specifically, coupled with no considerable improvement in the labor situation, may be said to have forced the new low records. The late buying, it was generally felt, was due to technical conditions within the market, and for this reason it was not especially comforting to the bulls.

RAILROAD MEN SEE END OF M'ADOO PLAN

Executives Think Legislation May Be Left to New Congress.

EXPECT $500,000,000 GRANT

Believe Administration Will Allow Wage Increase of $75,000,000 to Workers.

Members of the Standing Committee of the Association of Railway Executives, who attended the meeting in Washington last Friday, said yesterday that little will probably be done in the way of legislation looking to a clarifying of the railroad situation before late Fall of this year. At that time, they believe, the President will either call a special session of Congress to consider the question of railroad legislation or the problem will go in its entirety to the new Congress.

In the interim, it is understood that the plans of the Association of Railway Executives call for an assumption by the association of more of the duties which are now distributed among a large number of independent organizations in the railway world. It was learned yesterday that the Standing Committee went into the functions of many of these committees and organizations thoroughly, and that one of the developments of the near future may be the taking over of the duties of the Railway Presidents' Conference Committee on valuation. It is also expected that the functions of the Committee on Railway Mail Pay will be taken over by the Executives' Association, as probably also will the work of accounting officers and engineers of the different railway companies and organizations.

It is confidently expected by railroad men who have been in Washington recently that former Director General of Railroads McAdoo's plan for an extension of the period of Federal control over a five-year period instead of the twenty-one months provided by the present law, will not be adopted by Congress. At the same time they believe that Director General Hines will get only $500,000,000 of the $750,000,000 he has requested from Congress, and it is the consensus of opinion that there will be scarcely any improvements to the railroad properties as a result.

It is believed that the railroad labor unions, which are now pressing the Railroad Administration for still further wage increases, involving an added expenditure by the carriers of the country amounting to between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000, will be successful.

STEEL ORDERS FALL OFF.

Corporation's Unfilled Bookings the Smallest Since October, 1915.

The United States Steel Corporation's unfilled orders declined 694,884 tons in January. The total on Jan. 31 was 6,684,268 tons, the smallest since Oct. 31, 1915, when 6,165,000 tons were reported. The decline of advance business in December and January together was more than 1,400,000 tons, a shrinkage which the industry considers as emphasizing the slackening of commercial purchases of steel after the armistice was signed.

The current bookings compare with 12,183,083 tons on April 30, 1917, the maximum total reported by the corporation; with 11,474,054 tons on Jan. 31, 1917, and 9,477,853 tons on Jan. 31 last year. From Jan. 31, 1917, to the end of August that year orders on hand did not fall below 10,400,000 tons at any time and were not below 8,000,000 tons last year in any month except December.

While new orders have fallen away rapidly since Dec. 1 last the corporation's mills have been working above 75 per cent. of capacity, with some around 85 per cent., according to estimates heard in the trade. The output has been partly for customers who have specified against contracts placed prior to the absorption of production by the Government and also for the corporation's warehouses. It is estimated that between 25 and 30 per cent. of current production is going into stocks which were greatly depleted during the period when war demands were requiring almost all the mill outturn.

CAN EARNINGS DECLINE.

The report of the Continental Can Company for the year ended with Dec. 31, 1918, shows a surplus after taxes and depreciation amounting to $2,199,044, which was equal after the deduction of preferred dividends to $13.86 a share earned on the $13,500,000 outstanding common stock. This compared with $29.36 earned on the same stock in the preceding year.

Net earnings of the company for the year were $3,728,269, which compared with $4,531,369 in 1917. After the payment of dividends on both the preferred and common stock and the deduction of $165,000 for the redemption of preferred stock, the surplus for the year was $897,018, which compared with $2,321,402 in the preceding year. This added to the previous surplus made the total surplus for the year $6,123,258, which after the deduction of a 35 per cent. stock dividend on the common was reduced to $2,623,258, which compared with a surplus of $5,226,240 in 1917.

RAILWAY EARNINGS FALL.

Detroit United Company Reports Surplus of $1,344,584.

The report of the Detroit United Railway for tre year ended with last December, which was made public yesterday, showed a surplus, after interest charges and reserves for depreciation and Federal taxes, of $1,344,584, which was equivalent to $8.96 a share earned on the $15,000,00 capital stock. In the preceding year $9.80 a share was earned on $12,500,000 capital stock.

Gross earnings for the year increased to $19,014,018 from $17,427,940 in 1917, and operating expenses increased to $14,758,339 from $13,259,791. Net income for the year was $4,255,679, as compared with $4,168,149 in 1917.

New Issue

$12,500,000
Public Service Corporation of New Jersey
Three-Year Secured Convertible 7% Gold Notes

To be dated March 1, 1919 To mature March 1, 1922
Total authorized issue $12,500,000

The Corporation will pay any normal Federal Income Tax which it may lawfully pay at the source, not exceeding the present rate of two per cent.

Convertible at the option of the holder at any time prior to December 31, 1921, or until any earlier redemption, into 8% Cumulative Preferred Stock of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey on the basis of 100% for the Notes and [illegible]½% for the Stock, with adjustment of interest and dividends, upon thirty days' previous notice to the Corporation of each such election to convert.

Redeemable at the Corporation's option in whole or in part on sixty days' notice, at a premium of one per cent. for each year, or any part thereof, of unexpired life, in each case with accrued interest. Interest payable March 1 and September 1. Principal and interest payable at the office of the Trustee in Philadelphia, or at the agency of the Corporation in New York. Coupon Notes in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, interchangeable; registerable as to principal only.

Fidelity Trust Company, Philadelphia, Trustee

The following information regarding these Notes is summarized from a letter signed by Thomas N. McCarter, Esq., President of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, copy of which may be had on request:

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey owns all but 47 shares of all stock of Public Service Gas Company, Public Service Electric Company, and Public Service Railway Company.

These subsidiaries operate all the gas, electric, and street railway properties in the larger cities and more populous sections of New Jersey—excepting the shore resorts, the gas service in Elizabeth and the street railway in Trenton.

The territory has a population exceeding 2,500,[illegible]0, and the combined gross earnings now exceed Fifty Million Dollars annually.

These Notes will be a direct obligation of the Corporation, secured by pledge of $14,000,000 of its General Mortgage Sinking Fund 5% Bonds due October 1, 1959, and $5,000,000 Capital Stock of Public Service Electric Company. These securities are valued at over 125% of the principal amount of these Notes.

The Total Combined Income for the year 1918 (after providing for all fixed charges of subsidiary companies and after liberal maintenance expenditures but before reservations for depreciation and amortization) was $9,043,417, which exceeds two and three-tenths times the annual interest requirements on all funded debt of the Corporation, including interest on these Notes. The gas and electric properties have contributed approximately 80% of such Total Combined Income in the past five years.

These Notes will be followed by $10,000,000 new 8% Cumulative Preferred Stock about to be offered to the Corporation's stockholders for cash at par and of which the sale of over $6,[illegible]0,000 has already been assured, and by the outstanding $30,000,000 Common Stock all issued for cash at par.

The proceeds of these Notes and new Preferred Stock will pay off maturing notes, discharge floating debt, provide additional working capital and diminish materially the annual interest charges.

We are advised that at the meeting held February 10, 1919, the Stockholders have authorized this issue.

All legal matters in connection with the issue of these Notes will be passed upon by Messrs. Stetson, Jennings & Russell, and by R. V. Lindabury, Esq. The accounts have been audited annually by Messrs. Niles & Niles, of New York, Certified Public Accountants.

The above Notes are offered, when, as and if issued and received by us

At 98½ and Interest to Yield over 7.55%

The right is reserved to reject any and all applications, and also, in any case, to award a smaller amount than applied for. Discount at the rate of 7% per annum on the principal amount of Notes will be allowed from date of payment to March 1, 1919. Temporary Receipts of Drexel & Company, of Philadelphia, will be delivered, exchangeable for definitive Notes when, as and if received from the Corporation.

The information and statistics contained in this advertisement have been obtained from sources that we deem reliable, and while not guaranteed are accepted by us as correct.

DISCUSSES MEXICAN LOAN WITH MORGANS

PLANS TO REFUND DEBT

Representative from Southern Republic Seeks Capital for Development.

Rafaelo Nieto, Mexican financial expert, who is in the United States for the purpose of attempting to rehabilitate the finances of his country, had a long conference with representatives of J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday. Following the conference neither Mr. Nieto nor members of the banking firm would make any official statement, but it was reported that nothing definite had been accomplished.

Mr. Nieto, it is understood, is anxious to work out some plan whereby the Mexican national debt may be refunded and new capital secured for the internal development of the southern republic. The national debt, translated into dollars, is equal to approximately $375,000,000, and bankers who have studied the subject doubt if the Mexican income, after deducting the cost of government, would be sufficient to pay interest on this sum and allow a balance for new money. Under the circumstances, American bankers hesitate to undertake any new financing in the interest of Mexico unless they are assured that some sort of guarantee will be forthcoming. This, it is understood, has been explained to Mr. Nieto, who, it may be said, is not empowered to bind Mexico to any definite agreement, even if one were possible of consummation at the present time.

A plan for refunding Mexico, and for supplying capital for new development work, has tentatively been prepared, but all interests concerned insist that nothing definite can be said. However, it became known yesterday that this plan calls for the refunding of the Mexican debt into a comprehensive issue of bonds of one description; the issuance of new bonds for capital with which to develop some of the natural resources of Mexico; the pledging of the national customs revenue as security for the whole debt, and the administration of the customs revenue by a joint commission or international board of representatives of the United States and Mexico.

F. FRANKFURTER RESIGNS.

Quits His Post as Chairman of the War Labor Policies Board.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Felix Frankfurter today announced his resignation as assistant to the Secretary of Labor and Chairman of the War Labor Policies Board. The board will go out of existence within a few weeks, since its activities have come to an end with the close of the war.

George L. Bell, who came from the State Immigration and Housing Commission of California to be the executive officer of the board, will go to New York to become the impartial Chairman of a permanent board of arbitration which is being organized to handle disputes in the clothing industry.

Mr. Frankfurter, formerly a Professor in the Harvard Law School, has not announced his future plans.

The War Labor Policies Board was charged with the task of co-ordinating the activities of the various Government departments concerned with industrial relations during the war.

BELGIUM ASKS ALLIED LOAN.

Wants to Buy Raw Materials to Solve Unemployment Problem.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Lack of raw material is the principle cause of unemployment in Belgium, according to Belgian official advices today, and to obviate this situation the Government has asked the allied powers for a credit with which to purchase materials and products of prime necessity.

Workmen and manufacturers were reported to be anxious to start production immediately so as to be able to face the enormous increase in the cost of living which Premier Delacroix said was five or si xtimes greater than before the war.

FORECAST EMBARGO EFFECT

City Bank Shows Ban Takes in 1 Per Cent. of Our Exports in 1914.

Exports from the United States to Great Britain of the fifty articles recently named in the British prohibition order were less than 1 per cent. of the total American exports and one-half of 1 per cent. of British imports in the years immediately preceding the war, according to a compilation made by the National City Bank from the official records of both countries. This reads in part:

"The most important of the prohibited articles, as measured by the value of our exports thereof to Great Britain, are apparently photographic apparatus, metal-working machinery, sewing machines, soap, and apparel. Of photographic apparatus exported from the United States (including motion picture films and other sensitized materials) the average in the three fiscal years preceding the war was about $6,600,000 per annum. Of sewing machines and parts our own figures of exports to Great Britain show an annual average of $2,592,000."

Pickering Bequest to Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 10.—Medals, diplomas, and scientific correspondence of the late Edward S. Pickering, Director of the Harvard College Observatory, are given to Harvard by Professor Pickering's will, which was filed for probate here today. The residue of the estate, after several private bequests are paid, also is to go to Harvard. No indication of the value of the estate is given.

EGGS.—Receipts, 8,582 cases. Stock arriving Saturday afternoon cleaned up better than was generally expected. Arrivals are light as posted, but do not include all of the express receipts, of which there are said to be large quantities at the receiving stations. These are slow of delivery, and the stock available for the early trading was no more than urgently needed at fully sustained prices. The tone of the market is sensitive, and any deliveries beyond the immediate ability to sell would undoubtedly weaken the position. Nearby white eggs are in light receipt, and strictly fancy qualities are cleaning up quite promptly at fully sustained prices. Under grades irregular. Anticipate the New Revenue Law

THE taxes which your business must pay on the 1918 turn-over have been materially changed by the Law shortly to be enacted.

We can help you simplify the work which will have to be done to meet the requirements of the law. Taxpayers will be particularly interested in the new rules governing inventories, losses, amortization and invested capital.

You can begin immediately to compile the data requisite for your return if you are informed as to the most important changes that have been made.

It is particularly important for firms and corporations to be able to compute their 1918 tax at once in order that they may make out their balance sheets as of the close of their last fiscal year. The 1918 tax will be payable over the entire year and in most cases will constitute a very important item in the balance sheet. We have issued a pamphlet designed to help business houses in the preparation of data for their returns. We shall be glad to give you a copy.

This applies only to income from business

Income Tax Literature

For the guidance of those subject to the new Federal Income and other War Taxes, we shall have available shortly after the enactment of the pending Revenue Bill the following tax literature:—

"What the Average Man Should Know About the Income Tax"—This is a digest of those features of the Law of interest to the man whose income consists largely of a salary and such items as rent, dividends, interest, etc. All of these items and many more are explained and illustrated so that the average individual can solve his tax problems by the use of this folder. (Folder NA-3.)

"The New Federal Income Tax and Its Effect on Bond Yields"—A chart showing the net yield of taxable bonds when held by individual investors having taxable income ranging from $2,000 to $1,000,000. The chart also shows the relative yield of tax-free government issues with those of taxable bonds. (Folder NA-4.)

"1919 Federal Income and War Tax Laws"—A 96-page book giving a complete analysis and explanation of the Income Tax, the Excess and War Profits Tax, the Estates Tax, the Stamp Taxes, etc. This book will be of invaluable assistance to large tax payers. (Booklet NA-5.)

Copies of such of the above as interest you will be sent when available. In requesting copies, please do so by number.

ACCEPTS HOUSE REDUCTIONS

Senate Passes War Appropriation Bill Eliminating $15,000,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The House bill providing for a reduction of $15,000,000,000 in war appropriations and contract authorizations, and making deficiency appropriations of $295,000,000, was passed today by the Senate without a record vote. It now goes to conference.

With the exception of approximately $11,000,000, the total appropriations carried in the bill are for the army and navy. The measure repeals appropriations for the War and Navy Departments amounting to $7,179,156,900 and cancels authorizations of $8,221,029,200, which officials of the two departments have said would not be needed.

The Senate in its brief discussion of the bill paid scant attention to the appropriations and savings, most of the debate centering on the House provision for a gratuity of $7,500 to the widow of the late Representative Meeker of Missouri.

An amendment by Senator Robinson of Arkansas to give the children of Mr. Meeker by a former marriage the gratuity, was adopted, but later the Senate reversed its action after Senator Spence of Missouri asserted that the Missouri Representative had left $33,000 life insurance, $20,000 of which was for his four minor children.

Senator Underwood of Alabama, supporting the House action in giving the amount to the widow, who was married to Mr. Meeker a few hours before he died, told the Senate that in his opinion no member of Congress had died more heroically. Mr. Meeker, he said, contracted Spanish influenza while caring for soldiers sick with that disease in cantonments near St. Louis.

OPEN DRIVE FOR CLOTHING.

Hoped to Gather 500 Tons of Garments for Serbians.

The Serbian Aid Fund yesterday began its two weeks' drive for 500 tons of clothing to be sent to Serbia for the soldiers who have been discharged from prison camps and of civilians impoverished by the war. It is not required that articles should be new, any in good condition being acceptable.

"We must collect more than thirty-three tons of clothing every day during the two weeks if we are to reach our goal of 500 tons," said Mrs. Kingsbury Curtis, Chairman of the committee. "We are appealing for men's clothing especially, because the repatriated army and prisoners of war are clad in rags and often in paper. Children's clothing also is badly needed, but those made of delicate fabrics are not worth the shipping space. Good shoes, warm shawls, shirts, wraps, and dresses are all in great demand, because many Serbs surely will die of exhaustion and tuberculosis unless warm clothing is provided in time to save them."

The drive headquarters is at 338 Madison Avenue and is open from 9:30 A. M. to 5 P. M. every day.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

The market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday closed strong and active. An aggressive demand for securities in the final hour made for a substantial general advance and the closing prices were about the highest for the session. The one weak spot in the list was American Can, which showed a net loss of 2 points. Speculative interest centred in the industrials. Railroad issues were neglected, but closed firm.

Marseilles

THIS popular seaport of France and second city of that splendid republic has overcome the disadvantages of its original arid surrounding by intensive irrigation and cultivation. Its population in 1911 was 551,000. Marseilles is noted for its flour milling, oil crushing and soap making industries. It is the world's greatest oil crushing centre. In studying the requirements of foreign markets, American manufacturers should note that Marseilles is a most convenient distributing centre for the Mediterranean trade, and particularly the French colonial trade.

The declared value of exports from Marseilles to this country during 1915 was $5,065,552, as against $6,142,050 in 1914. Total commerce in 1913 amounted to $755,372,000, of which $389,639,000 were imports and $365,733,000 exports.

To the Creditors of
JOHN B. ROSE COMPANY and ROSE BRICK COMPANY:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Plan and Agreement of Reorganization of John B. Rose Company and Rose Brick Company, dated January 17, 1919, has been adopted by the undersigned Reorganization Committee, and that a printed copy of same duly executed has been lodged with The New York Trust Company, as Depositary.

Creditors of John B. Rose Company and Rose Brick Company may become parties to said Plan and Agreement by executing assignments of their claims against said companies, or either of them, and any subsidiary or affiliated company, and John B. Rose individually, and depositing the same with the Depositary, THE NEW YORK TRUST COMPANY, 26 Broad Street, New York City, ON OR BEFORE FEBRUARY 21, 1919. All promissory notes and other original evidences of indebtedness must accompany the assignments.

After FEBRUARY 21, 1919, no deposits will be received except upon such terms and conditions as the Committee may impose. Participating creditors must pay to the Depositary for the account of the Committee at such times and in such amounts as the Committee may determine, their pro rata share of the new funds required for the purpose of effectuating the Plan of Reorganization. The calls for these payments will be made on at least ten days' published notice as provided in the Agreement of Reorganization.

The Depositary will issue to participating creditors its transferable Certificates of Deposit in respect of deposited claims.

The Secretary of the Committee upon application therefor will furnish copies of the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization and forms of assignments of claims and powers of attorney.

Mexican Currency
(Infalsificables)

Issued by the Mexican Government at 10 cents for each peso.

Now selling at approximately 3 cents.

Out of 450,000,000 there are but 80,000,000 outstanding. Balance having been redeemed by the Government.

Redemption going on steadily at rate of 150,000 pesos per day.

The tremendous demand for this currency by the oil companies and many exporters and importers is being reflected in the steadily advancing quotations.

10,000 pesos will cost approximately $300. The possibilities should not be overlooked.

KAUFMANN DEPARTMENT STORES, INC.
Special Meeting of Stockholders
Pittsburgh, Pa., February 1, 1919.

A SPECIAL MEETING of the Stockholders of Kaufmann Department Stores, Inc., will be held at the principal office of the Company, No. 1261 Broadway, New York City, N. Y., on Monday, February 17, 1919, at 1 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of taking action and voting upon a proposition to decrease the capital stock of the Company from $9,525,000, its present capital stock, consisting of 20,250 shares of preferred stock and 75,000 shares of common stock of the par value of $100 each, to $9,450,000, consisting of 19,500 shares of preferred stock and 75,000 shares of common stock of the par value of $100 each.

This action is proposed in accordance with Section (c) of Article Fourth of the Certificate of Incorporation of said Kaufmann Department Stores, Inc., which provides for the setting aside, after payment of dividends on the preferred stock, of a "Special Surplus Account" in each year from January 1, 1916, of a sum sufficient to acquire not less than seven hundred and fifty shares of the preferred stock, out of the surplus or net profits, at not to exceed $125 per share, plus accrued and unpaid dividends. Under this provision $75,000 par value of preferred stock has been acquired for said "Special Surplus Account," and the meeting above mentioned is for the purpose of reducing the capital stock by this amount.

PROPOSALS.

CITY HALL.
New Orleans, Feb. 3rd, 1919.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by Constitutional Amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon on the 6th day of March, 1919, for the purchase of $600,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by the Act aforementioned, and the constitutional amendment ratifying same, and of the numbers, denominations and maturities of the authorized issue of $2,000,000.00, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue, as prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 5316, Commission Council Series, approved January 28th, 1919, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $600,000.00 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $600,000.00 in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to the Public Belt Railroad Commission or the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS, District of Columbia, February 7, 1919.—Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Secretary of the Board of Commissioners, Room 511, District Building, Washington, D. C., until 2 o'clock P. M., February 21, 9119, for constructing a Head House and Sheds for the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company, located on Water Street, at the foot of Seventh Street, southwest. Blank forms of proposal, plans, specifications and all necessary information may be obtained from the Chief Clerk Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building, Washington, D. C. A deposit of five dollars will be required from bidders to insure the return of the plans and specifications.

LOUIS BROWNLOW,
W. GWYNN GARDINER,
C. W. KUTZ,
Commissioners D. C.

PROPOSALS FOR DREDGING.—U. S. Engineer Office, Philadelphia, Pa.—Sealed proposals will be received here until 12 noon, March 11, 1919, and then opened, for dredging in Delaware River, in Philadelphia Harbor and off New Castle, Reedy Island, Baker and Liston Lighthouse Ranges. Further information on application.

BURLESON EXPLAINS NEW PHONE RATES

Long-Distance Schedule Is Designed to Standardize the Service Throughout Country.

CHARGES ARE TENTATIVE

Can Be Reduced as Fast as Conditions Warrant, He Writes Representative Doolittle.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Postmaster General Burleson has written a letter to Representative Dudley Doolittle of Kansas in explanation of the plan by which the Post Office Department fixed the new toll rates for long-distance telephones, and in which Mr. Burleson says that the new rates are tentative and can be reduced "as fast as conditions warrant." The letter, which was in reply to inquiries made by Mr. Doolittle, reads in part:

"The purpose of the new schedule of telephone toll rates is to standardize the long-distance service throughout the country and to establish uniform charges. The toll service is not local in character, and, unlike exchange service, is largely conducted over the lines of more than one company and across State boundaries.

"In preparing the new toll rates, the telegraph and telephone administration has endeavored to introduce additional forms of service required by the public, to establish conditions with respect to the long-distance business which will result in economies of operation, to make substantial reductions in rates where they were excessive, and to increase the charges for certain kinds of service where rates were inadequate. For example, the distinction between calls for a particular person and those for any person at a particular station was established for the whole country.

"This distinction is based on sound engineering principles. Messages handled by the person-to-person method require more labor on the part of the telephone operators than those handled by the station-to-station method. The former also tie up lines, which in the case of many long-distance calls represent a heavy investment in copper wire and other equipment, for a longer period of time. Heretofore the telephone caller who was satisfied to reach any party at a particular station often contributed toward the extra cost of serving the particular person long-distance talker. Hereafter the charges in such cases will be better proportioned to the cost of service and to its value to the user.

"Similar considerations justify the new report charges. The information reported to the telephone user, who pays the report charge, may not always be of value to him; but it has been obtained at considerable expense. It is fairer to charge the expense against the party who originated the call, than against other completely innocent parties. Moreover, in many cases, regrettably, reports from stations that the particular person called for was not available, have been made a medium of conveying important information. Thus the parties were enabled to evade payment and gross fraud was successfully perpetrated upon the company. From every standpoint it seems desirable to make a reasonable charge for this class of service.

"Charges for particular person service under the new schedule, unlike those for station-to-station service, are generally higher than the former rates. But it ought not to be forgotten that many users of this class of service formerly escaped a portion of the charge that should have been made, if other users had not been helping to meet the cost. Moreover, the Government took over the telephones in a period of advancing rates. Already in 1918, during the period preceding Government operation, several of the telephone companies had secured the approval of the State Public Service Commissions, having jurisdiction over their lines, to substantial rate increases. Many had applied for permission to make increases. Others would shortly have been compelled to seek authority for similar increases, if the Government had not come to their relief.

"The Postmaster General is required, under the terms of the resolution authorizing Government control of the wire systems, to pay a just and reasonable compensation to each of the companies whose lines have been taken over. This is an imperative obligation. Any adjustment of rates should, therefore, be on such a basis as to guarantee sufficient revenue to meet these requirements. The policy of the Postmaster General is to make the rates for service as low as possible, keeping in view the operating cost and the obligation of compensation to the companies.

"The standardized rates are not only based on the requirement of revenues to meet definite obligations, but also are designed to bring about a more equitable distribution of charges with respect to the kind of service required by the subscriber. By reducing night rates to from one-quarter to one-half the standard day rates an extraordinarily cheap service is provided for those to whom economy is the prime consideration. Those who demand the best service will, on account of improvements in operation which the new schedule makes possible, receive a better service than ever before. In short, the new toll service is the most economical and efficient that the present-day science of telephony can provide. If the telephone users will study their own needs and all the conditions pertaining to their toll calls, they will be able to benefit greatly by the new schedule.

"The new rates are tentative. They can be reduced as fast as conditions will warrant. The whole subject of the relation between toll rates and local exchange rates is under investigation. The Postmaster General is in a position to make readjustments between the rates for the different kinds of service with a single eye to the good of the whole body of telephone users throughout the country. He does not intend to collect tolls which are higher than is necessary to maintain a satisfactory standard of service; and he will not permit the quality of the service to suffer on account of insufficient revenue."

DRY GOODS RETAILERS MEET

Convention Here to Discuss Conditions Caused by the War.

The representatives of 2,000 retail dry goods stores, representing the trade in cities from coast to coast, will meet today in the Hotel Pennsylvania, at the eighth annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, to discuss after-the-war business.

As a preliminary to the actual convention the Board of Directors met yesterday and discussed plans for the expansion of the association. In view of conditions caused by the war, it is felt that wide reforms in business are necessary and that the organization must be broadened, developed, and strengthened. The association will invite all State retail dry goods bodies to affiliate themselves with the national association.

The value of a national association will be the subject of an address this morning, and other items on the program are a reply to the President's opening address by M. F. Loughlin and the reading of the report of the Secretary-Treasurer, Lew Hahn. The afternoon program will include a report by the War Service Committee, presentation of plans for extending the association, and the election of Directors.

Tonight there will be a smoker on the roof garden, at which Alfred B. Koch of Lasalle & Koch of Toledo will preside. The speakers and their subjects will be: "The Self-Service Idea in Retailing," by John Mench of the Duffy-Powers Company, Rochester, and "The Tendency to Guarantee Prices," by S. H. Dichett, editor of the Dry Goods Economist. These papers will be followed by a discussion of many trade subjects, among them "Shall Economies in Retailing Brought About by the War Be Continued?" "Has Any Merchant Charged Interest on Accounts Outstanding More Than Thirty Days, and With What Results?" "How Should Buyers Govern Their Buying This Year?" "Why Are We Faced With a Minimum Wage, Without Educational Requirements?" and "How Can We Eliminate Early Season Reductions in Ready-to-Wear?"

Buying in Small Lots.

Present conditions among the manufacturers of men's shirts are, from all accounts, still rather unsettled. In some instances the smaller manufacturers, in order to unload their stocks, have reduced the prices from 10 to 15 per cent. In the retail trade many of the buyers are just taking enough merchandise to last for thirty days, and then duplicate their orders. Others, it is said, who have a sufficient quantity on hand, will not look at the lines even after the prices have been reduced.

Features of a Model Hat.

A new model hat is made of highly lacquered straw and is of a large semi-mushroom shape. It is made in the straight conventional brim or slightly dented on four sides. The facing of ciré ribbon is slightly shirred and does not meet the edge of the brim. Faille taffeta ribbon can also be used for the facing. Ciré ribbon bands this model finished with a tied bow at the back. Cherries, silk flowers and fruits, or a little novelty trim lend a finish. The hats are shown in all dark shades.

Women's Neckwear Going Well.

Both manufacturers and buyers are agreed that the sale of women's neckwear this season will be great. At present pleatings and rufflings are having an unusually large sale, and a good season on these lines is assured. The sample lines in a number of the establishments have been enlarged, and are offered in many color combinations and novelty effects. Such colors as rose, navy, brown, green, and tea color are combined together, and with white are shown in many attractive combinations.

Sale of Philippine Underwear.

The sale of Philippine underwear has been increasing at such a rate that in some cases it is almost impossible to make immediate deliveries. The amount of these garments sold by one of the local houses during the last week represents a total of nearly $25,000. In the line of nightgowns the best sellers are those fashioned with new applique embroidery effects that retail for $3.95 each. Although the price of these garments is much higher than the muslin lines, firms selling both find that many buyers are more favorably disposed to the Philippine garments.

BUSINESS WORLD

Orders for Lace Curtains.

Reports received in the lace curtain trade are to the effect that in some sections of the country buying has increased to a great extent. Out-of-town buyers who have been in the market have placed some very liberal orders for immediate delivery, especially in the filet lines, which appear to be more in demand. There are still a number of retailers who are holding off for lower prices, and are only placing orders for their present needs. Opinions seem to differ as to the local trade. Some find business slow, while others report some very good sales.

Beaded Handbags Very Popular.

The demand for ladies' beaded handbags is increasing to such an extent that some of the makers are finding it difficult to turn them out fast enough. Bags of this kind are meeting with as much favor in Europe as they are in this country. An order was received yesterday from a retail store in England that amounted to $650. Miniature miser bags that retail for $25 apiece and porcupine bags made of silk and trimmed with beads that sell for $45 each are very popular in the high-class specialty shops and department stores.

Gray Goods More Active.

A little more activity than has been the case recently marked the local gray goods market yesterday. Sales were reported aggregating over a million yards, and the bulk of them was from first hands. It is supposed that the buyers waited as long as they could and only came into the market when this was absolutely necessary in order to meet their requirements. The goods taken were for this and next month's delivery. In printcloths 39-inch 68-72s fetched 10⅛ cents, and 38½-inch 64-60s, 60-48s, and 64-56s went at 8¾, 8, and 8½ cents, respectively. In sheetings, 36-inch five-yard goods sold at 9¼ and 48-square four-yard goods at 11½ cents. Sales also were reported of twills, sateens, and organdies at the low levels prevailing.

Large Trade in Rosaries.

Even rosaries follow the trend of the time in fancy glass beads and are to be found in all colors, including bright red. There are bright greens, blues, ruby, and amethyst, with pale shades, and they range in price at retail from 25 cents to as many dollars. The rosary trade is a bigger one than might be supposed from the permanence of the religious symbol. There is a large annual output, and one big bead house has an entire factory devoted to their manufacture. January is the month when the largest orders come in to be in readiness for Easter. The biggest output of rosaries known in this country was shortly after America entered the war, when it was impossible to fill orders from the big ecclesiastical goods houses and individual churches from all over the country. Rosaries for the boys going abroad were not confined to the black or sombre beads, many of them being in the gayer colors.

F. F. Models
FULL FORM SUITS & COATS
for stout Women

A certain percentage of your full-formed customers can be fitted with ordinary "extra sizes." But they are in the minority. And even they will get only fit, and not the special art that conceals defects and brings out good points. F. F. Models combine fit and style with the skill of the specialist.

Showrooms open all day tomorrow, Lincoln's Birthday.

COURT NOTICE.

APPELLATE DIVISION—Supreme Court—Second Department—Admission to the bar. Candidates for admission to the bar, whose names are appended and who have been certified by the State Board of Law Examiners as having passed the law examinations, are notified to file, on Feb. 17, at 10 o'clock A. M., with the Clerk of the Appellate Division, at his office, Borough Hall, Brooklyn, evidence of good moral character. Such evidence, in order to comply with the rules, must include at least two affidavits from attorneys in the Second Judicial Department acquainted with the applicant, which must state that the applicant is to the knowledge of the affiant a person of good moral character, and must set forth in detail the facts upon which such knowledge is based, and such affidavits must be made by practicing attorneys of the Supreme Court personally known to a member of the committee. The committee does not meet on the above date. Applicants should not seek introduction on that day.

Affidavits on printed forms will not be accepted.

Each candidate shall also file the certificate received from the State Board of Law Examiners and a sworn statement answering fully all questions appearing upon a form which will be furnished by the Clerk of the Court.

Each candidate must be introduced personally to at least one member of the committee by a practicing lawyer known to such member.

A strict compliance with the foregoing requirements is essential.

Information is requested as to the moral character of the candidates whose names are appended and as to their qualifications to be admitted to practice, and may be sent to any member of the committee.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—No. 26573.—In Bankruptcy.—WARREN W. WESEMAN, Bankrupt.

Warren W. Weseman was duly adjudicated bankrupt on February 7, 1919. The first meeting of creditors will be held at my office, No. 68 William Street, City of New York, on February 21, 1919, at 10 A. M. Creditors may prove claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may come before said meeting.

PETER B. OLNEY, Referee in Bankruptcy.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Bing & Bing yesterday added to their recently acquired holdings in the old shopping district in the neighborhood of Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue by the purchase of another loft building at 54 to 62 West Twenty-first Street, ninety-eight feet east of Sixth Avenue.

The building, which is a twelve-story structure built in 1910, by Henry Corn, was held at $650,000, and returns an annual rent of $70,000. It was bought from Henry Edelmuth, who purchased the property earlier in the day from Frederick Brown, through Harry B. Cutner, who also made the resale.

The new holding of Bing & Bing is in close proximity to the two lofts which they purchased last week from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, one at 15 and 17 West Twenty-first Street and the other at 37 to 45 West Twentieth Street.

Machinery Company Buys Forty-fourth Street Property.

As a site for a modern commercial structure, a Western machinery concern has purchased for about $6,000 a front foot the property at 6 and 8 East Forty-fourth Street. The deal involves about $300,000.

On the property, which has a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of 100 feet, are two private dwellings, No. 6 being sold by the Sarah V. Day estate and No. 8 by the Mary P. Moore estate. For taxation purposes the city assesses the property at $240,000.

According to Albert B. Ashforth, who negotiated the sale, $6,000 a front foot is the best price ever paid for property in the block.

Last week the property of the Racquet and Tennis Club at 23 to 31 West Forty-third Street and extending through to 24 and 26 West Forty-fourth Street was purchased by James T. Lee for about $800,000. An eighteen-story structure similar to the Berkeley Arcade in Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, completed about two years ago by Mr. Lee, is to be erected on the site.

Financial arrangements to the extent of $2,300,000 have been made with S. W. Straus & Co., covering an issue of serial bonds for that amount.

Another Sale in Coffee District.

Another important sale in the coffee district, which has recently shown great activity, occurred yesterday when R. Alexander Schonbrunn, trading as S. A. Schonbrunn & Co. and Sasco Coffee Co., bought the five-story and basement loft building, on plot 24 by 97, at 83 Front Street, from Charles A. O'Donohue, representing Lillian B. O'Donohue.

Mr. Schonbrunn has been lessee of the property, held at $45,000, for fifteen years. Charles F. Noyes made the sale and Samuel S. Koenig of Koenig, Sittenfield & Aranow represented the buyer as attorney.

Purchase in New Fur Trade Centre.

In the new fur trade centre, just south of the Pennsylvania Station, the three-story building owned by the Coca Cola Company, at 320 to 322 West Twenty-seventh Street, was sold to a fur concern whose identity was not disclosed. The property, comprising a plot 44 by 98.9 between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, was valued at $90,000.

The buyers also secured from the Coca Cola Company the adjoining three-story dwelling for $10,500.

The combined properties, forming a plot 66 by 98.9, it is said, will be improved with a fur storage building.

Bank Sells Property on Central Park West.

The Union Dime Savings Bank sold Elberon Hall, a nine-story fireproof apartment house, on plot 55.6 by 100, at 385 to 389 Central Park West, 25 feet south of Ninety-ninth Street, to an investor. The property was held at $175,000, and returns an annual rental of about $20,000. I. B. Wakeman made the sale.

First Sale Since 1785.

The five-story building at 180 South Street, near Roosevelt Street, on plot 23 by 71.8, was sold by Elizabeth F. Harper to Leonardo Mormando through William H. Whiting & Co. This is the first sale of the property since 1785.

Emma Brickenstein sold the five-story new-law apartment, on plot 22.6 by 100, at 115 East 127th Street, to a client of O'Reilly & Dahn.

Activities in Heights Section.

Charles Kimmelman purchased for cash for investment the two five-story new-law apartment houses at 700 to 720 West 172d Street, occupying the block front on the south side of the street between Fort Washington and Haven Avenues. The Fort Washington Avenue house measures 40 by 220 and the Haven Avenue building 60 by 169. The two apartments, held at a total of $330,000, were purchased by the Nason Realty Company (Max N. Natanson) two weeks ago from the Longlight Service Corporation. William S. Baker was the broker in the transaction.

The Golden Rod, a six-story elevator apartment on plot 75 by 100 at 508 West 178th Street, was sold to the Levitan Corporation of Manhattan by W. F. Schroeder of Jersey City. The property, which is between Amsterdam Avenue and Audubon Avenue, is arranged for thirty-five families, rents for $15,000, and was held at $115,000. Burton, Thompson & Co. were the brokers in the deal, which was a cash one.

Last of Thirteen Apartments Sold.

The five-story apartment house, on plot 50 by 150, at 25 and 27 Vermilyea Avenue, between Dyckman and Academy Streets, housing thirty families, who pay a yearly rental of $12,000, was sold to a client of Joseph G. Abramson, attorney, by 25 Vermilyea Avenue, Inc., (Fred F. French, President.)

The building is the last of thirteen apartment houses which Mr. French has completed in the Dyckman section in the past two years, all of which have been sold through Byrne & Bowman with B. Clifford Roberts representing Mr. French as attorney.

Brown Resells Bronx Holdings.

Frederick Brown resold the two five-story apartment houses on plot 75 by 100 at 2,635 and 2,639 Sedgwick Avenue, near Kingsbridge Road, held at $72,000, with an annual rental of $10,000 to a client of McLernon Brothers and George E. & Charles Buckbee. Mr. Brown also resold to William S. Byrnes through A. D. Phelps & Damiane the northeast corner of Brown Place and 134th Street, a two-story house, on a plot 50 by 100, which he bought a few days ago from the United States Trust Company.

Charles Siegel Levy sold the five-story apartment house at 1,086 Southern Boulevard, on a plot 43 by 100, near Westchester Avenue, to Samuel Weiser, through Alexander G. Campbell.

William S. Dempsey, President of the William S. Dempsey Realty Company, purchased from the Solow Construction Company the block front on the east side of St. Nicholas Avenue, corner 139th Street, running through to Edgecombe Avenue, known as Finley Manor, a six-story elevator apartment house, which rents for $35,000, and held at $250,000. The brokers were the John P. Peel Company and Edward J. Crawford.

W. Ellenbohn sold the three-story two-family brick house at 1,507 Bryant Avenue, to Mary Lassman for occupancy. Gertrude Brett sold the three-story detached two-family frame house at 1,820 Trafalgar Place to Sager & Goldstein for investment. Nicholas Lopard was the broker in both deals.

Brooklyn.

The six-story forty-three family elevator apartment house at 1,236 and 1,238 Pacific Street was sold by Leonard N. Taft to Edward Neelen. As part payment Mr. Taft takes a hotel on Seventh Avenue, Asbury Park, N. J., an eight family apartment house in the Bronx, and two houses and thirty lots at Lyndhurst, N. J. The property involved in the deal, which was made by the City and Suburban Realty Company, has a total valuation of $250,000.

ASSISTANT TO THE MANAGEMENT.

A Genuine Opportunity.

A large and growing manufacturing concern (located near Boston) of national reputation and international affiliations is seeking to fill an important vacancy on its executive staff.

The position in question has been newly created to enable the President to delegate various executive functions and to utilize the services of a thoroughly capable man who will ultimately assume a large part of the general management.

The picture which the President has of the kind of man who will succeed in the capacity outlined above is as follows:

AGE: About 34 or 35 years, with a degree of maturity greater, if possible, than is usually found at that age.

EXPERIENCE: A record of successful executive accomplishment in the manufacturing field. Practical experience in dealing with problems of organization and management and sound knowledge of methods of procedure are essential.

PERSONAL QUALIFICATIONS:

1. Superior executive ability which will enable him to deal effectively with new situations as they arise.
2. Poise and a judicial quality which will inspire confidence in his mental processes.
3. Initiative and resourcefulness which will assist him in obtaining results without close supervision by others.
4. Tact, co-operative spirit, and adaptability which will insure his making good with his associates and obtaining their support.

Certain special requirements, such as representing the company as a leading executive, dealing with other concerns, and doing some traveling, must also be met.

To the right man this position offers a genuine opportunity for growth. He will be cordially received into an official family of young men who know the value of team work and are practicing it.

The initial salary will be moderate, but promotion will be rapid and future remuneration will depend altogether upon the results which the successful applicant is able to accomplish.

To insure consideration applications should set forth full particulars concerning age, nationality, business experience, personal qualifications, past and present connections, and salary required. Please state these as concisely as possible and, if convenient, kindly forward a recent photograph, which will be returned after inspection.

Do not answer this advertisement unless you are thoroughly convinced of your eligibility and can demonstrate in your letter that it would be advantageous to engage you. Address G 589 Times Downtown.

AMERICAN BUSINESS IS ABLAZE

WITH A NEW SPIRIT.

The lessons learned from the war have inoculated it with new energy, enterprise and progressiveness. THE BUSINESS ENGINEER OF THE DAY is the TRAINED EXPERT ACCOUNTANT.

He is in the greatest demand of any professional man in the world, has the least competition, and consequently is the best paid.

$3,000 TO $10,000—AND MORE yearly. Business men realize that if they are to survive and prosper in this new era they must have a close, accurate and constant analysis of their business, and possibly a day-by-day audit, such as can only be secured through the medium of the man—or woman—trained in Higher Accounting. The available supply of these is exhausted—there are none to be had.

We can fill, in a limited way only, the many requests being received for AUDITORS, COMPTROLLERS, COST ACCOUNTANTS, EFFICIENCY ENGINEERS, CREDIT MEN, AND SYSTEMATIZERS.

THE LARGEST UNIVERSITY

IN THE WORLD,

teaching Higher Accounting and coaching for C. P. A. examination, by simple, practical, and agreeable Home Study, is making a special effort to train ambitious men and women, with analytical minds, who desire to fit themselves to fill these positions and secure the financial independence that comes with the mastery of the highest paid profession in the world. KNOWLEDGE OF BOOKKEEPING NOT REQUIRED. We train you from the ground up.

LET 1919 SEE YOUR TRAINING AS A PROFESSIONAL ACCOUNTANT COMPLETED!

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The disturbance that was off the North Carolina coast Sunday night moved rapidly northeastward, and it is apparently central tonight near Sable Island.

Temperatures are low in the Middle and South Atlantic and East Gulf States, and there was freezing weather Monday morning as far south as Northern Florida. Over the central portion of the country it is much warmer, with temperatures decidedly above the seasonal average, and high temperatures continue in the interior of the Far West.

A general rise in temperature may be expected during the next two days in the Atlantic and East Gulf States, the Ohio Valley, and the Lower Lake region, while in the Upper Lake region higher temperatures Tuesday will be followed by a moderate fall Wednesday.

Fair weather will prevail, except in the upper lake region, where scattered snows or rains are probable.

Winds for Tuesday and Wednesday along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be moderate north, becoming variable Wednesday, fair weather; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate shifting, becoming east and southeast, fair.

FORECAST TODAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair and slightly warmer Tues. Wed. fair and warmer.

New England—Fair Tues. Wed. fair, warmer.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	27	22	4 P. M.	33	32
6 A. M.	25	21	6 P. M.	35	31
9 A. M.	26	20	9 P. M.	36	26
12 M.	30	25	11 P. M.	34	25

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 26; for the corresponding date last year it was 30; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 30.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 20; at 8 P. M. it was 27. Maximum temperature, 32 degrees at 3:30 P. M.; minimum, 19 degrees at 8:30 A. M. Humidity, 62 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 52 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A.M. yesterday registered 30 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.04 inches.

ORDER STRIKE HERE IN BUILDING TRADES

Allied Unions Support Carpenters in Fight Against Employers.

WILL AFFECT FIFTY CITIES

Leaders Unable to Estimate Number Involved—Holds Up Government Work.

The sympathetic strike of all building trade unionists engaged on contracts of members of the Building Trades Employers' Association in aid of the striking carpenters will begin today, declared William L. Hutcheson, President of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and Alternate Chairman of the War Labor Board, after a meeting of the International Presidents of the unions involved, at the Hotel Continental yesterday.

It was impossible to estimate the number of men who eventually would be affected by the strike order, said Mr. Hutcheson. An estimate of 300,000, made yesterday afternoon, he considered too high. Ronald Taylor, President of the Building Trades Employers' Association, could make no exact estimate, he said. Comparatively few men were employed in the basic trades in New York, Mr. Taylor added, but what would happen on out-of-town contracts he could not say.

The general strike order on association work will automatically throw out of work masons, plasterers, bricklayers, hoisting engineers, elevator constructors, soft stone cutters, tile layers, marble setters, and carpenters. This was agreed upon at the meeting of the basic trade union leaders yesterday, the first order being issued by Frank Seeley of Philadelphia, President of the Elevator Constructors' Union, who called out all his men working on association contracts.

For the builders Ronald Taylor issued a statement in which he explained the reasons why the Building Trades Employers' Association declined to refer the whole matter to the War Labor Board, a suggestion advanced by Mr. Hutcheson on Sunday.

"The agreement between the Employers' Association and the Carpenters' District Council, which expired on Dec. 31, 1918," said Mr. Taylor, "provided that 'both parties to this agreement adopt as a basis of settlement the Joint Arbitration Plan.'

"The Joint Arbitration Plan is a document the principles of which the Building Trades Employers' Association and the Carpenters' Union are pledged to uphold. The Joint Arbitration Plan provides for the adjustment of all disputes by conferences and arbitration. It also provides that there shall be no strikes or lockouts. The Building Trades Employers' Association on Dec. 13 revoked the lockout order of Dec. 9.

Sees Outside Board Unnecessary.

"When the carpenters call off their strike and return to work, any grievance that they may have can then be adjusted by the method provided for in the old agreement, which was approved by the International Union. It is, therefore, unnecessary to call in an outside arbitration board.

"The proposition of Mr. Hutcheson is simply an evasion of the issue. He knows that the Building Trades Employers' Association has for fifteen years supported and maintained the Joint Arbitration Plan. This plan has been supported also by the Building Trades Employers' Association and the Board of Business Agents."

The association has contracts in fifty cities of the United States, and not in 112, as was previously stated, and only two of these outside contracts are on Government work, said Mr. Taylor. One is a job on the United States Quartermaster's Stores at New Orleans, from which no complaints have been heard, and the other a contract for the United States Shipping Board at Mobile, Ala. The only Government work now being done in New York City by members of the association is the fulfillment of the contract on the United States army base at Second Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, Brooklyn. No bricklayers or hoisting engineers are employed on this job, said Mr. Taylor, and therefore that contract, as far as these two trades are concerned, is not affected by the lockout, which actually went into effect on Monday morning, though declared on Saturday at noon.

It was learned yesterday that orders had been received from the War Department that work on this contract proceed normally. About 100 non-union carpenters were employed for this work yesterday and dock builders would be hired, it was learned. The circumstances were explained by Major Perine, who added that no pickets had appeared yesterday.

Army Issues Statement.

"The carpenters back in November made a demand for an increase in wages," said a statement issued by the army authorities. "This demand was thoroughly investigated by the War Department, and the decision reached that the prevailing rate of pay in New York for carpenters was $5.50 per day. After this decision was made the carpenters struck the job and have remained on strike since. The dock builders also went on strike about the same time.

"All portions of the army base not affected by the carpenters and dock builders have proceeded, but the time has come when it is necessary to resume work with carpenters and dock builders in order to bring about the completion of the entire project. The Government, therefore, reached the decision last week to start up all portions of the work, and have instructed the contractors accordingly.

"Workmen are being employed today at the base to complete all carpenter work and dock building, in order to bring about the prompt completion of the entire project."

The dock builders, it was said, were offered an increase from $5 a day to $5.80, but failed to return to work. Work which should have been turned over completed to the Government on Jan. 1 was still unfinished as a result of the strike, it was learned. This includes a large warehouse at Dock 4.

Although Mr. Hutcheson promised on Saturday 500 discharged soldier-carpenters would picket the Brooklyn job in uniform yesterday none appeared. A special guard of soldiers was thrown around the base, but no disturbances were reported. It was said that if the threat of the union was carried out and pickets in the uniform of the United States appeared, they would be ordered by the army authorities to turn in their uniforms.

CONTINUE GARMENT STRIKE.

Union Official Says 23,000 Workers Are in Idleness.

The fourth week of the garment workers' strike begins today, with no apparent change in the situation. About twelve thousand members of the Garment Workers' Union have returned to their employment with firms independent of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, against which the strike is being waged, but 23,000 remain idle, according to Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the union.

The workers, Mr. Schlesinger said, were prepared to carry on their fight indefinitely, or until the forty-four-hour week had been granted by manufacturers throughout the industry.

FIND MISSING BOY FATHER LEFT ADRIFT

Jersey City Institution Had Given Shelter to Six-Year-Old Claude Hanley.

Claude Hanley, 6 years old, brother of three-year-old Harry Samuels Hanley, who was found on Thursday night at Fulton Street, and Broadway, shortly after his stepmother had left him there, was recovered last night. In the rooms of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, at 473 Jersey Avenue, Jersey City, Claude, chubby from three meals a day and chipper and cheerful, paused between bites of ginger cake long enough to say to the police, "I'm him." According to Claude's story, within half an hour after his father had left him on the night of Jan. 25 he managed to get across the Cortlandt Street Ferry, start to cry as he came out of the ferryhouse, "and a police brought me here, where I had something to eat."

The officials of the society said they had experienced great difficulty in getting any information from the boy, because, like his brother, he suffers from a severe impediment of speech. Yesterday, however, they said, a newspaper containing a picture of his brother was shown to him and, recognizing it, the identification followed.

Captain Robert Griffith of the Bayonne police went to the Hanley home at 717 Hudson Boulevard, Bayonne, yesterday and questioned Frederick Hanley, the father, and Mrs. Mabel Hanley, the stepmother. According to Griffith they both admitted abandoning the boys, and said they did so because they "ate too much" for the family purse and because they never had displayed much affection for the stepmother.

Captain Griffith said that Frederick Hanley took Claude to this city on Jan. 25, and when they came to a dark part of Liberty Street took to his heels, leaving the lad bewildered in the street. Captain Griffith said that Mrs. Hanley described the casting adrift of the younger boy on last Thursday by saying that she went up Fulton Street until she saw two policemen standing at Broadway, when she ran away from the little chap. She said that she thought the policemen would take care of Harry, according to Griffith.

The Bayonne police announced that the Hanleys would be brought before Recorder William J. Tain in Bayonne on Thursday morning for examination. Action against the parents will also be started in this county, according to District Attorney Swann, who said yesterday that B. T. Pizzaro, Assistant Superintendent of the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, had conferred with him. Mr. Swann added that Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith and Assistant District Attorney Moses Ryttenberg would present the case against the Hanleys to the Grand Jury. The charge, according to Mr. Swann, probably would be abandonment.

The Boys Know

Sloan's Liniment Brings Comforting Relief from After-effects of Exposure, Rheumatic Aches, Pains, Sprains and Strains.

EXPOSURE to all kinds of weather and dampness was the duty of the boys on land and sea. The result was, in many cases, rheumatic aches, sore and stiff muscles, sprains and strains, chilblains and neuralgia.

Most everybody knows that Sloan's Liniment is the universal enemy of such aches and pains.

Those who have once tried it, and know, rely on Sloan's Liniment to promote relief in time of such bodily stress.

Thiry-seven years it has been a friend indeed to pain-racked humanity.

This message of appreciation for Sloan's Liniment, from boys at the front, shows how it gave comforting relief:

"We have been in the thick of the fray here for now over two years, out in the summer shine and the winter storms, and have many times been persuaded by one of our Sappers to try Sloan's Liniment when Rheumatics, Muscular Pains, Neuralgia and several more complaints attacked us. We thought therefore we should like to place on record and acquaint you with the fact that Sloan's Liniment has never yet failed to give us relief and eventually cure us of the attacks. We are never now without a bottle of Sloan's."

(Signed)—Sappers Hy. Harker, A. S. Wells, S. A. Sams, A. Pinnell, J. Shaw, G. W. Spencer, S. J. Charman, S. Mingo, G. Hartwell, E. Collins, A. Bailey, C. Brown, F. A. Crooks, A. Taylor—all of the 119th R. T., Royal Engineers, British Expeditionary Force, France.

Could there be better evidence of the merit of Sloan's Liniment, or stronger proof that it gives relief from the pains of rheumatism, sprains, sore, stiff muscles, and the after-effects of exposure to bad weather and hard work? Do not suffer with these aches and pains! Use Sloan's Liniment and get comforting relief. Clean, safe, effective, soothing. The largest bottle for greatest economy.

13 Dollars—13 Cents

When Swift & Company paid, say,—13 dollars per hundredweight for live beef cattle last year, their profit was only 13 cents! In other words, if we had paid $13.13, we would have made no profit.

Or, if we had received a quarter of a cent per pound less for dressed beef we would have made no profit.

It is doubtful whether any other business is run on so close a margin of profit.

This is bringing the producer and the consumer pretty close together—which should be the object of any industry turning raw material into a useful form.

This remarkable showing is due to enormous volume, perfected facilities (packing plants strategically located, branch houses, refrigerator cars, etc.), and an army of men and women chosen and trained to do their special work.

This, and many other points of interest, are found in the Swift & Company Year Book for 1919, just published which is brought out for the public as well as for the 25,000 Swift & Company shareholders.

The Year Book also represents the packer's side of the Federal Trade Commission investigation, upon which Congress is asked to base action against the industry.

Many who have never heard the packer's side are sending for the Year Book.

REDS' HATRED OF AMERICANS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The Senate investigation of Bolshevism before the sub-committee on the Judiciary began this morning. It was held in the Senate Office Building, the room being crowded with men and women, some of them more or less well known in this country as Americans of pro-Bolshevist leanings. What these people listened to was not of a nature calculated to fire their ardor for the Trotzky-Lenine form of government.

The principal witness was Dr. W. C. Huntington, who from 1916 until the early Fall of last year was in Russia as the Commercial Attaché of the American Embassy in Petrograd. His narrative, frightful in parts, was carefully drawn and the statements he made were those of his own personal knowledge. He was careful not to bring into the record hearsay evidence which the Bolshevist authorities might be able to brand as inaccurate.

In answer to a question as to the extent of murder by official order in Russia, Dr. Huntington produced a copy of an order addressed in September to all Soviets in Russia which called for the slaughter "en masse" of all persons who failed to support the Bolshevist régime. He said that executions were as a rule carried out at night and in darkened places like cellars, the firing squads using Maxim silencers.

Three letters were read into the record by him, all of them from a person of the highest standing, who is still in Russia and whose name for that reason was not disclosed for publication. These letters painted a terrible picture of conditions in the Russian capital.

Dr. Huntington said that at the present time not more than 8 per cent. of the Russian people were in favor of the Bolsheviki. They were held in submission, he added, by terroristic means and by a mercenary force of soldiers made up principally of Letts and Chinese. He said that he left Moscow on Aug. 16 last, accompanied by officials of other allied nations, in each instance the nation concerned leaving one official behind to care for its affairs and nationals. In the case of the United States the official left behind was Consul General Poole.

Declares Reds Hate America.

"I was ordered to Russia in 1916 by the United States Government," said Dr. Huntington, "as the Commercial Attaché of the American Embassy. My mission was to aid, as far as I could, in the development of Russo-American trade relations. I took up my quarters in the American Embassy at Petrograd and was in constant touch with Ambassador Francis and his staff, and so had unusual opportunities of observation."

Dr. Huntington told of his trips throughout the empire and of the growth of the Bolshevist movement which led to the coup of November, 1917. He was present during the entire time of the transition of Government from the control of Kerensky's faction to the Trotzky-Lenine group of agitators.

"Is it not true," asked Senator King of Utah, "that the Bolshevist leaders who led the treason against the Allies hate America as much as they hate any of the other Allies?"

"Yes, that is true," was the answer. "It is also true that the Bolshevist group accepted German money to use for propaganda purposes. They were, of course, ready to handle Germany in their own way just as Germany was ready to use them to the best advantage. It was a case of two crooks, each using the other to gain an end."

"Why did they hate us so?" asked Senator Overman.

"For two principal reasons. First, because we are not a Soviet Government, and, secondly, because we went into the war," Dr. Huntington replied.

Text of Terrorist Order.

A member of the committee asked if it was true that the Bolshevist Government had ever ordered a systematic slaughter of the people of Russia who were opposed to them. Dr. Huntington replied by producing the official order

Rotterdam and Antwerp Base Ports for Our Army

PARIS, Feb. 11, (Associated Press.)—Rotterdam and Antwerp will be used as base ports for the American Army of Occupation. Deep-draft barges seized by the French and Belgians in the German retreats will plow the Rhine, superseding the Bordeaux route to the front by rail. Warehouses will be erected at Rotterdam and Antwerp, and the ships will be unloaded and reloaded upon barges by Dutch and Belgian civilians.

The establishment of the new route will release between 1,500 and 2,000 freight cars for the French railroads. It will make New York the railhead for the American Army of Occupation. Rations and supplies for the troops will leave New York direct for Coblenz.

Colonel John S. Sewell is in command of the new bases. He will be assisted by Colonels Charles C. Zollers, Paul J. Ramsey, and Edward B. Cushing.

MOVES TO STRIKE FOR BEER ON JULY 1

Central Federated Union Asks Its Locals to Vote on Fight Against Prohibition.

ENACTED WITHOUT CONSENT

Will Glut the Market with Unemployed, Says C. F. U., and Menace Individual Liberty.

The Central Federated Union, which on Friday night decided to put the proposed "No Beer, No Work" strike to a referendum vote of the locals, last night sent out a circular letter in which Ernest Bohm, Corresponding Secretary of the union, urges organized labor to take action on the proposed general strike at once. The letter follows:

New York, Feb. 8, 1919.

To All Affiliated Unions and Organized Labor Generally, Greeting:

Bone dry prohibition has been enacted into law without the consent of the governed. Legislatures have voted without consulting their constituents, and in at least three instances where the people have by vote declared against prohibition, California, Indiana, and Massachusetts, the lawmakers have deliberately cast aside public opinion and the demands of the people and sustained the bone dry amendment.

The enforcement of prohibition means that hundreds of thousands of wage-earners will be discharged from employment and cast upon an overcrowded labor market. Statistics recently compiled show an enormous army of unemployed, which is increasing daily.

Aside from this very serious aspect, the enactment of a law that a majority does not want, and had no say in formulating, the infringement upon the individual liberty of American citizenship, a minority dictating the mode of life and guaranteed freedom, is a dangerous procedure and if accepted without drastic protest, may lead to even more damaging curtailment of American personal rights.

The same powers and elements who worked so persistently to enact this great wrong are busily engaged in proposing legislation to prohibit the use of tobacco in any form. All these laws are primarily aimed at the working class. The Central Federated Union of Greater New York and Vicinity, after discussing this matter very carefully, concluded that something must be done, and done quickly.

We yield to no one, either individual or organization, in our contention that the organized labor movement, and particularly this body and its affiliations, comprising 350,000 members, stood by the Government patriotically and enthusiastically during the war. The four Liberty Bond issues were heartily responded to by the unions and their members. War Savings Stamps were bought. The union members embraced gladly the call to arms, did their bit on the firing line, and among those returning are many who show wounds and general hard service.

In return for these sacrifices, the liberty and freedom formerly enjoyed by these fighters for democracy are crushed even without an opportunity to voice opinions or desires as free men.

We paid for the high cost of living, apparently without protest, to the delight of the profiteers, and we shall shortly be called upon by the legislators, who put us out of employment, to pay an income tax on our earnings, to meet the heavy expenses of the war.

We have appealed through letters and by committees to the lawmakers, the alleged representatives of the people, but the appeal of the workers fell upon deaf ears, and, while giving us the glad hand, the knife was poised to be buried to the hilt in our vitals.

The Central Federated Union of Greater New York and Vicinity desires to place this issue squarely before every member of your union and request his free and unbiased declaration to the proposal that "if the bone-dry prohibition law is really enforced on July 1, 1919, to then cease work until this law is annulled."

Your union is urged to discuss this immediately and officially report your decision, if possible, within two weeks.

Fraternally yours,
ERNEST BOHM,
Corresponding Secretary.

The threatened "no beer, no work" strike was first proposed by the Building Trades Council of Newark, which later secured the adoption of the slogan by the Essex Trades Council of the same city, representing in all about 75,000 trade unionists in New Jersey. These organizations have called a strike for July 1 if the sale of beer is prohibited.

PREMIER'S SPEECH IN FULL

Declares the Strikes in Britain Are Menace to Quick Peace.

NO ONE CLASS CAN CONTROL

Discusses Plans That Are Being Made to Tide Over the After-War Crisis.

HOPEFUL ABOUT LEAGUE

And Says Peace Conference Has Made Progress Beyond All Expectations.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Premier Lloyd George took a firm stand in the House of Commons this afternoon against the labor extremists.

He admitted the existence of legitimate reasons for unrest and made full excuse for the effect the long war had had on the nerves of men who had worked hard and faithfully, but he declared that some of the present industrial trouble was deliberately engineered to hurt the nation, and he said he would use every power of the Government to put that down.

The strong line which he assumed caused some interruptions from the Labor benches, but it met with hearty approval of the House as a whole.

The Premier was cheered as he referred to the dependence of Great Britain's foreign trade on her industry, and as he asked what was the value of high wages if the general level of prices was also high. But he roused most enthusiasm as he denounced with all his accustomed vigor those men who would wreck the social structure for their own selfish ends.

The Premier began by referring to the Peace Conference, but did not add much to what was already known. He deprecated discussion at the present stage of negotiations, said that progress was quite satisfactory, and promised that the House of Commons should be consulted before the treaty was ratified.

The Premier's speech was as follows:

"I regret on personal grounds the absence from our debates of a member who for thirty years adorned these debates. I worked with Mr. Asquith for years, and I deplore sincerely the genuine misunderstanding, on both sides as I claim it, which severed our association. But although since then there have been things in some of his parliamentary actions which I could not approve of, my respect for him personally and my admiration for his great gifts are unlimited. [Hear! Hear!]

"Now I come to questions which have been addressed to me by two right honorable gentlemen, and may I just preface that by saying that I mean to take no part in the friendly rivalry which they have so genuinely initiated. [Laughter.] But I am glad to hear from them that they mean to support the Government in every honest endeavor they make to deal with the social difficulties of the day. We can claim no more.

"I will now try to answer some of the questions which were addressed to me. Some have entered into matters of detail, which I would suggest it would have been better to defer until the measures of which notice has been given today are introduced, questions about housing and railways and pensions, although with regard to pensions I can tell you immediately that the question of pensions and separation allowances is being very carefully surveyed by the Minister in charge of the Pensions Department and his Under Secretary.

"I agree with everything that has fallen from the right honorable gentlemen as to the merits of people who have sacrificed so much for their country, and as to the right they have to expect that their country will see that they suffer no privation for sacrifices they have made; but I must also give you a word of warning. I do hope there will be no undue competition in the matter of summing up charges on the country which, whatever happens, has to bear crushing burdens for some years.

Questions of the Peace Conference.

"The right honorable gentlemen have not put any detailed questions to me about the Peace Conference. I

Ex-Kaiser Keeping in Touch With New German Officials

AMERONGEN, Holland, Feb. 8, (Associated Press.)—There have been various indications during the last week that Count Hohenzollern, the former German Emperor, is maintaining communication with his former supporters.

Two secretaries of the German Legation at The Hague, Koester and Schleibach, visited the castle at Amerongen and stayed overnight, having a long conference with Count Hohenzollern and Hans von Gontard, the sole remaining high functionary of the old Imperial Court who remains faithful to the former Emperor. Last night Baroness von Rosen, the English wife of the German Minister to Holland, arrived, and she is still at the castle today.

The object of these meetings cannot be ascertained, as everything is kept secret under the influence of Herr von Gontard, who declines to permit any of his powers to be taken from his hands. With him is a minor functionary of the former German court, Councillor Knauff. Herr von Gontard is the only member of Count Hohenzollern's suite to lodge at the castle. General von Esdorff, Captain von Ilsemann, and Dr. Forster, who is in attendance on the former Empress, have rented a house outside.

BIG NAVY WINS IN HOUSE, 194 TO 142

Bill, Including Three-Year Program, Passes by Final Vote of 281 to 50.

LIMIT CLAUSE RESTORED

Contract Date Extended to June, 1920, to Give Peace Conference Time to Act.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—President Wilson won a victory against a combination of Republicans and "small navy men" of his own party when the House tonight passed the Naval Appropriation bill containing the new three-year program, with a limiting clause, which yesterday was eliminated from the measure by a point of order by Representative James R. Mann, Republican leader. The House accepted the building program by a vote of 194 to 142 and passed the bill finally by a vote of 281 to 50.

The President's triumph came through prompt action by the Rules Committee in reporting by a vote of 6 to 4 a rule making in order the building program and the restricting paragraphs which were stricken from the bill yesterday. After prolonged debate, participated in by leading Democratic members and aided by Representative P. H. Kelley, Republican member of the Naval Affairs Committee, the House, by a vote of 205 to 148, adopted the rule restoring the section. Thirty-seven Republicans joined with 168 Democrats in supporting the rule, while 15 Democrats voted with the 131 Republicans and two independents in opposing the special rule.

Democrats Voting Against Adoption of the Rule.

Bankhead, Alabama; Black, Texas; Claypool, Ohio; Dies, Texas; Doughton, North Carolina; Hamlin, Missouri; Hilliard, Colorado; Huddleston, Alabama; Kelley, Pennsylvania; Lea, California; Saunders, Virginia; Sherwood, Ohio; Sisson, Mississippi; Steagall, Alabama; Stephens, Mississippi—15.

Republicans Supporting the Rule.

London, New York, Socialist, voted against rule.

No Contracts Before June, 1920.

The building program section, which would prevent contracts for the ten battleships and ten scout cruisers being awarded before Feb. 1, 1920, was amended to extend the date to June, 1920, giving the Peace Conference longer time to complete its labors. The building program section was adopted by the committee by a vote of 97 to 71. The only other important change made in the bill was the insertion of a clause that none of the money apportioned to the Bureau of Steam Engineering should be used by the Navy Department for the acquisition of wireless systems. The appropriation for aviation was reduced from $25,000,000 to $15,000,000.

PROVISIONAL GERMAN RULE

Temporary Constitution Adopted; 103 Majority for Ebert.

RETAINS NAME OF "EMPIRE"

Independents Vainly Try to Substitute "Republic"—Threat of New Revolt.

SECRET AGREEMENTS WIN

President's Salary Limited to 1,000,000 Marks—Scheidemann for Chancellor.

BASLE, Feb. 11.—The German National Assembly at Weimar today elected Friedrich Ebert President of the German State by a vote of 277 out of 379, a majority of 102. Herr Ebert accepted the election.

Count von Posadowsky-Wehner received 49 votes.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A German wireless dispatch recording the election of Herr Ebert describes his post as that of "Provisional State President."

It adds that there were fifty-one abstentions from voting. Philipp Scheidemann and Mathias Erzberger each polled one vote.

After the election Dr. Eduard David in a speech said that the empire for the first time had a chief who, by virtue of his election, was empowered to speak and act in the name of the German people. The mouthpiece which spoke by inherited right had disappeared, and in his place stood a leader chosen by the people.

It was mainly due to Herr Ebert, the speaker continued, that the revolution in Germany had not followed the example of Russia, leading to bloody chaos and complete dissolution of right and order. The German people would have confidence in Herr Ebert's skill, activity, and firmness, he said, to protect their new freedom from every danger, either from the Left or the Right. The Majority Socialists applauded this statement, but the Independent Socialists expressed dissent.

Herr Ebert in his speech accepting the Presidency declared that his purpose would be impartially to dispense justice, without favor or prejudice.

Long Debate on Constitution.

WEIMAR, Feb. 10, (Associated Press.)—The German National Assembly unanimously adopted a provisional Constitution at 6 o'clock this evening, after a three-hour wrangle between the Independent Socialists, on the one hand, and all the rest of the House on the other, over one single point—the question of secret agreements.

Although the Independents lost in their contention that Germany should pave the way for the entire world in going definitely on record in favor of open diplomacy agreements, they rose belatedly to make the acceptance of the Constitution as a whole unanimous, despite the inclusion of the clause they had opposed.

This paragraph, a part of the sixth clause of the Constitution, reads as originally conceived and now accepted:

"As soon as the German Empire is represented in the League of Nations, with the aim to exclude secret agreements, all agreements with the nations allied in the league must have the acquiescence of the national assembly and the State Commission."

The State Commission corresponds to the Federal Council or Second Chamber.

Members in Stirring Debate.

The Independents sought to have this clause altered so that Germany might unequivocally go on record as legally bound to enter into no secret agreements regardless of what other States might do in the future. The fight in the Assembly on this point raged during both the second and third readings of the Constitution, led by Dr. Hugo Haase and Dr. Cohn for the Independents, and Herr Lundsberg, Dr. Dernburg, and Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau for the Government and other parties.

Dr. Dernburg, in supporting the clause as it was finally adopted, said that it was impossible for Germany to hope to make agreements with other nations if they adhered to secret methods while Germany, by her own constitution, was in duty bound to publish all the terms in detail.

Dr. Haase replied that one of the great objects of the revolution had been the elimination of secrecy. He contended that Germany could well afford to lead the way to peace by the path of openness, no matter what others did, and as an evidence of the sincerity and genuineness of her reform.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau assured Dr. Haase that he would never make a secret treaty or agreement, but Dr. Haase replied that there was no assurance how long he would be in power.

Allies May Shorten the Armistice Periods; Rumor of Anglo-French Threat to Germany

PARIS, Feb. 11.—A proposal to change the allied armistice policy and greatly shorten the armistice periods is understood to be before the Supreme War Council. This proposal calls for the limiting of the armistice periods to about ten days, at the end of which time new terms are to be imposed upon Germany.

The sentiment is expressed by many in attendance on the Peace Conference that this would give the Allies a better hold on the situation and enable them to meet the constantly changing conditions. No intimation is given as to the attitude of the Supreme War Council in the matter.

In view of the complexity and diversity of the problems raised by the armistice, says a Havas report, the Supreme War Council has appointed a committee of eight members, to which will be intrusted the task of studying these questions.

The committee is composed of Norman Davis and General Tasker H. Bliss, for the United States; Lord Robert Cecil, for Great Britain; Dr. Silvio Crespi and General Cavellero, for Italy, and Etienne Clementel and General Degoutte, for France. It held its first meeting last night. General Dogoutte, who had been summoned from Lille, could not arrive in time, however, and the committee meeting was continued today. The conditions were still under discussion late tonight at Marshal Foch's house. Albert Strauss, Vice Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is taking part. He and Thomas W. Lamont are expected to be members of the Supreme Economic Council.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 11.—Great Britain and France have sent notes to Mathias Erzberger, President of the German Armistice Commission, the Weimar correspondent of the Berlingske Tidende says he learns from a reliable source, dealing with the failure of Germany to deliver locomotives and agricultural machinery as agreed. He says the tone of the notes virtually constitutes a threat to Germany.

The correspondent adds that it is reported that a similar note is expected from the United States.

JAPAN THREATENS TO KEEP ISLANDS

Paris Delegates Also Give Notice That They Want Shantung Treaty Carried Out.

DENY THREATS TO CHINA

But Circumstantial Reports from Peking Tell of Chinese Alarm.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Japan has reiterated her intention to hold the Marshall and Caroline Islands in the Pacific, which she took from Germany during the war, as well as to insist upon the execution of her agreement reached in September last with China regarding Shantung. A formal statement to this effect by Japanese representatives has been made public here.

It is not considered that the Chino-Japanese controversy or Japan's claims regarding the Pacific Islands are likely to delay the Society of Nations project. It seems probable, however, that these matters will be considered later by that organization.

The Havas Agency gives out a statement by Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador to Great Britain, who is now representing his country at the Peace Conference here, declaring the reports to be untrue that Japan has exercised pressure on China to restrain the action of the Chinese delegates to the conference. He says:

"There has been no pressure exercised, no menace formulated, no bargaining done on the subject of the Province of Shantung, or any other Chinese territory. No right of control, has been sought over China, and there has been in no degree any ambition to represent China at the Peace Conference.

"Besides, our relations with the President of the Chinese Republic and the Ministry are most cordial."

Considerable space is being given to the Chino-Japanese controversy by the French newspapers.

To meet doubts cast upon its authority, the Chinese delegation has published cablegrams received from Shanghai, the provincial legislature of Shantung and the Chinese Society for a League of Nations at Peking. These cablegrams overwhelmingly favor the activities of the delegation and direct that there be restitution to China of properties in Shantung.

As regards the Pacific islands claims of Japan, the American position at the Peace Conference has been unofficially represented as one of opposition to annexations and of insistence upon the internationalization of all the Pacific islands taken from Germany. The Marshall and Caroline groups lie directly east of the Philippines.

The Chino-Japanese controversy centres upon the Japanese claims regarding Shantung Province, where Japan has taken over the German holdings based upon the old Tsing-tao concession. Under the treaty of 1915 between Japan and China, which the latter claims was signed under duress, Japan was to return to China after the war all the former German holdings except that a Japanese settlement was to be permitted at Tsing-tao or that thisport, whichvirtually gives command of the entire province of Shantung, should be internationalized if the Peace Conference should so decide.

Supreme Council Refers Their Proposals to Sub-Committee Including Civilians.

BLOCKADE LIFTING AN ISSUE

Americans Oppose Economic Throttling of Germany Lest Indemnities Be Forfeited.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Wireless and Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Strong differences of view in the Supreme War Council over the proposals for imposing more severe terms on Germany in the armistice extension which becomes effective Monday has caused the Council to refer the whole matter to a sub-committee among whose membership civilians are included. The most important instruction to the sub-committee was that it should report back to the new Supreme Economic Council instead of to the Permanent Armistice Commission, which is dominated by the military.

This action is due primarily to opposition in the War Council to the French proposal that the new armistice provide for dismantling the forts on the right bank of the Rhine, continued occupation of the left bank of the Rhine, reduction of the German Army to twenty-five divisions, and allied control over the Essen munition works, but without lifting the German blockade.

The subcommittee will report that, while it is willing to furnish all proper safeguards for France, the lifting of the blockade is necessary as a measure of fair treatment to the neutral countries of Northern Europe, as well as Germany. Germany, it is contended by those who oppose the French view, cannot be shackled to the point of economic helplessness, and at the same time earn the money with which to pay a heavy indemnity.

Present indications are that the French view will not prevail in the Supreme War Council.

It is now realized that the feeling that Germany should not be made economically helpless was responsible for the decision of the Supreme War Council last week to create a Supreme Economic Council, with powers curtailing those of the permanent Armistice Commission.

France is opposed to opening the blockade, for one reason because neutral countries will be able to take advantage of German credit.

The Americans oppose this position and are insistent that Germany have a chance to get on her feet in order to pay the indemnities and keep her people from starvation.

Vance McCormick is the American member of the sub-committee mentioned.

NEW DRAFT DUE TOMORROW

Cecil and Larnaude Revising Amendments in Dispute—Wilson May Sail Feb. 17.

PARIS, Feb. 11, (Associated Press.)—President Wilson's desire to return to the United States with the League of Nations as an accomplished fact became open to some doubt for the first time today, when Léon Bourgeois, one of the French representatives on the Commission on a Society of Nations, proposed an amendment, creating an international military force as a means of enforcing the decisions of the League.

This came after the Commission had virtually completed its work and was considering the project for final adoption. Besides introducing the rather formidable question of backing the League by an armed international force, M. Bourgeois's amendment also creates some apprehension that remaining issues may not be adjusted in time for presentation and adoption by a plenary session of the Peace Conference before Mr. Wilson's departure on Monday.

M. Bourgeois presented his amendment and also prepared a memorandum supporting it. He spoke with great earnestness, and some emotion was shown when it was maintained in reply that his proposal, if adopted, would be unconstitutional in the view of some countries. M. Bourgeois, however, continued to support his amendment in an argument of nearly two hours.

It was finally decided to refer the amendment and all other details to a drafting committee, consisting of Lord Robert Cecil, for England; Professor Larnaude, for France; M. Vesnitch, for Serbia, and M. Venizelos, for Greece. They hope at a meeting tomorrow to reconcile differences and to report at the next meeting on Thursday. It will then be necessary for the commission to approve or reject this report.

Whether all this can be accomplished in the last days of the week is doubtful.

One member of the Drafting Committee said tonight, however, that the chances were reasonably good for reaching a favorable adjustment, and he expressed the belief that Premier Clemenceau would exercise influence in securing a satisfactory conclusion.

The session lasted until 3:35 o'clock this afternoon.

M. Bourgeoisc is said to have urged that the international army be stationed in France, as France was the strategic centre of Europe and the country most immediately threatened.

The official communication says:

The eighth meeting of the Commission on the League of Nations was held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the Hôtel de Crillon. The meeting was devoted to the consideration of a number of amendments to the draft which had been submitted. After a discussion had developed the sense of the meeting, the several amendments were referred to a drafting committee, composed of M. Larnaude, Lord Robert Cecil, M. Venizelos, and M. Vesnitch, who will meet at the Hotel Majestic tomorrow morning.

Two articles were added to the draft.

The commission will meet again at 10:30 Thursday morning at the Hôtel de Crillon, when the draft will be subjected to its second reading.

Claims of Belgium Heard.

The Supreme Council gave its attention today to Belgium, hearing MM. Hymans, Vandenheuvel, and Vandervelde on Belgian claims for an international readjustment and for changes in the Treaty of 1839, delimiting the frontiers of Belgium and providing that it be a perpetually neutral State. It was this treaty which was declared to be a "scrap of paper" when Belgium was invaded.

The modifications which are now asked are: First, freedom of commerce through the lower Scheldt, leading from Antwerp to the sea, either by the internationalization of the river or the acquisition by Belgium of its left bank; second, the cession of the Province of Southern Limburg in Holland, for defensive purposes; third, the amalgamation of the Duchy of Luxemburg, preferably by assent of the people.

While some of these questions affect neutral and friendly powers not represented at the conference, yet Belgium maintains that the world readjustment now being effected should provide a rectification of the old treaty.

The official statement on the meeting says:

> The President of the United States and the representatives of the allied and associated powers met at the Quai d'Orsay this afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock.
> The Belgian delegation, composed of MM. Hymans, Vandenheuvel, and Vandervelde, stated the different claims of Belgium.
> The next meeting will take place Wednesday at 11 A. M.

Wilson's Short Stay in America.

Evidence of President Wilson's intention not to abandon the Peace Conference upon the ratification of the Society of Nations plan is found in the disclosure today that he plans to return from Washington by March 15. This involves so brief a stay at Washington as to permit only the signing of bills during the closing hours of Congress. It is understood that Mr. Wilson intends to give personal attention in Paris to the work of the Supreme Executive Council, which promises to be the most important feature of the Peace Conference after the disposal of the Society of Nations.

A statement issued by the Official Bureau explains that the Supreme Economic Council is not to be confused with the Economic Commission of the Peace Conference. The Supreme Economic Council will decide economic questions during the armistice. The Economic Commission will advise the Peace Conference on economic questions in connection with the peace terms.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the United States Navy, has virtually completed the work of disestablishing American shore stations in France. He will return to America on the George Washington with President Wilson.

DIFFER ON REPARATION, TOO.

French Want Big Amount Assessed, Americans Would Reduce It.

PARIS, Feb. 11, (Associated Press.)—The Reparation Commission of the Peace Conference has before it, according to the Temps, three propositions as a basis for the settlement of claims against Germany. It is said that the French propose to assess against Germany all damages to property, national and individual, from the war, in addition to her outlay for military purposes.

The British plan, proposed by Premier Hughes of Australia, differs from the French only that he gives no preference to any class of claims.

The American plan opposes any demands excepting losses by pillage and devastation by German armies, it is said.

The total claims under the first two plans are estimated at a thousand billion francs. The American plan would reduce the total to an amount that Germany probably would be able to pay, it is asserted by the newspaper.

The French are said to have accepted the British plan as a basis of discussion, but the whole subject is still open.

Two important features of the American and British labor program were accepted today by the Commission on International Labor Legislation and will form a part of the whole project of international regulation of labor which will be submitted to the full Peace Conference. These are the prohibition of labor by children under 16 years of age and the uniformity of seamen's wages.

The Commission on Ports, Waterways and Railways met today, with Dr. Silvio Crespi of Italy in the chair. England, supported by America, proposed the proclamation of the principle of complete liberty of transit to every country on equal conditions to all. This proposition was opposed by Albert Claveille, for France, and Lambros A. Coromilas, for Greece, who pointed out that England and America occupied special situations that made the question of commercial and transit insignificant for them.

The commission appointed two subcommissions, one to study the question of the control of ports, waterways, and railways and the other the question of liberty of transit. The first commission has approved of the principle that no country may charge duties on goods passing through its ports or over its railways or waterways other than the freight rates paid on goods destined for the country itself. Neither may it levy on such goods customs or local taxes.

DUTCH ARE ANXIOUS OVER PARIS OUTLOOK

Report of Early Discussion of Belgian Demands Discredited —Gifts of German Coal.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 9.—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent learns from an authoritative source, in close touch with Government circles, that the latter, including Foreign Minister Karnebeek, have been decidedly pessimistic during the last few days regarding Holland's future prospects.

The Dutch are gradually discovering that the assumption that the armistice spelled peace was premature, and are awaiting the decisions of the Peace Conference anxiously.

The Nieuwe Courant published a dispatch this morning from its Paris correspondent stating that Belgium's demands, including the annexation of Limbourg and the left bank of the Scheldt, would be discussed in the conference in the following week. An editorial in the same paper, however, discredits the report, with the explanation that the correspondent may be the dupe of schemers in Paris.'

"Holland's troubles are not yet over," said an influential politician. "It looked like it for a time, but I fear the contrary. The idea that national demonstrations in Holland will have any influence on the decisions at Paris is folly."

The Germans are carrying on an insidious propaganda among influential people by giving away sacks of German coal. During the extreme cold and the acute coal famine this is considered a clever move. The coal ration for the Winter is only half a ton per household, and even a few sacks are a most welcome gift.

The Dutch Foreign Office has not yet received the Ukrainian diplomatic mission, which has just arrived at The Hague. According to the newspapers, the Government is waiting for the big powers to recognize the Ukrainian Republic before taking any decisive step in the matter.

CENSORING PARIS PAPERS.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Since Marshal Foch's announcement before the Armistice Commission that the Germans could mobilize 2,000,000 men in six weeks, there has been a feeling of uneasiness expressed by the French public.

Pessimistic views have been openly discussed, as also have been apprehensions of a renewal of the German offensive. The newspapers commented on the situation in a manner such as to call for frequent blanks in their pages, due to censorship.

FRENCH ARE FACING ARMISTICE DEFEAT

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

al of the Peace Conference from France, I am doing so on my own inference, drawn from positive knowledge of what our representatives have in mind, and not from any direct statement made to me that the interview was the moving reason for their attitude. But I do know from the very best sources that the indignant feeling among our delegates over the course of the French Premier, as well as over the attitude taken by the French press and by the French representatives in the conference and its subsidiary bodies, finally reached a point where it was felt that frank talk was necessary.

The American delegates ultimately became convinced that the conference was getting nowhere toward real peace. It was felt that the spirit of obstruction was present at all times, and that propaganda had been undertaken by a large and influential portion of the French press, which was intended to influence the other Peace Conference delegations against the proposals put forward by Great Britain and the United States. The fact that the dissatisfaction of the American delegates took the form today, after their reading of the Clemenceau interview, which is already evident in the decision to recommend that the sessions of the conference be held outside of France, indicates that the interview had a bearing on the determination of our plenipotentiaries to assert themselves.

The Question of Indemnity.

This morning, when I asked a high ranking American official if he had read the interview, he showed reticence—giving the impression that he had only glanced through it hurriedly. In further conversation with him it was brought out that the French point of view appeared to be, as expressed by the Premier, that France had been virtually ruined industrially, while Germany, with her industries practically intact, would be able to forge ahead in an industrial way unless France was built up economically before Germany had a chance again to take her place as a competitor in the world of commerce. The American official would not subscribe to this. While cautious, he made clear his position was that France would be largely dependent on a German indemnity to reconstruct her industries, and it would be impossible to collect this indemnity unless Germany received an opportunity to earn money with which to pay it.

I think this represents one important divergence between the French and British-American views. The American delegates are anxious to get Germany started well by restoring order in that country—to remove the menace of Bolshevism and enable the German Government to pay the heavy claims which it will be obliged to assume through signing the final peace treaty. Germany has already, through acceptance of the armistice terms, agreed to make reparation for damages done in the allied countries and on the seas. The Interallied Commission is now at work to determine her ability to pay and the amount that should be assessed. As has been frequently said in the dispatches I have sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES from Paris, the American position is that peace will be best and most quickly attained, and normal conditions, with consequent happiness and prosperity restored, by getting the war-weary nations back to work. The American representatives have been trying to make a start in this direction by having the German blockade modified, and in every instance where this proposal is advanced they are met with obstruction, according to information from reliable sources.

At Odds on Demobilization.

It has been made clear that the allied countries cannot expect to have the United States Government advance them more money, and, coupled with intimations of this character, methods of reviving industry in Europe through private credits obtained in America have been suggested. But these suggestions have not had a sympathetic reception. Nor have suggestions from the United States and Great Britain as to the demobilization of continental armies made any headway. The whole purpose of the American Government—and the same may be said of the British, whose views coincide with the American in most respects—is to get the world as far as possible away from militarism and to resume the ways of peace.

The French attitude has been explained so often in Paris dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES that it is unnecessary to repeat in detail the objections raised to the proposals brought before the Peace Conference by the American and British plenipotentiaries. They are summarized in other dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES sent from Paris today, which give the spirit of the French general position.

More specific problems of the War Council which President Wilson and the other leading plenipotentiaries of the powers are discussing came to a head on Saturday in the adoption of resolutions offered by the President, creating a Supreme Economic Council and appointing civilian members to the Permanent Armistice Commission, which is presided over by Marshal Foch. The obvious intention of these resolutions was to curtail the authority of the Armistice Commission, which, it was contended, showed too military a spirit in dealing with the German Government. This action, however, seemed to have no effect in lessening the efforts to influence the conference to accept the view that great danger threatened unless Germany was kept on her knees industrially and militarily.

The American plenipotentiaries thereupon, fearing that efforts to keep the world from returning to normal conditions were being employed, decided that, unless there was a change from this situation, they would propose that the conference meet elsewhere than in France.

HOW FRANCE VIEWS THE GERMAN PERIL

She Wants Assurance of Full American Acceptance of League Responsibilities.

PICTURES ENEMY GAINING

Thinks the Prominence Given Society of Nations Is Strengthening the Foe.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—"But will France be safe?"

The question was put simply and seriously by a French officer with whom I had been discussing the League of Nations proposals. It sums up in one phrase all the doubts and anxieties which, according to French statements, are troubling the heart of France today.

"There are no 3,000 miles of Atlantic, nor even a sea narrows guarded by a tremendous fleet, between France and Germany," he continued. "The frontier separating France and Germany may be a thick black line on the map, but in fact it is just a step forward of one man. If your League of Nations scheme is definitely adopted, what guarantee have we French that Germany, with her 70,000,000 inhabitants—perhaps soon to be augmented by the other millions of German Austria—will not make that step forward against us? In victory or defeat, Germany has always been France's enemy. What assurance does the League of Nations give—what assurance is given by America—that France need not put her trust in her own sword in order that she may have no aggression in the future?"

I have quoted the officer at length, because I am convinced that he represents the view of the French Army. During the last few days I have talked with officers and enlisted men still in uniform or demobilized, and in every case sooner or later one comes to the concrete issue: What protection will the League of Nations give France against Germany?

Army and Press Views Alike.

So far as civilian opinion is concerned, the most cursory study of the Paris press shows the same note of anxiety. Only the organs of the former defeatist minority—Socialists, Bolsheviki, call them what you will—profess entire satisfaction with the present state of affairs and acclaim it with an interpretation placed thereon that involves the return of the German colonies, a plebiscite—in which, following Bismarck's example, they encourage the proposition that the "immigrants" be allowed to vote—for Alsace-Lorraine, and the admission of Germans into the workers' commonwealth without payment of indemnity or full reparation for damages.

How different is Clemenceau's appeal—France's appeal—to the people of America!

"I have said the war is won. It would be more accurate to say that there is a lull in the tempest. Industrially and commercially, between France and Prussia for the present moment victory rests with the latter. Even regarding the military triumph over Germany there is a situation which presents for France certain disquieting features. There might be danger that Germany would reopen the military dispute. Naturally, the Society of Nations, in which France and America entered ought to be deeply supported by a conviction in the hearts of both peoples and by a determination of all nations party to the agreement that America would renounce without hesitation its traditional isolation and be ready to employ its national force."

The concluding phrases—as I emphasized in quoting the Temps editorial to the same effect about Deschanel's and Wilson's speeches before the Chamber of Deputies—go right to the heart of the problem now tormenting France: If the League of Nations becomes a reality, and if France agrees to abandon the idea of force and to lie down like the lamb beside the German lion, will America be able and willing to come to her aid with adequate and immediate force in the event—which optimists may deem unlikely, but which all Frenchmen with whom I have talked declare long and bitter experience has led France to expect—of Germany suddenly throwing off the mask of brotherhood and once more revealing herself as the criminal freebooter she has been in the past? In other words—say the French—is Washington's precept to beware of entangling alliances to be maintained, or will America accept the full responsibilities of her position in that League of Nations which America's representatives—against the which of Rrance, which afterward acceded—have done so much to create?

Merely Stating French Views.

In repeating these queries, it must be understood that I am simply putting forward the French point of view or criticism.

It is a fact, and the time has come to state it, that France feels that since the armistice day marked the downfall of German militarism and the triumph of the allied arms the Allies have lost ground and Germany has gained it. The French believe, rightly or wrongly, that the prominence given to the League of Nations scheme and the discussion of worldwide rearrangements, from the Marshall Islands to the Banat of Temesvar, over the practical question of Germany's crime and Germany's punishment and the terms on which Germany shall make expiation, is to blame. That is the secret of Foch's anxiety, as it is of the alarm of the simple poilu, who foresees 40,000,000 Frenchmen still threatened by 80,000,000 boches. The French ask whether, if France enters the League of Nations and accepts disarmament and international brotherhood—as, Heaven knows, the French are eager enough to do if it be safe—America will promise to help her against an attack with adequate and immediate force.

PHILIP GIBBS HERE, TALKS OF THE WAR

Correspondent Says Reports of Huge New Hindenburg Army Are Bluff.

IN CONFLICT FROM START

Tells of Retreat from Mons and Other Great Episodes—Worked as a Stretcher Bearer.

Philip Gibbs, the famous war correspondent, whose dispatches appeared during the entire course of the war in the London Daily Chronicle and THE NEW YORK TIMES, arrived yesterday from England on the Cunard liner Carmania, to spend six weeks in visiting the principal cities. During that time he will write a series of articles of his impressions of America and its people for The London Daily Chronicle, and incidentally will deliver a few lectures upon his remarkable experiences on the war fronts in France and Belgium.

Mr. Gibbs went into Germany with the army of occupation. He expressed the opinion yesterday that the talk of the new Hindenburg army of 3,000,000 was pure bluff. In Cologne alone he saw 15,000 deserters from the broken German armies, and the officers told him that the soldiers would not fight any more.

Many French, British, and American officers, he said, had expressed regret that the war had not continued another three or four weeks, so that the terms of peace could have been dictated without any armistice being necessary. The result would have been the same. The Allies might have captured places in Belgium like Liége and Namur, with the loss of several thousand more men, as the Germans fought a fine rear-guard action with machine gun trimmings, while the bulk of their army was melting away. The British alone took 200,000 prisoners from August to November, 1918.

The greatest artillery firing he heard during the war was in Flanders at the end of 1917, where there were 2,000 guns, from three-inch to fifteen-inch, engaged and pounding away day and night.

Marshal Foch with his superb genius for strategy had brought the war to a victorious close for the Allies because the fighting was chiefly in the open, but that strategy would not have been of much use during the early trench warfare.

Mr. Gibbs said he had seen the American soldiers fighting at Quéant, to the north of S. Quentin, and that they were fine fellows. They held the ground with the Australians and the British under the fire of heavy artillery and frequent bombing by airplanes.

When asked for a brief account of his experience in the war, Mr. Gibbs said:

"I was in Paris two days before war commenced and left there in the first train for Belfort after the troops mobilized. At Nancy I met General Foch, who asked me how the people had taken the call to arms. I replied that the Frenchmen of all classes were rushing to meet the invader of their country, and the tears came into his eyes.

"No correspondents were allowed with the army and I was continually being turned back by French officers who were kind but firm when they said to me 'M'sieur. On ne passe pas. C'est défendu.' In spite of that I got around and was mixed up in the battle of the Marne and the retreat from Mons. It was a scene of the most wonderful confusion that one could possibly imagine, that retreat of the French and British Armies before overwhelming numbers while fighting a heroic rear guard action. They fell all along the road to Amiens from Bapaume and sacrificed their lives for those at home. The wounded lay down on the road and big French cuirassiers came limping along leading horses which could do no more after fighting all the previous day and walking all night.

"I left Amiens on the last train before the bridge was blown up. A Sergeant showed me his map of forty bridges he had destroyed during the week, and that gave me the route of the French retreat. I went into Belgium then, and became a stretcher bearer with an ambulance, and assisted in picking up hundreds of wounded.

"That was the first time that I entered Bapaume. The second time was when the Australians recaptured it in 1915, and again I entered it when the town was once more taken from the enemy by the New Zealanders on Aug. 31, 1918.

"The Hindenburg line was first broken by the British and Scotch regiments at Cambrai, with the aid of the tanks. The Germans had constructed trenches forty feet wide along the famous line to stop the tanks, which they believed could not get through. It was done, however, by carrying huge bundles of faggots on the front attached to a chain, which could be lowered when desired, and the tanks could rest upon it easily and climb up the opposite side of the trench.

"The famous line was also broken at Quéant and Drocourt and Bellenglise, where we captured a tunnel several miles long over the St. Quentin Canal. The boche used to sit there in safety and play cards while the shrapnel from our guns rained on the roof of the tunnel like peas.

"We had to do with shrapnel until March, 1915, when Kitchener came over and saw that it was absolutely necessary to have heavy explosives. The order was given at once, but the navy had first call on the ammunition. It was a gross injustice to Lord Kitchener to say that he was against high explosives. The trouble was that we did not have the plants to turn out the shells. That is what caused the delay.

"The biggest fighting I saw during the entire war was from Aug. 8 to Nov. 11, 1918, continuously, when the losses of the British totalled from 40,000 to 50,000 a week. That was what broke the German Army up. It was terrific, and our men were tired out, too, at the end, but they would have gone on if the armistice had not been signed until the last Boche had missled away."

Asked what he thought of the League of Nations, Philip Gibbs replied, with a smile, "I'm for it." He had had enough war to satisfy him for life, he added. His previous experience was in the Turkish-Bulgarian war of 1910, which he described as being fought on the lines of 3000 B. C. with modern weapons.

GIBBS PAYS TRIBUTE TO SOLDIER COURAGE

Not a Light, Breezy Thing, Natural to Men, but Defiance Born of the Will to Win.

Philip Gibbs was entertained last night at the City Club, 55 West Forty-fourth Street, by the Association of Foreign Correspondents in America.

He spoke in glowing terms of the spirit of defiance shown by both the Americans and the British during those periods when all the world seemed black, the defiance born of a courage that sprang from the sheer will to win. Sir Arthur Pearson, who has done marvels in rehabilitating blinded English soldiers, told of his work at St. Dunstan's in London, and to him Mr. Gibbs paid the tribute of having exhibited the same defiance in overcoming the handicaps of blindness. Frank Dilnot, American correspondent of The London Daily Chronicle, President of the Association, presided.

After pointing out that it was the same qualities of discipline, training and defiance of fate that made it possible for the British to go through four and a half years of war, and again to make it possible for Sir Arthur to bring back his blinded men to a state of normality, Mr. Gibbs told how he had seen these same men before they went into battle and as they drifted back from the front in a thin line, wounded and broken. In particular, he told of one whom he brushed past in the tunnel under Arras. As he passed him the soldier cried out, in the depths of despair, "Christ, I'm blinded!" but today he is probably one of the happy men whom Sir Arthur had described, one more able to compete on equal, even better, terms with his seeing fellow."

"I have seen much of human courage," said Mr. Gibbs, "but I have always felt that the English people did not quite understand just what courage meant. Usually it is described as something light and breezy, as something natural to men, but it is not that. I remember when I went into a little Flemish town, which was under fire of fifteen-inch shells. One had just blown out the back of a hospital. As I came up to the spot I saw a tall New Zealander, a fine set-up Sergeant Major. He saluted, and then exclaimed: 'Any man who says he ain't afraid of shellfire is a bleeding liar.' And I agreed. Our men did not have a breezy courage. They hated that shellfire. And they went through four and a half years of it.

"During the first Winter the Germans had the trick of getting all the high and advantageous ground around Ypres. They held the Vimy Ridge and Monchy Hill, and our men occupied the marshes down below. They were up to their waists in water for days at a time, and not only were they under fire from the front, but they were sometimes shelled from the rear. It was a terrible situation, for the Germans saw that the drainage from their trenches flowed down into ours, and there it stayed. And on one of those hot, unbearable days, one of the Sergeant Majors—they are everywhere—was led to remark: 'It's a pity that that grand fleet of ours doesn't come down here and do a bit of honest work.'

"Nevertheless, horrible as the conditions were, that splendid courage led to a curious cheerfulness, the making of strange jokes, and there was great laughter. Any kind of joke would do. It was a kind of psychological camouflage. In one sector, where the boche had put down a special hate to wipe it out, the men would bet whether the oncoming shell would be a 'dud' or would explode as it ought. Some of them developed remarkably accurate hearing so that they could tell a dud a long way off, and they made a lot of money. They would bet on the next man to be wounded. One day a Sergeant Major came again and again to ask after Private Smith and how he was doing. He'd yell down the entrance, 'Is Private Smith all right?' After this had happened for the third or fourth time, Private Smith began to become emotional about it and remarked that the Sergeant Major had come to love him like a father. But he was soon disillusioned. 'You blinkin' fool,' he was told, 'he's drawn you in a lottery. He'd have won 17s. 6d. if you'd been hit!'

"And so the men indulged in this curious psychological camouflage in places that surpassed any man's imagination of hell. And amid it all again and again I felt a kind of despair creep over me, the feeling that it was going on and on, and would never stop. It all seemed so futile. Sometimes I felt ashamed of myself. I felt that I was wasting my time writing instead of fighting, but I comforted myself with the thought—perhaps it was a little dishonest—that I was telling what the soldier was doing, the kind of life he was leading in frightful places, where it seemed no man could live, and that perhaps the truth might be passed down in history as a warning to the generations to follow.

"One thing that helped me was the budget of letters I received from all over the world. They came literally from thousands of homes in England, and they told me that indeed my writings had helped them to understand much more of what was going on and they were able to give all the sympathy of their hearts. That comforted me. Many of them came from America. They were a revelation to me. Some things have been said of correspondents, but their life was not a soft one; it was a strain on their physicial and mental health. However, when I heard from America, I saw the truth. I know that I had helped in what had seemed so futile.

"I felt the friendship of American hearts beating to the suffering of our British soldiers even before the Americans came into the war.

"We never looked very far ahead, never more than three months, for if we had done so we should not have been able to stand it. We never realized that the Americans would ever be with us, but one day we got our surprise. There in the historic Forest of Crécy we spied a column of American troops making their way along the road. And further on, between the glades, we saw thousands of American troops lying down beside their packs and their rifles. It was wonderful. The whole history of the world loomed up. When our archers passed through this forest hundreds of years ago there were no Americans, but from them has sprung a new race, and they were going to alter the fate of the world.

"In March and April the Germans had broken through. Our machine had been thrown into chaos. Amiens was endangered and in the north Kemmel Hill, the key to all our defenses, had been taken. The enemy had broken through the Portuguese along the Lys, and Bailleul, which had been the home of the British for three years, was under bombardment. They threatened the whole coast line. It was difficult for us to avoid a breaking of hearts. But we were going to win the war some old how, and we have to pay tribute to the remarkable genius of Foch, who sent that line of blue up to the north with remarkable rapidity. Behind our lines were billeted many American troops where the English, Scottish, and Irish had been before. A new type had come to our aid. We gazed at him with very curious and critical eyes. We liked him. They were proper men, keen and fresh beside ours, who were tired and battered with the fighting of many weeks."

Sir Arthur Pearson explained his work for the blind soldiers as being in brief the attempt to see that the "darkness that is inevitable never passes into gloom that is impenetrable."

VETERANS OF YPRES REACH END OF TRAIL

War Already a Fantastic Dream to 3,000 Canadians, Home Again.

ASTOUNDED AT THEIR LUCK

Officer of Carmania Recalls Liner's Thrilling Fight with the Cap Trafalgar Off Trinidad.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

It has been my good luck on my first voyage across the Atlantic to go with a contingent of 3,000 Canadian soldiers homeward bound after their years of war. When they came on board at Liverpool they stood crowded on the lower decks six deep or more, looking down on to the landing stage, where a band played them away, and I stood wedged among them, as often before in communication terenches up in the Ypres salient or round by Vimy or on the way to Hill 70 and Loos. They were the same men. They bore in their bodies and in their souls the remembrance of those places.

Most of them in this ship, the Carmania, bound for New York by way of Halifax, which was their way home, had been wounded once, and many of them three or four times, as one could see by their stripes. They were fellows who had been plastered in the mud of Flanders until it had got into the grain of their skins and in the whitish clay of the tunnels round Lens, so that when I met them in the old days they looked like men who had been long buried and dug up again.

They had been at Passchendaele, where the Third and Fourth Canadian Divisions went through the swamps and fought their way up the slopes under frightful machine gun fire. They had been at Cambrai, where the Second Division and others had as hard a fight in September last as in any battle of the war, losing thousands of men in close fighting among the surrounding villages on the north side of the city while English troops were storming through on the south. They gained Mons the day before the armistice, and on that day I went among them there and heard their cheers go up because at last their job was done with the cease fire of the guns after the long trail through many battlefields and four years of blood. The fighting job was done, and that night in Mons there was never silence for the sound of their singing and cheering.

But they had still a way to go to the journey's end of victory, and on a mild wet morning in December last I saw the Canadians with their English and Scottish comrades march over a bridge across the Rhine with their guns and transports and the old cookers with their trailing smoke behind.

War Memories a Fantastic Dream.

Now 3,000 of them were in this ship, homeward bound, and as we warped away from the quayside and the music of the band on the landing stage playing some gay march tune was driven gustily down the wind, and the cheers of the men roared along the lower decks, the days of war passed from them, and all their memories of the war became no more than a fantastic dream out of which they were awakened.

I stood next to a Canadian Sergeant Major and said:

"You'll never see the Ypres salient again."

He answered gravely:

"And I never want to! All that's finished, thank God, and if there's any luck in the world it will never hapepn again. I've seen the last of France and the last of Belgium, but there's many of my pals who lie there."

He was silent for a minute, and then he added:

"Well, we did the job all right, and that's the chief thing that matters."

I had many talks with these Canadians as all day long they swarmed on the decks or in the long alleys below deck where they had crowded quarters but elbow room enough for card games and talk. They talked all the time in groups hour after hour, but not much about their experiences in the war, as far as I could hear. They looked forward rather than back, and were more interested in what they would do when they reached Winnipeg or Toronto or some farmstead in Nova Scotia than what happened by Hellfire Corner along the Menin Road or on Bellevue Spur at Passchendaele.

Their voices passed up and down outside my cabin window, and now and then I heard the speech of French Canadians and the Scottish burr of the Nova Scotians. Sometimes they discussed some frightful memory of the wan with grim realism and a perfect imitation of whiz-bangs, followed by a gust of laughter, but that was by the younger men who had been the shortest time in France. The veterans would have little of that kind of talk.

In the evenings, before lights out had sounded, they sang songs in the darkness of the lower decks, and always one song was their favorite, and they never tired of it as day after day the Carmania with 4,000 souls aboard drove steadily across the Atlantic, that gray, lonely sea where there was never a craft in sight until we sighted the snow-capped slopes of Novia Scotia. Their song was "The Long, Long Trail," which I heard first sung by a Canadian officer in an old inn of Flanders on the way to Ypres before he went further and was killed. Something in the refrain of it had got inside the hearts of these men and expressed their sentiment most strongly. They had been on a long trail themselves and were getting to the end of it—home.

On the voyage they were good fellows, though discipline was slack for the men homeward bound and a good deal of latitude had to be given them in the way of smoking below decks and other things. But the Carmania was a "dry" ship, and there was no trouble. I noticed that as we neared Halifax excitement took possession of them. Even the officers let go a little, and their laughter rang out more loudly and they ran races up and down the slippery decks, while on the lower decks the men made slides where the snow and water had frozen hard.

Then we drew close to Nova Scotia, and the men crowded in the bows until we steamed into the harbor of Halifax, where the town rises steeply up a hillside to the citadel high above the docks. A dozen small tugs nosed against the side of the Carmania and slued her round, and cheers greeted them. Sirens hooted a welcome home in Morse code, and the cheers rang out again. Some young Canadian officers near me shouted out, "Good old Halifax!" and one of them laughed and said: "I never thougrt I should see it again. It's good to be back with all one's limbs!" He hugged himself at his consciousness of life after passing through places where it was touch and go with death. "Darned lucky," said one of the Canadian Sergeants, "and I'll be glad to see my wife and kids." It was the thought of all these men—their enormous luck in having got through safe at last and home at last.

Joyous Welcome Home.

It was a good welcome home for them. A band played them into the the quayside and there was waving of hands from the people lining the wharves, who threw up apples and newspapers as soon as the Carmania was alongside. "How are things?" shouted the soldiers from the lower decks high and sheer above the gangways, and the answer came back from pretty girls under fire of many eyes: "Canada's all right and glad to see you back."

The gangway was at a steep angle to the quayside, but the men went down it at a run, with the old packs they had carried along many a road twixt Poperinghe and Cambrai, and they shouted as they touched Canadian soil again. On the quayside were long sheds with beds and bathhouses and recreation rooms for the men, who had to wait a night before going to every part of the old Dominion, and ladies of Halifax were there until midnight serving them with tea and coffee and refreshments, so that however cold the weather there should be no coldness in the homecoming of these soldiers who had fought through the long black years of war with a courage that will never be forgotten in history.

The Carmania was lonely without them as she turned toward New York, and the decks were silent the next night as I paced up and down them looking out on the Atlantic, all silvered by moonlight and strangely calm for this time of year. Down below one of the ship's officers was telling how the Carmania fought the Cap Trafalgar off the Island of Trinidad on Sept. 14, 1914, a duel between two liners armed as cruisers, which lasted an hour and forty minutes, until both ships were on fire and the Carmania's rigging, masts, derricks, and ventilators had been raked by shellfire, and a shell had passed straight through the cabin under the forebridge, and she had 304 holes from 79 projectiles before the enemy cruiser capsized to starboard and went down bow first with her colors flying.

The gallant ship Carmania shows no trace of war now, but the story of her fight reminded all aboard of the days when no liner put out from our ports for the transport of troops without the menace of mines and submarines every knot she made, yet by the unfailing courage of our navy and mercantile marine brought all these Canadians and vast numbers of American comrades in a never-ending traffic.

Those black days have gone, and the moonlight of these nights shines down upon peaceful waters as when the other day 3,000 Canadians went home again, and sang "The Long, Long Trail" before they left the ship.

BRITISH SEE NO MENACE IN THE GERMAN ARMY

Prediction Made That French Will Be Converted to Anglo-American Armistice Views.

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. [illegible].—Serious as undoubtedly are the differences of opinion which have arisen in regard to the renewal of the armistice and the policy which is to determine its terms, I have good reason for stating that a satisfactory way out of them has already been found. The British attitude is one that greatly helps toward a solution. It may be described in a few words as follows:

The first and most urgent duty of the conference is to remove the menace of militarism from the world. It is essential to insure that the resurrection of militarism in Germany, with its concomitant conscription, is precluded. Can this be done by the armistice conditions imposed during the armistice?

The French view is that the armistice terms should be enlarged so as to secure conditions which will roughly correspond with the peace settlement.

As against this the argument put forward in British quarters is that the best course is to ascertain exactly the position of affairs in Germany so far as the military power is concerned and frame the conditions accordingly. It is predicted that by proceeding along this line an agreement can be reached between the French view and the American view.

British expert opinion, both military and naval, is that there is no immediate danger of a militaristic resurgence of Germany, despite the rather truculent speeches delivered at Weimar. If this attitude is adopted by the Supreme War Council, as it is today expected will be the case, the chief difficulty, which turns on the point whether it is legally possible to extend the original terms of the armistice, will be overcome.

ANTI-REDS IN PARIS SAID TO BACK WILSON

The following cablegram was received by the New York Jewish Daily Forward last night from its correspondent in Paris:

"The Russian Anti-Bolsheviki in Paris held a meeting over the invitation to the Bolshevist Government for a conference and finally split. A large majority indorsed Wilson's Russian policy.

"The conservatives, among whom there are some prominent Social Revolutionists, left the meeting in protest against any conferences with the Bolsheviki.

"The Esthonian delegation in Paris decided to participate in the Prinkipo meeting. They say the Bolsheviki are criminals. But so are the Germans, and, if peace with Germany is possible, why not also with the Bolsheviki?

"Several thousand Russian workmen and soldiers now in Paris sent an address to President Wilson, thanking him for his attitude on the Russian question, and they received from him a warm answer."

AIMED TO CRIPPLE FRANCE.

Documentary Proof in Paris of Germany's Industrial Designs.

PARIS, Feb. 1[illegible], (Associated Press.)—The report prepared in 1916 by German Main Headquarters to show how Germany would benefit from the destruction of certain industries in France contained 482 pages, according to the statement made to the Supreme War Council at its meeting Monday afternoon by Louis Klotz, the French Minister of Finance. Material for the report was collected by 200 experts who were released from military duties for the purpose.

A full review is made of every French industry including spinning, dyeing, pottery, chemicals, sugar, brewing, mining, leather, milling, clothing, and rope making. The report says that all these industries "offer excellent openings for German traders in spite of a somewhat hostile feeling."

As the French metal industry in the occupied regions had been "suppressed" and was without supplies of raw material, which the occupied regions could not produce, the report says that it was possible for German traders "to substitute yourselves in this new market."

Regarding the French sugar industry, the German Headquarters pamphlet says:

"Business relations with Germany are sure to continue because the French sugar industry cannot do without German beet seed without damaging itself, and it must also buy large quantities of German coal, the French coal mines having suffered severely."

In its inventory of the ruin caused in the weaving plants of Northern France, the report says:

"Considerable quantities of raw material, manufactured goods, thread on bobbins and warps have been sent to Germany. In Sedan all the plants have been destroyed. The machinery has been taken away and the buildings lie open to the winds like scrap iron. There is an enormously important opening there for German constructors."

KING GEORGE PLEADS FOR SOCIAL PEACE

Urges Parliament to Spare No Effort in Healing Causes of Existing Unrest.

WANTS POVERTY ABOLISHED

And Hopes for Increasing Co-operation Between Great Britain and the United States.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—King George in opening the new Parliament today, after alluding briefly to events since the dissolution of the last Parliament just after the armistice, urged quick and decisive action on reconstruction measures and asked Parliament "to spare no effort in healing the causes of the existing unrest." He enumerated some of the measures proposed to ameliorate prevailing and prewar conditions.

Referring to the visit to England of President Wilson the King said that the enthusiastic welcome accorded the President was proof of the good-will which all sections of the people felt toward the great republic of the west and "an earnest of the increasing understanding with which, I trust, they will act together in the future."

The full text of the speech follows:

"My Lords and Gentlemen: The dissolution of the last Parliament followed almost immediately upon the collapse of Germany under the ceaseless blows of the allied armies. Since that date the terms of the armistice, which has been more than once renewed, have been perseveringly enforced. The enemy forces have retired behind the Rhine and have surrendered much of their armament. The allied armies have occupied bridgeheads across that river, thus laying open roads into Germany should she attempt to renew the war.

"During the same period the might of the German navy has been shattered by the surrender of the enemy's submarines and the internment of his main fleet in my ports.

"These great results, which give practical securities that the struggle between German tyranny and European freedom is at an end and that a new era has dawned, have been achieved by the vigilance, discipline, and efficiency of the British and allied fleets and by the courage, endurance, and determination of my armies and the armies of the many nations fighting with them. Among the resolutions to be submitted to you will be one asking you to give solemn expression to the gratitude of my people for the achievements and sacrifices of those who suffered for the country's cause by land and sea and in the air.

"In order to reap the full fruits of victory and safeguard the peace of the world an adequate army must be maintained in the field, and proposals which will be necessary to secure the forces required will be submitted to you in due course.

Peace Conference Harmonious.

"For the last month a conference of my plenipotentiaries and of representatives of all the allied powers has been assembled in Paris to deliberate upon the terms of a just and lasting peace. Their discussions have been marked by the utmost cordiality and good-will, and by no disagreement. They have made good progress with the examination of numerous varied problems which will require settlement in the terms of peace, and I trust that before this session is far advanced the preliminaries of peace will be signed.

"I rejoice particularly that the powers assembled in the conference have agreed to accept the principle of a League of Nations, for it is by progress along that road that I see the only hope of saving mankind from a recurrence of the scourge of war.

"I took an early opportunity to visit France and to convey to the President of the republic the heartfelt enthusiasm with which my people acclaimed the final liberation of her territories and the vindication of the national unity of our faithful friend and ally. I was deeply moved by the demonstration of cordial affection which I received during my visit.

"It has also given me great pleasure to receive in this country the President of the United States of America. The enthusiastic welcome accorded him is proof of the good will which all sections of my people feel toward the great republic of the West and an earnest of the increasing understanding with which I trust they will act together in the future.

"For the last few months the Imperial War Cabinet has been in continuous session, and my councils in regard to the war and external affairs have been both strengthened and enlightened by the presence of the leading Ministers of my self-governing dominions and representatives of my Indian Empire. The inspiring sacrifice and invaluable service which have been rendered by the peoples of my dominions and of India during the war have won for them an important place in the councils of the world, and it has been a source of especial satisfaction to me that their title to representation has been recognized by the Paris Conference.

"I trust that the reports of the committees which are now inquiring into matters connected with the Indian constitutional report will be received in time to enable a bill on the subject to be presented in the course of this session.

"The position of Ireland causes me great anxiety, but I earnestly hope that conditions may soon sufficiently improve to make it possible to provide a durable settlement of this difficult problem.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons, you will be asked to make further provision for meeting the permanent charges resulting from the war and new expenditures required for the purpose of reconstruction.

For a Better Social Order.

"My Lords and Gentlemen: The aspirations for a better social order which have been quickened in the hearts of my people by the experience of the war must be encouraged by prompt and comprehensive action. Before the war poverty, unemployment, inadequate housing and many remediable ills existed in our land, and these ills were aggravated by disunion. But since the outbreak of the war every party and every class have worked for and fought together for a great ideal. In pursuit of this common aim they have shown a spirit of unity and self-sacrifice which exalted the nation and has enabled it to play its full part in the winning of the victory.

"The ravages of war and the wastages of war have not yet, however, been repaired. If we are to repair these losses and rebuild a better Britain we must continue to manifest the same spirit. We must stop at no sacrifice of interest or prejudice to stamp out unmerited poverty, to diminish unemployment and mitigate its sufferings, to provide decent homes, to improve the nation's health, and to raise the standard of well-being throughout the community.

"We shall not achieve this end by undue tenderness toward acknowledged abuses, and it must necessarily be retarded by violence or even by disturbance. We shall succeed only by patience and untiring resolution in carrying through the legislation and administrative action which are required. It is that resolute action which I now ask you to support.

"A large number of measures affecting the social and economic well-being of the nation await your consideration, and it is of the utmost importance that their provisions should be examined and, if possible, agreed upon and carried into effect with all expedition. With this object in view my Government will invite the consideration of the House of Commons to certain proposals for the simplification of the procedure of that House which, it is hoped, will enable delays to be avoided and will give its members increasing opportunity of taking effective part in the work of legislation.

"You will be asked to approve a bill for the creation of a new Ministry to deal with public health with a view to the establishment throughout the land of a scientific and enlightened health organization to combat disease and conserve the vigor of the race. There will also be a bill to establish a Ministry of Ways and Communications with a view to increasing and developing the industrial and agricultural resources of the country by improved means of transport.

"You will be asked to consider measures for effecting a speedy increase on a large scale in the housing accommodations of the country for the fulfillment of pledges given to trade unions for the prevention of unfair competition by the sale of imported goods below their selling price in the country of their origin, and for increasing the industrial and agricultural output without which considerable and permanent betterment in the national condition cannot be effected.

"Proposals will also be laid before you for encouraging settlement on the land, particularly by those who have been in the fighting forces of the Crown; for providing suitable men with the necessary agricultural training and for enabling them to stock and equip their hodings, and for the reclamation of land and the promotion of a comprehensive scheme for afforestation.

"Finally, I commend to your earnest consideration the industrial problems of the time. That the gifts of leisure and prosperity may be more generally shared throughout the community is my ardent desire. It is your duty, while firmly maintaining security for property and person, to spare no effort in healing the causes of existing unrest, and I earnestly appeal to you to do all that in you lies to revive and foster a happier and more harmonious spirit in our national and industrial life.

"I pray that Almighty God may vouchsafe His blessing on your labors."

think they exercised wise discretion in that respect. It would be a misfortune if discussions which have taken place there were, before they were concluded, referred to the Parliaments of the various countries who are represented at the conference. So far we have made progress which is equal to and even beyond the most sanguine expectations in approaching agreement upon most of these questions, and I should deprecate very strongly anything in the nature or sort of separate debates in the Parliamentr of these countries upon questions which can best be discussed by representatives of those countries together.

"There is this difference between this conference and all other conferences the world has ever seen, the conference of Frankfort in 1871, the Berlin conference in 1878, and the Portsmouth conference. They practically all dealt with differences of opinion between two countries. Here at this conference you are settling questions which involve every continent in the world. It is therefore a very difficult task to adjust all the various claims which are put forward and which will have to be most carefully considered. The whole energy of the delegates of the great powers has been devoted to trying not merely to effect a durable settlement, but to effect it at the earliest possible moment, because we all realize that not only is peace important, but speedy peace, and that until we establish peace among the nations there will always be a feeling of unrest throughout the world and industry will not settle down to its normal task.

After Those Responsible for War.

"Only two questions have been asked about the Peace Conference, one about the punishment of those responsible for the war and the other about making Germany pay. [Cheers.] As to the first an able commission has been appointed representing all the great powers to consider the responsibility not only of an individual but of a good many individuals, and not merely responsibility for war but responsibility for the laws of war. [Cheers.] We hope to get their report upon the whole question.

"With regard to the indemnity which is to be exacted from enemy countries, that also has been referred to a singularly able commission. Upon this commission the British Empire is represented by the Prime Minister of Australia, [Hear! Hear!] by Lord Cunliffe, and Lord Summer. They have been sitting every day. I saw Mr. Hughes just before I left. He told me they had appointed three subcommittees to investigate different branches of the question. So far from this being lost sight of, it was the first committee appointed. It proceeded immediately to work, and we shall act upon its report.

"A third question was asked, whether the treaty of peace will be placed on the table of the House before ratification. I believe that is the ordinary course. Of course, subject to ratification of the treaty, the representatives of this country will follow the same course as the representatives of every other country and sign the treaty at the Peace Conference. The treaty will undoubtedly be laid upon the table of the House for ratification. If the House of Commons chooses to repudiate the treaty, the House of Commons is all powerful.

"The League of Nations has made much progress. There was a general feeling in favor of it, especially among the small nations. I think the House will feel that it is an experiment which will be full of hope for the future, and it will be tried with the full assent of all the nations great and small.

"And now I come to the question of labor unrest. I cannot conceive of any question which is more important to the House than this question. If this unrest continues the consequences will be grave. There is no doubt of the unrest. It is not so easy to define the causes of it. Some causes are legitimate and some are not. [Hear! Hear!] Let us consider those which are legitimate. In some respects the economic conditions of the country during the war have been better than during our lifetime.

"There has been no unemployment during the war. Still there are special war conditions which have conduced to unrest—the strain of the last four and one-half years. [Hear! Hear!] That is why I respond; to appeal to preserve our sense of proportion. Men have been working four and one-half years amidst tense excitement with all kinds of anxieties, working time and overtime, and four and one-half years of that is sufficient to produce a condition of things when men are not in their ordinary frame of mind. [Hear! Hear!] Let us begin by remembering that and making allowances for it.

"There is genuine fear of unemployment. Men have got that fear now. The better educated the working classes have become the deeper and stronger is their resentment of social conditions, many of them involving human degradation. They protest against them. Then there is bad housing and overcrowding in many districts that has been aggravated during the war.

"Then there is no doubt at all that even restrictions on the people's luxuries and amusements have had their effect. All these are causes which have contributed to the unrest.

"In so far as there are legitimate causes of unrest it is the business of the Government to do their best to remove them so as to give no justification for any unrest, so as not to give material to those who are exploiting the unrest.

"In individual cases we are dealing with the unrest. Much has already been done. In trades affecting three millions of workers agreements have already been arrived at with regard to hours of labor, and in trades affecting two millions negotiations are going on.

"But there will be a good deal to be said for a more general investigation into the whole course of industrial unrest. The Government would be glad to agree upon any method of investigations which would be satisfactory to employed and employer and to the community at large.

"My right honorable friend, the Member for Derby, [J. H. Thomas,] made a very broad speech on Sunday. He said he did not altogether trust Parliament to carry out its pledges of social reform.

"I cannot imagine a graver indictment against any Government in any Parliament if that were true. Still, the Government mean to do their best, and I am confident that Parliament will support them. [Hear! Hear!] Bills will be introduced, and introduced soon, and we propose to submit to the House of Commons certain regulations for the improvement of procedure.

"With regard to reform of the present procedure of the House of Commons, I have always considered that it is designed to prevent rather than promote legislation. I am certain that our present method of having 600 men scrutinizing every line and every word of a measure for weeks in the presence of the press is a fatal method of transacting business. I am perfectly certain that Magna Charta would never have been carried if all the Barons had adopted the procedure of the House of Commons. [Laughter.]

Question of Unemployment.

"Now I come to the question of unemployment. I do not believe that there is any fear of unemployment if we had rationing. But if there is any attempt to reproduce the conditions which we have witnessed in Russia, where there is a deficiency of profitable employment and of food, that would, indeed, be fatal to employment in this country.

"The burden of the war bears heavily upon all classes and upon all industries, and that has got to be borne in mind when you are trying to start the wheels of industry again in this country. I wish it were borne in mind when demands are put forward by certain sections of the community.

"There is plenty of material for employment if all classes act with restraint and wisely. There is no danger of unemployment if certain essential conditions are adhered to. The first of all is that confidence must be given to those who are responsible for starting the wheels of industry. [Cheers.]

Difficult to Make Progress.

"It is with difficulty that we can get a move on. There is a great hanging back, because men do not quite know what is going to happen if the enterprise which they start is going to be interrupted by some social upheaval. They would rather not start it.

"They know perfectly well that if they begin and something happens to be caught halfway, it would be ruin. [Cheers.] Confidence is, therefore essential for setting the wheels of industry and commerce going. Disturbances create unemployment, aggravate unemployment, perpetuate unemployment.

"What is the second possible cause of unemployment? If the cost of production in this country becomes so high that it either reduces the purchasing capacity of the community at home or puts us out of the markets of the world [cheers]—both would happen if the cost of production was high—that means disastrous unemployment. This is why one individual trade cannot be considered without reference to the rest. [Cheers.]

"I should like all sections of the community to bear in mind at the present moment that a great increase in the cost of some essential ingredient, like coal or transport, might easily destroy our chance of restoring our exports.

"We are a great exporting country. I believe we exported before the war something like one thousand million pounds worth of goods of all sorts, which was a gigantic trade. It used to be put that half of that was wages.

"Most of that business was conducted on a narrow margin. It was not a big margin. A little change this way or that would give the trade to some one else. Four shillings a ton on coal and a shilling added for some other ingredient, whether it is shipping or transport, might deprive us of hundreds of millions of trade in all parts of the world. [Cheers.]

"What does that mean to employment? It means the throwing of hundreds of thousands of men out of work. I will not say that it might not run to millions. Would the miners gain by that in the end? It is a great mistake to imagine that there is an inexhaustible reservoir of profit that you can dip into it any moment without hurting any trade or business.

"There is no better illustration than the railways. At the beginning of the war the railways of this country were making a profit of £50,000,000, that produced under 4 per cent.

"Well that is not very extravagant return for capital. A good deal of it is invested by people who have nothing else. They are small people. It is not invested in big sums as a rule. What has happened since the war owing to increases in one thing and another, wage, curtailment of the hours of labor, increased cost of material—these have added £90,000,000 to the cost of running the railways.

"Where is the fund of profit to draw upon? There it is all gone. Who is to make it up? The first-class passenger would not produce much if you doubled or trebled his fare. You have to get it from the consumer in some way or other, your third-class passenger, your goods, your food—that is thme only way to do it.

"I want every section of the community, when it puts forward demands, to bear these essential facts in mind—that all these demands are passed on to some one else and that there is a stage where if you could pass them on they will crowd on the top of some poor industry that can hardly march now, it is so crushed. That means unemployment for some one.

"There is a feeling that one way of providing employment is by reducing the hours of labor so that there will be enough work to go round at same wages. Reduce the hours of labor to what is fair, profitable, and possible, but to reduce the hours of labor merely in order to create employment, paying exactly the same wage, is one way to make unemployment in the whole country. [Cheers and cries of "Boo!" from the Labor benches.]

"I should have thought that stood to reason. It is so elementary. It increases the cost of a particular commodity and that commodity is an ingredient in something else. If you put up the price you diminish the purchasing capacity, and if you diminish the purchasing capacity you diminish employment. And not only that, for, as I have pointed out, you destroy overseas trade, [cheers] upon which this country depends more than any other country in the world. I despair if the working classes of the country do not recognize that elementary and fundamental principle, but I am sure that they do. If in the end you increase the cost of everything, you will only do what has happened in Russia, where the workmen seem to be getting sumptuous wages. They run up to most splendid figures.

"What is the good of these inflated wages, puffed up wages which are all paper? As far as the working classes are concerned, they are being cheated at every step and they are beginning to discover it.

"There are legitimate ways by which the Government can assist employment. Take the housing problem. My right honorable friend, Mr. Adamson, ventured to say that no single step had been taken. He is quite misinformed. As a matter of fact the Minister of Supplies has already taken most gigantic steps to prepare for a housing program. They have ordered material on a very considerable scale, which will provide employment—brick and windows, and doors and all the material which is essential for the building of houses. That is one method.

"There is the development of ways and communications of this country which will open up the resources of the country. That provides legitimate employment and enriches the country. At the same time there are projects like afforestation and settlement of the land which will provide the healthiest means of employment any State can find for its people.

"But there are illegitimate means and causes of this unrest. A sedulous attempt has been made for years to undermine confidence in trade union leaders. It has produced lack of discipline which is even beyond the control of the trade union, which has almost made collective bargaining impossible, and I cannot conceive anything more fatal to the industrial life of this country that that. [Hear, hear.]

"A trade union leader acquires in the course of years, like any one else, knowledge and experience in the conduct of his business. Knowledge and experience give responsibility. The moment they exercise that responsibility they are attacked, their influence is undermined. Distrust and suspicion are sown about them, and the result is that there is chaos where there ought to be confidence, and it is almost impossible to do business in some trades.

"Why is this done? It is done undoubtedly by some for the very reason that anarchy is the only thing that can follow, and that is what they are after. Anarchy is their aim, anarchy is their purpose.

"Some of these men are seeking to destroy not merely trade unionism but the State. There are several trades upon the continuous work of which success in the war was dependent. If they had suspended their activities for a month it might—I won't say it would—have produced disaster or defeat, but it would have seriously impaired our chances of success.

"The leaders of these trades knew that they behaved with a patriotic restraint which does them honor. But now that the war is over, the sense of power remains with those trades, but the peril which created restraint is for the moment gone, and there are men in those trades who are undoubtedly urging their leaders to use the power which they have got to hold up the community.

"Every complaint which is put forward by any body of workmen the Government are bound to examine, and they will examine, fairly and carefully with a view to removing any legitimate grievance and to redressing any unfairness or any inequality. But every demand which is pressed forward with the view not to obtaining fair conditions but with the ulterior motive of holding up the community, to overthrow existing order, and to destroy the Government, relying not upon the justice of their claim but upon the brute force which is behind it, [Hear! Hear!] then I say, on behalf of the Government and in all solemnity, we are determined to fight Prussianism in the industrial world [cheers] exactly as we fought it on the Continent of Europe with the whole might of the nation." [Cheers.]

A Labor Member—Can you fight it in England?

Lloyd George, continuing:

"If anybody uses force to drive an unfair bargain with the community, [A Labor member: "What about Carson and the Lord Chancellor?"] then we are bound to fight it with the whole weight of the nation, or we cease to be a Government. The first thing we have to do is to get peace.

"The disturbances are interfering with the making of peace. Every morning before I went to the Peace Conference I had messages from London about a strike here, and when I returned in the evening, of another strike, and trade union leaders thrown over and bargains repudiated, and I don't mind saying I think it would be to the advantage of the Peace Conference if I had been able to remain there a few days.

"These disturbances are promoting the very evils which they are supposed to be intended to work against, to get rid of, and I really appeal to the men of all classes to consider seriously the effect of the demands which are made upon the community, upon the strength of the force behind them.

"I know the perils, I know the dangers, and I have reckoned carefully the cost, and I say deliberately that if the people of this country are prepared to face both peril and cost with the courage, endurance, and patience which they exhibited in the face of equally great menace, if all classes of the community are prepared to make the necessary sacrifices for the stability, security, and freedom of the industries upon which the future of this land and the happiness of its people really depend, I am prepared to say, with full knowledge of the peril, that no section of the community, however powerful it may be, can be or will be allowed to hold up the whole nation. [Prolonged cheers.]

"Claims will be examined and all legitimate effort made to redress grievances, but I appeal to the common sense of all sections of the people that the victory so largely won by the heroism and tenacity of this great nation in five years of sacrifice shall not be wantonly dissipated in a few weeks of frenzied strife." [Prolonged cheers.]

The Prime Minister resumed his seat after speaking for an hour.

Adamson Depicts Labor Crisis.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Previous to the address of Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons, William Adamson, leader of the Labor Party, spoke. He declared that the industrial situation was almost as menacing and dangerous as war itself. He said that the principal labor amendment to the reply to the address from the throne would relate to the causes of industrial unrest.

"I hope," he continued, "that no attempt will be made to disappoint the legitimate expectations of the working people. All sections of the people should understand that we have reached the stage when we have laid the cards on the table and when the working class will refuse longer to be treated as cogs in a machine for mere profit-making purposes."

Mr. Adamson said he regretted that no mention had been made in the King's speech concerning pensions, or of the disposal of Government shipyards, factories and other properties on which millions had been spent, or of Russia.

Mr. Adamson said he spoke for the party of Constitutional Laborites. Referring to a suggestion that the present unrest had been caused by a revolutionary group, he said his group would never encourage revolution or unconstitutional action. The revolutionary elements would exercise little influence unless there were genuine grievances which they could exploit. Unfortunately there were many grievances concerning wages and hours of employment, and fear of more unemployment as well as fear that the Government was encouraging monopolies which would make the cost of living impossible.

Mr. Adamson asked for statements regarding conscription and for the submission to Parliament of the final peace terms before they are ratified.

Answering the claim that the Labor Party was the principal opposition in the House, he said the Laborites were ready to support the Government in any acceptable proposal, but that they would do their utmost to prevent vested interests from "pressing down upon the brow of labor a crown of thorns and crucifying the worker upon a cross of gold."

Sir Donald MacLean, leader of the Non-Coalition Liberals, who followed Mr. Adamson, expressed regret at the absence of former Premier Asquith and said he hoped that the former Premier would soon return to the House.

Sir Donald asked for more publicity concerning the Peace Conference proceedings and for information about the progress of the plan for a Society of Nations. While an army must be maintained in the field, he said, there was distrust concerning the continuance of conscription.

FIGURES REFLECT BREST CONDITIONS

TOURS, France, Feb. 11, (Associated Press.)—An official report has been made of burials at Brest of American soldiers during the occupancy of that port by the American Expeditionary Forces. The figures include those men who died after being brought ashore at Brest from transports before October, the month in which influenza was at its height, and those who died in Brest among the sick and wounded brought from various hospitals on their way home.

The report shows burials prior to October to have been 1,577, and during October 1,566. Pontanezen Camp was not then open.

In November the burials numbered 93, and in December 52, of which 35 were at Pontanezen. In January, 69, of which 63 were at Pontanezen, while in February, up to date, there have been 8 burials, all at Pontanezen. This gives a total of 3,365.

Daily admissions to the hospital during December amounted to one in every thousand. The sick during the first week in January numbered 1.35 per cent. The sick reported during the remainder of January numbered 2.3 per cent.

The average strength of the troops during December was 33,292 and during February 57,698.

AUSTRIANS PRAISE MILES.

Note His Conscientiousness in Delimiting Boundaries of Carinthia.

VIENNA, Feb. 11, (via Basle.)—The American commission under Lieut. Col. Miles, which has been delimiting the boundaries of Carinthia under the armistice between German-Austria on one side and Carinthia and the Jugoslavs on the other, has returned to Vienna from a visit to the disputed territories to submit a report to Professor Coolidge, head of the American economic and political mission to the former Austrian Empire.

He ridiculed Dr. Dernburg's assertions.

As a consequence of the controversy the House showed excitement for the first time since the opening of the Assembly.

Herr Labe, Majority Socialist; Herr von Prager, Democrat; Herr Delbrück, Conservative; Herr Heim, Centrist, and others spoke in favor of the Constitution.

Fought Use of Word "Empire."

The Independents at first raised objection to the frequent use of the word "empire" in the document, and requested the substitution of "republic" throughout the draft offered for acceptance. Much time was consumed in this procedure, and for a while it looked as if the old obstructionist tactics were being employed.

Centrist and Conservative speakers declared that the Provisional Constitution was open to various objections more or less technical, but that they were willing to accept it; as Herr Delbrück said, for the sake of unity and the urgent need of gettting an established Government in working shape for its effect on Germany's enemies.

Dr. Cohn acted as spokesman for the independents in demanding that "republic" be substituted in some dozen places for "empire." He spoke so long that the House began to lag in its attention until with waving arms he launched a veiled threat against the entire right of the House as follows:

"If the Government does not in its Provisional Constitution make a clean break with the old order of things, nobody in Germany or outside will believe that the revolution has accomplished anything."

Dr. Cohn concluded with an appeal for the construction of the Constitution in such a manner of wording as to leave no possible doubt in any mind that the monarchy was banished forever. Unless this were done, he added, "revolution, which is nourished by the lack of raw materials, will live again." He concluded by warning his hearers to "remember the past and make a new Government and not to make the mistakes of the old."

Hope for Peace and Bread.

Herr Gröber, Centrist, calmed slightly the troubled waters of the assembly by appealing for the Provisional Constitution as the basis for a solid Government which would spell peace and bread for Germany.

The Independents sat in sullen silence as clause after clause and paragraph after paragraph were proposed for a final vote, and the remainder of the House rose.

They also heckled the other members of the House by disputing over one word in the clause concerning the election of a President. The clause depended on the exact meaning of an adjective, which they insisted did not make the meaning clear and possibly would prove dangerous for the future. After considerable debate this matter was straightened out and the Provisional Constitution was adopted.

BASLE, Feb. 11.—The annual salary of the President of the German Republic will be limited to 1,000,000 marks, according to a dispatch from Berlin. The President will reside in Berlin. He will select his executives from all parties.

Scheidemann for Chancellor.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 11.—According to a dispatch from Weimar, an agreement has been reached by the German National Assembly on the composition of the new ministry, which will consist of fourteen members.

Philipp Scheidemann has been selected as Chancellor, Dr. August Müller, Minister of Economics; Herr Bauer, Minister of Labor, and Herr Landsberg, Minister of National Defense and Justice.

Another portfolio will go to Dr. Eduard David, who resignes the Presidency of the National Assembly, which position will be taken over by Konstantin Fehrenbach.

The Socialists have seven seats in this Cabinet, the Democrats have three, and the Centrists have three, including Mathias Erzberger, who will hold the post of Minister without portfolio. Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, anti-Socialist, will be Foreign Minister.

Allies Order the Germans and Poles to Stop Fighting

LONDON, Feb. 11, (Havas.)—The allied Governments have ordered the Poles and the Germans to cease hostilities, according to newspaper reports received here today from Berlin by way of Copenhagen.

GERMANY TO RAISE NEW DRAFT ARMY

Hindenburg Wants 200,000 for Eastern Border—Full Size of Force Not Determined.

BERLIN, Feb. 9 (Associated Press.)—Conscription of various classes of men, up to 35 years of age, will soon be decreed, according to information given to the correspondent today.

Authority in this direction, it is expected, will be conferred on the Government by the National Assembly. It is understood that Gustav Noske, who is mentioned for the post of Minister of National Defense, will proceed forthwith to adopt the measures needed to reestablish the army and put it on an effective footing.

The recruiting of volunteers, which has been proceeding in haphazard fashion during the last few weeks and which has been stimulated by the Spartacide riots and is chiefly financed from private sources, has failed, according to the information, to achieve practical results. The contemplated emergency action has been hastened by the increasing menace of Poland and more urgent need of forestalling an anticipated Bolshevist invasion.

The chaos at present prevailing in Germany's military organization, due to demobilizing and disorganization of all authority and discipline, which is being accentuated by the domineering rule of the revolutionary soldiers' councils, has brought the nation to a point, it is stated, where it is now virtually incapable of hastily mobilizing an equipped force of even the modest dimensions required for such an apparently small task as defending the German-Polish frontier.

JAPAN THREATENS TO KEEP ISLANDS

sentatives of the other associated powers.

According to official diplomatic information reaching here, Japan virtually has threatened war if China makes public secret treaties between the two countries and fails to carry out an agreement to make Japan the successor of Germany in rights, property, and concessions held by Germany at the outbreak of the European war.

The reports received here say the threats against China were conveyed to the Chinese Foreign Minister by the Japanese Minister in Peking in thinly veiled terms. The Japanese Minister is said to have reminded him that Japan had an army of more than a million men idle at home, fully equipped and with arms and munitions enough to conduct a long war, and to have pointed out that Japan had more than half a million tons of shipping, with the intimatiton that this would be ready on short notice for active work. He also is said to have referred pointedly to large sums of money owed to Japan by China and to the fact that China had been unable to live up to her financial agreements.

When the Chinese peace delegates arrived in Paris, the information now available discloses, they reported that their copies of the secret treaties were stolen from their baggage while they were passing through Japan, and consequently they were unable to carry out their purpose of making them public at the conference. The delegates, however, made verbal reports of the substance of these treaties to some of the peace delegates of the other countries. This led the Japanese authorities to demand of China that she disavow this action on the part of her delegates and that she keep secret the treaties.

Some of the secret treaties have not yet been ratified by the Chinese Government, although Japan has ratified them, and, according to today's advices, the Japanese Government is bringing every pressure to bear on China to ratify them before anything can be done at Paris. The most important of the treaties as yet unratified by China is the agreement of Sept. 24, 1918, which grants Shantung to Japan and admits Japan as the successor to Germany's rights, concessions, and properties in the Shantung district. This includes railways, mines and other valuable property and the rights to them for a long term of years. According to the Chinese claim, Japan already has possession under treaties and agreements of two-fifths of the iron ore deposits of the entire Chinese Republic, and is seeking possession of the other three-fifths.

Although they so far have been able to resist the Japanese demands, the Chinese officials now say that the pressure is becoming unbearable. The Chinese President has approved by cable the action of the Chinese delegates in Paris in announcing their willingness to make public the treaties in spite of Japanese opposition.

China has asked, depending upon the impression made upon the accredited delegates from other countries, that the Peace Conference see the twenty-one demands made upon China by Japan in 1915 be revoked and that the Chinese Republic be removed definitely from the influence of Japan. The complete independence of China is asked under the protection of the League of Nations.

China is relying on the Peace Conference, and is seeking support from the United States and Great Britain. Advices from the Orient through diplomatic channels, however, say American Minister Reinsch at Peking, seeking to reassure the Chinese Foreign Minister with statements of the friendship of the United States Government, was told frankly that the Foreign Minister did not see how at this time the United States or Great Britain could divert their attention to the Orient when the European situation demanded so much attention.

The account of Minister Reinsch's visit to the Foreign Office says he reaffirmed the friendship of the United States for China and desired to give active support in her desire for independence. He learned, however, that the Japanese Minister in Tokio reached the Foreign Minister a few minutes before him and conveyed the intimations of what would happen if Japans' demands were not met.

Officials of the State Department declined to make any formal comment today on the situation. The impression was given that the whole matter was being handled in Paris.

EISNER SAYS PLAGUE SWEPT GERMAN CAMPS

And Army Heads Hoped to Spread It Among Allies by Exchanging Prisoners.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Feb. 11.—On the last day of the Socialist Congress here Kurt Eisner, the Bavarian Premier, speaking in support of the liberation of the German prisoners still held by the Allies, caused a sensation by revealing the fact that in the last year of the war the Siberian plague broke out in prisoners' camps in Germany.

The German military authorities, he said, being unable to master the epidemic, which had been spread by Russian prisoners from Siberia, took the most rigid measures to keep it secret, calculating that the exchange of prisoners would carry the infection also into Entente countries.

Later, when the influenza appeared in Spain, they camouflaged the plague that was raging in the German camps as Spanish grippe.

After the triumph of the revolution in Munich, Eisner visited the Bavarian prison camps and found the dead and dying lying side by side in the dormitories with their still healthy comrades. Rows of coffins blocked the corridors. There was no attempt at isolation.

Eisner said that after this experience he had not the courage to protest against the retention of German prisoners by the Allies, but merely appealed humbly to their sense of humanity and justice.

Ideas for Adoption

At first, advertising was used chiefly to exploit frauds or near frauds. The Louisiana Lottery, for example, or some villainous nostrum that "cured" cancer or consumption, cost 2c per bottle to make and 60c to sell.

Next came the advertising of sound but commonplace merchandise like soap, shoes, oranges and inner tubes.

But what of the future?

Advertising conveys a message from one to many.

What are the limits as to the nature of these messages?

Just before the armistice was signed, an advertising agency received a $250,000 order for a campaign in favor of "UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER."

A firm in the Middle West are just now exploiting their own method for solving the labor question.

Where do you limit the advertising of the future?

Why cannot ideas be advertised for adoption as well as goods or services?

BUTTER CAKES ARE BACK

And there's hardly a soul in town who doesn't know exactly where to go to get them.

For years butter cakes have been a CHILDS specialty. The ban on wheat automatically withdrew them from our menu. Now they're back and receiving an enthusiastic welcome.

Raised until light-as-a-feather and baked on a quick griddle, they come to you with brown, crispy crusts and delicate, fluffy inside—the best hot bread you ever tasted.

Served HOT so they immediately melt and absorb the rich, golden butter served with them.

An order of CHILDS famous butter cakes, right-off-the-griddle, and a cup of CHILDS coffee, will please the palate "tired of everything else."

NEW SPARTACIDE REVOLT IN SIGHT

Berlin Government Fears a Third Red Uprising Within a Few Weeks.

EICHHORN IS ACTIVE AGAIN

Sheltered by Brunswick's President, He Plans to Sit in National Assembly.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, (via Copenhagen,) Feb. 11.—General Eichhorn, the former Police President, is a fugitive. The Spartacide chieftain is now in Brunswick, where the President of that comic opera republic, the old clothes mender Oerter, has placed the old Grand Ducal Palace at his disposition and has evidently decided to protect him against the Central German Government.

Such at any rate is the news published by the Zeitung am Mittag today, which adds that Eichhorn's formal acceptance of his mandate to the National Convention was dispatched from Brunswick, and that evidently he has the intention, relying upon his friends among the Independent Socialists, to claim his seat at the opportune moment.

It seems that Eichhorn never left Berlin for Denmark as was believed when it was discovered that he had written himself a passport for Copenhagen. All the time he must have been hiding in the capital and only left when he found that he had forfeited the confidence of his Spartacide friends.

The latter instituted an investigation to find out why the Spartacide revolution failed, and came to the conclusion that it was mainly due to Eichhorn's indecision on the one hand and his haste in preventing sufficient preparation on the other. Then, again, he had persuaded the Spartacides to desist from certain definite plans against the Government, and by entering peace negotiations had given Noske time to collect forces sufficiently strong to suppress the movement.

It is generally supposed that Eichhorn has found congenial spirits in Brunswick, where he is now aiding the preparation of a new attack on the Fatherland.

Berlin Spartacides Active.

Meanwhile the Berlin Spartacides have not gone to sleep, and, while Saturday's shooting affray may not have been planned by them and may even have been at cross-purposes with them, it is certain that they are preparing a new coup on a large scale than ever, for which purpose they have organized a so-called legal and illegal agitation. The legal agitation is confined to the press and public meetings, while the illegal measures are the preparation of a new armed revolt against existing conditions, the Spartacides believing that they will succeed this time, just as the Bolsheviki were able to overthrow the Kerrensky Government only on their second attempt.

At present they lack money, but this may be supplied by Russia. Their ranks are considerably thinned by the defeat of the last revolt, but they are certain that time is working in their favor, and that the ever-increasing idleness, whether enforced or otherwise, and the ever-increasing scarcity of food, must drive the masses into their arms.

"There will be no fortresses in the next revolt, like the police headquarters on various newspaper buildings. The next will be an open attack on the Government, wherever in the capital its representatives are encountered by the Spartacides," concludes the Zeitung's informant. But he adds that the Spartacides will probably find the Government roops prepared for any new method they may employ.

The Times correspondent is informed that the main reason why the Majority Socialists at Weimar are so anxious that the former Centrists, now the Christian People's Party, and the German Democrats shall share the responsibility is that the Government fears a third revolution within four or six weeks, the suppression of which will necessitate ruthless measures and in all probability fearful bloodshed.

This third revolution is feared much more than either the Polish or Russian danger, but all three might become acute simultaneously by accident or even co-operative design, for it is well known in Berlin that the Spartacides are secretly communicating with both the Poles and the Russian Bolsheviki.

The Spartacides, however, belittle the Polish and Russian danger, asserting that the Government is using both as a mask for preparations against a third revolution.

STORM A RUMMAGE SALE.

The sidewalk traffic on Fifth Avenue was congested yesterday afternoon in front of 723, when scores of women stormed the rummage sale that opened there in aid of the Lenox Hill Settlement. Society women acted as saleswomen and auctioneers, and clothes and objects of art were sold at a moderate price.

The organizers of the sale were taken by surprise at the rush of bargain hunters, and the articles, including some [illegible] wild Canadian geese, sold like hot cakes. Jewels, lamps, mandarin coats, suits, and hats were among the bargains offered.

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt was in charge of the clothing sale, and Mrs. Paul Dougherty was at the jewel table. Mrs. Henry Miller, Mrs. Samuel Auchincloss, Mrs. Wendell Blagden, Mrs. Thomas Frothingham, Mrs. Philip Weld, Mrs. George McMurtry, and Mrs. Isabel T. Pell were others who acted as saleswomen. Mrs. R. Penn Smith, Jr., headed the committee in charge of the sale, which will continue for four days.

TELLS SENATORS OF BOLSHEVIST TERROR

of the Soviets issued in September last by M. Petrovski, then the Bolshevist Commissary for Home Affairs. The order was dated Sept. 5, 1918, and read:

> To all Soviets—The murder of Volodarski and Uritski, the attempt on Lenine and the shooting of masses of our comrades in Finland, Ukraine, the Don, and Czechoslovakia, the continual discovery of conspiracies in our rear, open acknowledgement by the Right Social Revolutionary Party and other counter-revolutionary radicals of their part in these conspiracies, together with the insignificant extent of serious repressions and shooting of masses of White Guards and Bourgeoisie on the part of the Soviets, all these things show that notwithstanding frequent pronouncements urging mass terror against the Social Revolutionists, White Guards and Bourgeoisie no real terror exists.
> Such a situation should decidedly be stopped. An end should be put to weakness and softness. All Right Social revolutionists known to local Soviets should be immediately arrested. Numerous hostages should be taken from the Bourgeoisie and officer classes.
> At the slightest attempt to resist or the slightest movement among the White Guards, shootings of masses of hostages should be begun without fail. Initiative in this matter rests especially with the local Executive Committees.
> All branches of the Government must take measures to seek out and arrest persons hiding under false names and shoot without fail anybody connected with the work of the White Guards. All the above measures should be put immediately into execution, and indecisive action on the part of local Soviets must be reported to the People's Commissary for Home Affairs. Not the slightest hesitation or the slightest indecisiveness in using mass terror. PETROVSKI.

A few weeks ago, when Dr. Huntington was in Sweden on his way to the United States, he said that Petrovski, the signer of the massacre order, arrived in that country. He was accompanied by a woman and brought more than twenty trunks. These trunks contained, according to reliable information, Russian rubles to the value of $10,000,000, the money to be used for propaganda work in other European countries. The money, Dr. Huntington said, was that of the old monarchist régime.

Tells of Bombing Grand Dukes.

In answer to a question as to whether or not a report were true that several Russian Grand Dukes had been thrown into a well and then bombarded with hand grenades by Russian Red Guards, Dr. Huntington said that he understood the report was correct. He said that his information came from an American business man of standing who was in the town at the time of the slaughter. The bodies were afterward recovered.

Dr. Huntington also told of the investigation he made of the murder of two prominent Russians who were members of the old Kerensky Ministry. These men were ill and in prison and supposedly were transferred to a hospital. The fact was that they were murdered, and Dr. Huntington found their bodies side by side with those of many others in a Petrograd morgue.

Smuggled Letters Read.

The three letters which were smuggled out of Russia, and which were written between Sept. 16 and Oct. 1 last, were next read by Dr. Huntington. THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent knows who the writer of the letters is, and the person is of unquestioned standing. The name is withheld only for the purpose of safeguarding the writer from the vengeance of the Bolshevist Government. The letters are among the few authentic ones that have come out of Russia since the allied officials quit the country. The first, in part, reads:

> I am glad you are not here just now. Living conditions are awfully hard. Have you ever seen people dying on the streets? I did three times, two men and one old woman. * * * They were not sick, just horribly thin and pale.
> It's awfully hard, and I would not have believed it if I had not seen it myself. These three cases illustrate conditions in Petrograd better than description. People are dying quietly, horribly quietly, without groan or curse, poor helpless creatures, slaves of the terrible régime of today.

The next letter was dated Sept. 20 last. In part it reads:

> Today Mr. Poole (American Consul General at Moscow) left Russia. He was the last link between your human world over there and the madhouse here. You cannot imagine what is going on in this country. Everything that is cultured, wealthy, accomplished or educated is being persecuted and systematically destroyed.
> We all live under a perpetual strain under fear of arrest and execution. Yesterday bulletins appeared on the corners of all streets announcing that the Allies and the bourgeoisie have been spreading cholera and hunger all over Russia and calling for the open slaughter of the latter. * * *
>
> People here are starving in accordance with four categories. The first category, the workmen, get one-fourth of a pound of bread and two herrings every two days. The second category, the workmen who do easy work, get one-eighth of a pound and two herrings every two days. The third category, the people who "drink other people's blood," that is people who live by mental work, get two herrings every two days and no bread, while the fourth category, the other who "drink other people's blood," sometimes get two herrings, generally nothing at all. I inclose the slip from the official paper which mentions these four categories.
> People who have a little money run away from Russia. They sell all they possess and just run. They go mainly to the Baltic provinces and to the Ukraine. And you know it is the German Consulate there which helps them to get permits and tickets.

The third and last letter, dated about Oct. 1, tells of four new decrees, the first concerning the seizure of bourgeoisie lodgings, the second, forced hard labor for the bourgeoisie; the third, requisition of warm clothes for the Red Army, and the fourth concerning the distribution of food.

When he arrived in the United States Dr. Huntington said he found for the first time that most of the messages that had been sent to Moscow by the State Department had never been delivered, and that the same was true of messages sent by the American diplomatic agents there to Washington.

"Furthermore," he added, "conditions became so intolerable that we had to get out. We were not even permitted to protect American citizens."

In answer to a question Dr. Huntington told of the executions of persons who met the displeasure of the Soviets.

"It is an absolute reign of terror, is it not?" Senator Overman asked.

"Yes, and the Bolsheviki do not attempt to deny that such is the case," was the answer. "They admit it and then try to justify the actions taken."

"Is there any freedom of the press in Russia?"

"Absolutely none. The only papers that are permitted to be published in Russia are Bolshevist papers. All others are suppressed.

At the present only those who are listed as among the proletariat are permitted to vote. The children of the others, it is stated, may be permited to vote when they become of age provided they take the Bolshevist viewpoint."

"What about the nationalization of industries, of the factories?" was asked.

"In nearly every instance," Dr. Huntington replied, "these factories have come to grief. When the decree of nationalization was issued the factories were placed in charge of committees of workmen. Then came factions and friction and quarrels between them. One would have supplies, another would not, and the result is that few if any factories are running now.

"The principal industry left in Russia now is printing paper money. I have seen the complete overthrow in Russia of all that we know in human life as it exists here at home. I have seen a condition of absolute chaos in all human relations develop in Russia. I have seen conditions attained that amount to nothing less than a reign of absolute terrorism.

"Those in authority take any measures they see fit no matter how unscrupulous. Men and women are held as hostages. Their army is made up principally of Lettish mercenaries and Chinese. They are also using some Austro-Hungarians. To the so-called army have been added other citizens who are forced to serve through threats against their wives and little children.

"The armies they are reported to have are not fired by loyalty to a great cause but are to a large extent made up of men whose condition is such that they have joined in order to be clothed and fed."

Dr. Huntington said that 85 per cent. of the Russian population was of the peasant class and that 7 per cent. of the population were workmen. This 92 per cent., he said, no longer sympathized with the revolution and was held in check by the terrorist machine.

Agent Simmons Imprisoned.

An instance was cited in which a Mr. Simmons of the United States Government service was thrown into prison. It was ten days before the American representatives were able to find him. Mr. Simmons is to be a witness before the Senate committee at its Thursday session.

"Are the trials secret in Russia?" asked Senator Wolcott.

"There is, I believe, a pretense at trial," was the answer. "They, however, give no reasons for what they do to the outside world."

"Who orders the executions?"

"What is known as the Extraordinary Committee for Combating Anti-Bolshevist Propaganda. One of the worst of the men identified with the carrying out of executions is a Lett, who when I left was in charge in Moscow."

On one occasion, during the last days of his stay in Moscow, Dr. Huntington said he saw a copy of a propaganda sheet which the Bolshevist Government had printed for the purpose of converting American and British soldiers at Archangel. In this document the soldiers were urged to mutiny and return to their native countries and start a Bolshevist movement in Great Britain and the United States.

One of the evils under which Russia is suffering, it was brought out, is the nationalization of homes. The Soviets order a housewife to be ready to receive several guests. She replies that she has no room, and they tell her to "double up." In most instances the unwelcome guest is some one whom the persons who live in the house have never seen before.

Dr. Huntington was asked to say something about propagandists sent out of Russia into other countries. He mentioned the name of an English writer named Arthur Ransome. This man, according to his information, left Russia before the German debacle and was permitted by the Germans, at the instance of the Bolsheviki, to get into Scandinavia. He traveled under the protection of a Bolshevist courier passport, according to the information given to the witness.

"Has he written anything in favor of the Bolsheviki?" asked Senator Wolcott.

"I think he has," was the reply. "I think THE NEW YORK TIMES printed one or more of his articles."

[Arthur Ransome was the Petrograd correspondent of The London Daily News. Many of his dispatches were reprinted in America.]

"Do you know of any writers or speakers who are operating in this country now as agents of the Bolsheviki?"

"All I know about that is what I have read in the newspapers."

Attended Washington Meeting.

Dr. Huntington said he had attended, through curiosity, the Bolshevist meeting held recently in this city. He said they defended the régime in Russia, and that one of the speakers was a young woman who was introduced as Miss Louise Bryant.

Major Lowry E. Humes, who is directing the inquiry for the committee, interrupted to state that Miss Bryant is Mrs. John Reed, wife of the New Yorker whom Trotzky tried to have made Consul General in New York. Dr. Huntington replied that he had seen the Bolshevist request for the acceptance of Reed as Consul General in the American Embassy in Petrograd. The request was refused.

"Are the Bolsheviki now carrying on propaganda in other countries to overthrow the Governments of such countries?" was asked.

"Oh, yes, that is after all their ultimate objective," said Dr. Huntington. "They have offices with large staffs in Stockholm, Copenhagen, and Bergen. Undoubtedly they have a special fund for propaganda to overthrow the Governments of the world."

In answer to a question Dr. Huntington said he had no doubt that the propaganda machine was operating in France, England, and other European countries.

Tchitcherin Defense of Killings.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11, (Associated Press.)—At the Senate sub-committee hearing on Bolshevism Dr. Huntington read a letter from G. Tchitcherin, Director of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs, dated Sept. 1, 1918, at Moscow, to Major Allen Wardell of the Red Cross, seeking to justify the execution of 500 in Petrograd.

"You speak of the execution of 500 persons in Petrograd," read the letter, "as of one particularly striking instance of acts of like character. Among those 500, 200 were executed on the ground of the decision of the local organizations to whom they were very well known as most active and dangerous counter-revolutionaries, and Epp had been selected already some time ago as belonging to the vanguard of the counter-revolutionary movement.

"In the passion of the struggle tearing our whole people, do you not see the suffering, untold, during generations of all the unknown millions, who were dumb during centuries, and whose concentrated despair and rage have at last burst into the open, passionately longing for a new life for the sake of which they have the whole existing fabric to remove?"

Professor Samuel N. Harper of the University of Chicago, a student of Russian affairs, testified that there had been much misrepresentation of Russia and exaggeration of conditions there published in newspapers in this country.

"Then you think we are not getting the truth about Russia?" asked Senator Overman.

The witness said this undoubtedly was the situation, but that correct information that had come out of Russia showed that generally Bolshevism had been a failure. He assented to Major Humes's suggestion that the Bolsheviki, to maintain themselves, had instituted a reign of terror, deprived the people of the right of free speech and press, and compelled military service for their purposes, forced disarmament of those not in sympathy with themselves, and limited the right of suffrage to those within their group.

Professor Harper said he had never heard Bolshevist principles preached for application in the United States, although protest against existing conditions was often mistaken for Bolshevism in this country.

DEMAND FOR DEPORTATION.

Senator Penrose Wonders Where Bolsheviki May Be Sent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Senator King of Utah told the Senate today that the Department of Labor was making transportation arrangements to send back to their home lands undersirable aliens who have been spreading Bolshevist propaganda in this country. As soon as the ships could be obtained, he said, the exodus of undesirables would begin.

Senator Jones of Washington brought up the problem of what to do with the Bolsheviki, when he put into the record a petition signed by 1,800 "minute men" of the American Protective League of his State, protesting against the activities of the I. W. W.'s and the Bolsheviki.

"They urge the deportation of those aliens who have taken out their first naturalization papers but who, when the war came on, in order to escape military service, renounced their declaration," said Senator Jones. "They particularly call attention to the fact that of 205 persons who renounced their citizenship declarations 54, or nearly 27 per cent., had I. W. W. cards in their pockets.

"There is a very strong sentiment in the State of Washington for the deportation of these people. They are not considered desirable citizens from any standpoint."

Senator King interrupted to say that the Department of Labor had taken the matter up and that, as soon as accommodations could be had "some of these alien anarchists and Bolsheviki who are seeking the destruction of our Government will be deported."

Senator Penrose asked if the countries from which the objectionable aliens came would be willing to take them back.

"It occurs to me that we might ship them home and their own countries refuse to accept them," said Mr. Penrose. "Perhaps they could not be landed from the vessels."

Senator King thought that under the alien law passed last October there would be no difficulty in deporting undesirables.

"I can see how the anarchists might spend their lives going from one shore to another," commented Senator Penrose.

Senator Jones said the State Department took a different view from that of the Department of Labor. It had received a protest from one Government against the deportation of its nationals in this country.

"It seems that this Government does not want them returned," said Senator Jones, "so it protested against our taking any action. I think, though, that we ought to find the way to get these people out of the country. I do not care where they go, so long as they get out of here."

"Where would they go?" demanded Senator Penrose.

"To somebody's else shores," replied Mr. Jones.

"Maybe the north pole," suggested Mr. Penrose.

Senator Jones insisted that they be deported, no matter where they went.

JUGOSLAVS SEEK WILSON AS ARBITER

Ask Him to Pass on Territorial Dispute with Italy on the Adriatic.

ITALY'S NEW ASIATIC MOVE

Plans to Occupy the Smyrna Region, England, France, and Greece Consenting.

PARIS, Feb. 11, (Associated Press.)—President Wilson received tonight a note signed by N. P. Pachitch, the former Serbian Premier; M. Trumbitch, President of the Jugoslav Committee in Paris, and Dr. M. R. Vesnitch, Serbian Minister to France, the three Jugoslav delegates to the Peace Conference, asking him to act as arbitrator in their differences with Italy regarding the frontier along Istria and the Adriatic.

This is in consequence of the President's last interview on this question with M. Trumbitch and Premier Orlando of Italy. M. Trumbitch claimed for Serbia all of Istria, Fiume, and Dalmatia.

President Wilson expressed to Premier Orlando the opinion that an agreement might be reached giving to the Jugoslavs Dalmatia and the eastern part of the peninsula of Istria and by making Fiume a free city. Premier Orlando answered that Italy could not possibly renounce its claims to Fiume without the risk of very grave trouble.

President Wilson, not wishing the Peace Conference to be confronted with the necessity of making a decision that might deeply wound either side, suggested that the Italians and the Jugoslavs discuss their differences and, if they could not agree, that they submit the disputed points to arbitration.

Premier Oplando answered that he thought arbitration was the proper thing before the war, but not after the long conflict that had ended with the defeat of the enemy and the occupation of the territories claimed. He added that he would consider the suggestion and discuss it with his colleagues on the Italian delegation.

No decision is expected from the Italians until after President Wilson returns from America, as Premier Orlando, Baron Salandra, and Signor Barzilai will start for Italy Thursday to attend the reopening of Parliament.

Meanwhile another Italian territorial question has arisen. Italy, at the suggestion of Englnd and in accord with France, has decided to occupy with military forces Adalia and Konieh, in the Vilayet of Konieh, in Asia Minor, south of the territory claimed by Greece, having Smyrna as its centre.

The Greek Premier, M. Venizelos, also looks with favor upon the presence of the Italians in Asia Minor on condition that the islands of the Dodecanesus (Sporades) be transferred to Greece, excepting perhaps, Stampalia, the smallest of the group, which Italy may keep as a naval station.

Two Italian divisions have been ordered to Rhodes to join another division already there, and the whole force will cross to Adalia as soon as the formalities with Great Britain are completed.

Italian troops are to occupy Baku and Batoum, on the Black Sea, also. Italy will ask for a concession of the mines of Heracleum, the largest in the Near East, located in the Vilayet of Costamuni, on the Black Sea, which are now exploited by French, Russian, and German companies.

The occupation of these points was suggested in order that Italy should be interested in a mandate in Asia Minor.

ALLIES IN NORTH REPEL RED ATTACK

Heavy Losses Inflicted on Bolsheviki by American, British, and Russian Troops.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The Bolsheviki launched an infantry attack on Saturday against the allied positions near Sredmakrenga, southeast of Archangel, and were repulsed, according to an official statement on activities in Northern Russia issued by the War Office tonight.

In the operations Friday, in which American, British, and Russian troops improved their positions on the Petrograd road south of Kadish, the Bolsheviki suffered heavy losses.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Vice Consul Palmer at Novo Nicolaevsk, Russia, has notified the State Department of the release of 2,100 Bolshevist hostages held by the Ufa Government since last November as a measure to guarantee the safety of loyal Russians in the Ufa district. The allied representatives protested against the arrests.

CLYDE MEN GOING BACK

Employers in Irish City Propose Terms to End the General Strike There.

BELFAST, Feb. 11.—At a conference of the shipbuilders and the strikers here today the employers proposed that the men resume work on a fifty-four-hour-week basis.

The employers engaged themselves to endeavor to secure by a national conference a settlement on a basis of forty-seven hours and, failing this, promised that they would make a settlement with their own employes within three weeks after the national conference.

A proposed ballot by the strikers regarding a settlement was postponed tonight, pending a conference to ascertain if the engineering firms would accept the terms reached with the shipyards.

The gas and electric supplies were again stopped and the tramways suspended service after a few hours. The Strike Committee has issued a warning circular that an attempt has been made to stampede the strike.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—All the strikers in the Clyde district have been instructed by their leaders to return to work tomorrow. The instructions were issued today by the joint committee of the strikers.

PREPARES TO OUST DUFFEY.

J. Waldo Smith Asked to Become Highway Chief.

Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, Feb. 11.—After feeling his way cautiously for the first six weeks of his administration, Governor Smith is getting ready to swing his ax. It was learned tonight that he will demand the resignation of Edwin Duffey, Commissioner of Highways, although his term does not expire for a year. J. Waldo Smith of New York City, who was concerned in the construction of the Ashokan Dam and the Catskill Aqueduct, it is stated on good authority, has been offered the position.

Mr. Duffey has served in his present position since the first part of the Whitman administration. He was a close personal friend of the late Governor.

COSTIGAN CASE MAY GO TO GOV. SMITH

Acting Mayor Moran Refuses Citizens Union Request for a Public Investigation.

ENRIGHT QUITS EXPLAINING

Lets His Secretary Tell Reporters That the Costigan Incident Is Closed.

A request for a public investigation of the circumstances surrounding the demotion of Inspector Daniel E. Costigan to the grade of Captain was made yesterday by the Citizens' Union to Acting Mayor Robert L. Moran on the ground that Police Commissioner Enright's explanations were "wholly unsatisfactory" and that "if the morale of the Police Department is to be maintained and the powers of disorder kept in leash it is essential that the action of the Police Commissioner be thoroughly and publicly examined through unbiased investigation."

Acting Mayor Moran received the request late in the afternoon and immediately sent a reply to the Citizens' Union, which he made public, denying the request. He said he had implicit faith in the Commissioner and was ready to "stand behind and defend" his act. Mr. Moran's reply followed a long conference with Grover Whalen, the Mayor's secretary.

The reply will be taken up at an early meeting of the Executive Committee of the Citizen Union, and it is expected that the request will be laid before Mayor Hylan on his return. After every possible method of obtaining a municipal investigation has been tried, it is fairly certain that the entire matter will be laid before Governor Smith, with a view to the removal of Enright if a State investigation discloses facts to his discredit.

The request sent to the Acting Mayor placed him in the same position that Acting Mayor John Purroy Mitchel found himself in when in the absence of Mayor Gaynor he was informed that conditions at Coney Island required immediate attention. Acting on his own initiative, Acting Mayor Mitchel "cleaned up" the resort.

It was pointed out that an abrupt refusal on the part of Mayor Hylan to make an investigation would result in a quick transfer of the case to Albany. However, it was also indicated that should the Mayor take advantage of opportunities for delay and bring about a "whitewashing" for Commissioner Enright, the case would surely be put before the Governor. Here is the letter of the Citizens Union to Mr. Moran:

Hon. Robert L. Moran, Acting Mayor,
New York City.

Dear Sir: The Citizens' Union hereby respectfully requests that as Acting Mayor of the City of New York you order a public investigation of the facts and circumstances surrounding the demotion of former Inspector Costigan to the rank of Captain.

The union is aware, of course, that under the law the Police Commissioner has full power to demote an Inspector to the rank of Captain. When, however, that power is exercised to reduce an officer whose long service and demonstrated efficiency and integrity have earned universal confidence, the public is entitled to clear and cogent reasons for such action. Especially is this so in the case of Captain Costigan, because his demotion must certainly tend to the emboldening of the lawless element in our city.

The explanations so far advanced by the Police Commissioner are wholly unsatisfactory. Captain Costigan's demotion was originally announced without any statement of the reasons therefor except that there were too many Inspectors. In response to widespread public inquiry, the Commissioner next in a letter to the Mayor stated that Captain Costigan had been inefficient, and gave statistics of arrests to support this claim. Finally, when the accuracy of these statistics was questioned, he admitted their incompleteness and justified distrust of their fairness.

In this situation, if the morale of the Police Department is to be maintained and the powers of disorder kept in leash, it is essential that the action of the Police Commissioner be thoroughly and publicly examined through unbiased investigation.

Yours very truly,
CITIZENS UNION OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK,
By WALTER T. ARNDT, Secretary.
Feb. 11, 1919.

Here is Mr. Moran's reply:

Feb. 11, 1919.

Walter T. Arndt, Esq., Secretary Citizens Union of the City of New York, 41 Park Row, New York City:

Relative to your request of the 11th inst. calling upon me as the Acting Mayor of the city, to cause a public investigation of the facts surrounding the demotion of former Inspector Costigan to the rank of Captain, I beg to advise as follows:

I have always believed that the Police Department should be conducted free from the dictates of City Hall. Commissioner Enright, in demoting Inspector Costigan, merely exercised the power vested in him as Police Commissioner of this city. It is for him to know who should be his competent executives.

Commissioner Enright has been raised from the rank of patrolman to the executive head of the Police Department of this city. I have every confidence in his ability to properly administer the police work of this city. During the period of the war, when it became necessary in other cities not quite so large as ours for the Federal Government to take over the management of the police work, the police force of the City of New York was so managed that there could be no just cause for criticism. Now the demotion of Inspector Costigan is purely an administrative act, and I am ready to stand behind and defend the action of Commissioner Enright.

When the Mayor left the city he reposed in me the responsibility of conducting his office in a manner fitting to the dignity of the office of Mayor. I do not think it would be in good form, nor in keeping with good faith for me to change a condition which prevailed at the time he departed. I therefore feel that I must deny your request, which I think is intended to bring about a state of chaos in the Police Department of this city, rather than that of intended betterment during a trying period of unrest.

There are some matters upon which you and I have agreed, but on this I must emphatically state that we do not agree.

Respectfully yours,
ROBERT L. MORAN,
Acting Mayor.

Commissioner Enright let it be known through his Secretary, John C. Hackett, yesterday that he would not make another attempt to justify his action in the Costigan case. Yesterday morning the Commissioner told reporters that he had nothing further to say on the assertions published in The Tribune on Monday purporting to quote former Third Deputy Police Commissioner John W. Goff on the reasons why he resigned from the department. Hardly had the reporters entered the room when Mr. Enright remarked: "Now, gentlemen, nothing today. When I have any statement or news I shall send for you. At present I can think of nothing." Questioned concerning a reply to Mr. Goff, the Commissioner said he might have something to say after hearing from the former deputy. Second Deputy Commissioner Lahey and Fourth Deputy Commissioner Wallis stood beside Mr. Enright during the brief interview, but volunteered no information.

At 5 o'clock Secretary Hackett stepped out of Mr. Enright's room to a waiting group of reporters, holding in his hand two slips of paper.

"That's all there is on this Costigan affair," he said. "This cuts it off complete." Turning to an acquaintance among the reporters he said: "You know me and these fellows don't, and you know that goes." Continuing to the group, Hacket said emphatically: "There will be absolutely nothing further on the Costigan matter. It's a dead issue, like the funeral of Moses. Absolutely no more dope."

Secretary Hackett was asked whether Mr. Enright might be seen.

"No, not today. Not on the Costigan affair." He handed the reporters two unsigned slips bearing the following:

POLICE DEPARTMENT,
City of New York.
Feb. 11, 1919.

Memorandum for ——.

An article was published yesterday in The New York Tribune, containing a number of statements attributed to former Third Deputy Police Commissioner Goff, criticising the Police Department, the Police Commissioner, and conditions in the police department.

Mr. Goff states that he did give an interview to a representative of The New York Tribune, but that in the publication of it, he was misquoted and the statements that he made were distorted. He denies that he criticised the Police Department, the Police Commissioner, or conditions in the police department. He further states that any remarks he made about Inspector Costigan had been common rumor through the police department for a year or more. "Common rumor" in the police department has been found to assay about 1 per cent.

The statement was not signed. It was typed on Police Department stationery, not on the paper of the Police Commissioner.

No intimation was given as to where Mr. Goff made the statement or the circumstances under which it was made. A reporter for The Tribune called the attention of Secretary Hackett to an affidavit made by the reporter who obtained the interview with Mr. Goff. In the affidavit the reporter deposed that he interviewed the former Deputy and that he personally wrote the story, which he said, quoted with entire correctness the statements made by Goff. Further, he said that he wrote the statement out in longhand in the presence of Goff and read it to him and Mr. Goff said the statements were correct.

Mr. Hackett took the affidavit to Commissioner Enright and reappeared several minutes later saying that Mr. Enright had seen it and had nothing to say.

"This thing is absolutely ended," volunteered Secretary Hackett, amiably but firmly. "It's ended, cut off. It's a closed incident."

"Do you speak on your own authority or do you speak for the Commissioner?" he was asked.

"Who do you think I am? What do you think my job is?" he replied.

"Is it true that Costigan will be returned to the First Inspection District as Inspector? Some people are saying that is what will happen because of the publication of the figures this morning showing Costigan's good record."

"That's absurd. Maybe I'm going to be made the Shah of Persia. This ground has been plowed over and over again. Pretty soon, if we keep on, we'll reach the centre of the earth."

It was learned last night that on Monday night there was a meeting of Inspectors of the Police Department at the the police clubhouse in Riverside Drive, presented to them by Deputy Commissioner Dr. John A. Harriss. All of the twenty-four Inspectors, it was said, were present and the chief topic of discussion was a bill soon to be introduced in the Legislature by the Legislative Committee of the Police Department to have Inspectorships put under the civil service law. This bill would make the positions permanent as they were up to 1907, and the appointments would be made to Captains who passed examinations. Commissioner Enright, it was said, addressed the Inspectors on the subject.

Dominick Henry, in charge of the Fourth Inspection District, is President of the Inspectors' Association, and John A. Leach, First Deputy Police Commissioner, was Chairman of the committee which drew the bill. The question as to ways and means for furthering the bill were discussed. It was learned after the meeting that there was talk of raising about $25,000 as a fund to pay the necessary legal expenses. Commissioner Enright could not be reached last night when it was sought to obtain further information on this subject.

District Attorney Swann was asked last night whether, in view of the fact that Commissioner Enright had given his explanation for demoting Costigan, he had anything to say. "Does the explation explain?" he asked, and declined further comment.

HYLAN REFUSES COMMENT.

Says Police Affairs Are in the Hands of Enright.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 11.—Mayor Hylan made it clear tonight that the New York Police Department was entirely in the hands of Commissioner Enright and that the Mayor was not going to be drawn into any controversy about it. When the Mayor's attention was called to the statement of John W. Goff, Jr., that Costigan had been on the toboggan from the moment Enright went into office, he said he had read about it in the papers and added: "I leave police affairs to the Commissioner; he is in charge of that department."

The Mayor today had a talk with Richard Delafield, President of the National Park Bank, and with Samuel Untermyer, whom he met in the Cocoanut Grove at the afternoon concert. Both conversations were on subjects suggested by the Florida sunshine, the Mayor said. Mr. Hylan brought a bathing suit and will take his first swim tomorrow morning. He went automobiling this afternoon with his wife, his daughter, Miss Katherine Menahan of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Theodore Eppig, a sister of Archbishop Mundelein of Chicago.

GUARD LEAVES GERARD

So Clergyman-Owner Withdraws Complaint Against Inspector Henry.

The Rev. John R. Rankin, owner of the Hotel Gerard, 123 West Forty-third Street, yesterday withdrew his complaint of oppression against Police Inspector Dominick Henry, whom he summoned before Magistrate Corrigan, in the West Side Court. His lawyer explained this was because the patrolman who had been placed on guard at the door of the hotel had been withdrawn.

When Mr. Rankin obtained the summons on Monday he asserted that Inspector Henry had caused his arrest last Friday, charging violation of the tenement house law, and that subsequently the Inspector had stationed a policeman at the door, thus impairing the hotel's business.

In requesting permission to withdraw the summons, the lawyer asked the Court to impress on Inspector Henry the necessity of showing as much respect to the hotel owned by Mr. Rankin as he showed to the larger hotels. Inspector Henry wanted to take the stand but Magistrate Corrigan said there was no need for it, as it would only result in additional publicity. The summons was withdrawn.

CALL FOR HOSPITAL CORPS.

Navy Recruiting Office of This District Appeals for Volunteers.

Lieut. Commander D. P. Wickersham, in command of the navy recruiting offices in this district, has issued a call for volunteers for the Hospital Corps. He points out that the men in this corps have the same privileges of promotion as in other branches of the service. His letter says in part:

"Special schools have been established for the instruction of men who enlist in this branch of the service, where they receive, free of charge, a thorough elementary course of instruction in anatomy, first aid and emergency surgery, pharmacy, chemistry and compounding of medicines, hygiene, care of the sick, and surgical procedures. Those who show special ability may avail themselves of courses in bacteriology and other laboratory examinations and tests and the X-ray."

Other branches of the service also want men, and it is stated that 200,000 men will be needed to carry out the plan of a big working peace time navy. Men who have been discharged from the service are urged to explain the advantages of the naval training to others so that the heavy withdrawal of men who enlisted only for the war will not hamper the work of organization. Recruiting offices in this district are at 34 East Twenty-third Street, the U. S. S. Recruit, 406 East 149th Street, 22 South Broadway, in Yonkers, and the Post Offices at Newburg and Kingston.

Tightens Ban on Insignia.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Continuing its effort to check the sale of unauthorized insignia and decorations to returning troops the War Department issued orders today forbidding post exchanges to handle any but officially sanctioned devices for military uniforms. Commandants were instructed to bring influence to bear on stores near army camps or posts to stop such sales.

EXHIBIT BIG PNEUMATIC TIRE

Latest Developments in Commercial Cars Seen at Truck Show.

One of the new things in the Motor Truck Show in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory is a pneumatic tire, 44 by 10 inches, fitted to a Republic three-and-one-half-ton truck. It is the largest automobile tire ever made, and is the latest production of the Firestone Rubber Company. Two of these huge tires, which with the tubes and rim weigh approximately 250 pounds apiece, are attached to the rear wheels of the truck, while the front ones have 38-by-7 pneumatics. The cost of the larger tire is $350 for the shoe and $45 for the tube, or $395 for the complete tire, while the smaller size costs $155 for the shoe and $24 for the tube.

These enormous pneumatic tires indicate the trend which has been developing toward the use of pneumatic tires for heavy trucks. The advantages claimed are greater speed and less vibration, but with the use of better springs the vibration, and consequent injury to the load, have been materially reduced on the trucks using solid rubber tires. The prevailing opinion among the dealers and engineers at the show is that the big pneumatics are not likely to be extensively used for some time.

There is one six-cylinder truck in the show, the Parker truck. It is fitted with a newly designed contractors' body, of which the distinctive feature is its two-cylinder hydro-hydraulic hoist. The body is 12 feet in length by 6 feet wide, and the three-foot tailgate when lowered permits the body to be extended to 15 feet. It is a five-ton truck, and extra large springs reduce the vibration.

H. L. Horning, formerly Chairman of the Automotive Products Section of the War Industries Board, visited the show during the day. He was especially interested in the development of tractor use on American farms. He said that there was no load that could injure a first-class tractor engine, and he did not think the price of fuel was of first importance with the farmer. Farmers are buying tractors provided with attachments to burn kerosene in case gasoline becomes prohibitive.

More than 100 representatives of motor-truck manufacturing companies who came to New York for the show met in the rooms of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, 7 East Forty-second Street, yesterday, to discuss different phases of the industry. Colonel Fred. Glover of the Quartermaster's Department, U. S. A., told the members that all surplus trucks in army use would first be offered to other Government departments, and only in case that they could not all be used would the excess trucks be offered at public sale. Fourth Assistant Postmaster General James I. Blakslee discussed the reason for his request for an appropriation of $100,000,000 as an emergency measure to provide employment and start industrial activity during the period of war readjustment. With the appropriation he plans improvement of the highways and the operation of motor trucks in a wide extension of the rural parcel post service.

ASKS FOR MEXICAN INQUIRY.

Senator Lewis Moves to Investigate Murder of Americans.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Inquiry into whether action is necessary to protect American lives and property in Mexico was proposed in a resolution introduced today by Senator Lewis of Illinois, and referred to the Foreign Relations Committee.

Charges that under the Carranza Government Mexican officials had murdered Americans and confiscated their property were recited in the resolution. It proposes that the Foreign Relations Committee make an investigation of the charges, through the State Department and other sources, and if the charges are sustained, recommend to the Senate any measures which it may deem necessary to protect American life and property in the Southern republic.

BOARD RELEASES 14 SHIPS.

Eight for European Food Relief and Six for Commerce.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Release of fourteen more cargo carriers from war work—eight for European food relief and six for commercial trade—was announced tonight by the Shipping Board. The total deadweight carrying capacity of the fleet is 103,407 tons.

The American steamers Lambs, Victoria, West Indian, Volunteer, and Western Pride, and the Dutch steamers Wierengen, Arakan, Corontola, Pjikbang, and Zelandia were ordered to load at New York on Feb. 28, chiefly with food cargoes, for European ports, while the American steamer France was ordered to load Feb. 20, also at New York. The Homestead was turned back to the United Fruit Company for southern routes, and the Lake Dunmore and Lake Mauretas were ordered to load general cargo at New York immediately for Brazilian ports.

Saxons of the Banat Favor Rumania

BUCHAREST, Feb. 11.—A delegation representing the Saxon population, which forms the main part of the German settlements in Transylvania and the Banat of Temsvar, has arrived here and requested union with Rumania. The delegates said that they rejected a union with Germany because the Saxons had been separated from Germany for eight centuries.

CARPENTERS AGREE TO STRIKE TRUCE

Lookout in Building Trades Is Also Called Off Until Saturday.

RESUME WORK TOMORROW

Meanwhile Unions and Employers May Adjust Differences—Sympathetic Demonstration Fails.

The beginning of the end of the differences between the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Building Trades Employers' Association was forecast last night when, by mutual agreement, the strike and lockout in the building trades were called off and a conference between the employers and the unionists set for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The carpenters will return to work early tomorrow pending the settlement, but not with the increase of $1 a day, the question of wages remaining to be determined at the conference.

At the close of a conference which was held at the Continental Hotel yesterday the assembled union leaders issued the following statement:

"After several hours' conference, the representatives of the Allied Trades prevailed upon William L. Hutcheson of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners to consent to a truce until Saturday noon, Feb. 15, 1919, it being understood the trades approve a carpenter's wage of $6.50 per day, and all return to work Thursday morning, and that a committee of the Building Trades Employers' Association meet representatives of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners Thursday afternoon to adjust the wage scale in accordance with the above understanding.

"This arrangement was reached through William Dobson, General Secretary of the International Bricklayers, and Frank Feeney, General President of the Elevator Erectors, and a representative of the Building Trades Employers' Association."

General strike orders issued yesterday before this conference of union leaders were called off last night, it was learned. Though telegrams were sent to the locals in cities where association contracts were being filled ordering a strike, no labor disturbances had been reported to the Building Trades Employers' Association last night.

Ronald P. Taylor, President of the Employers' Association, declared that the lockout, which went into effect on Monday morning, had been called off and that satisfactory adjustments of the differences were looked for tomorrow.

"The committee representing the carpenters, William Dobson and Frank Feeney, and C. J. Norman, Chairman of our committee, met at noon and discussed the situation, at Mr. Dobson's request," he stated. "At 4 o'clock Mr. Dobson advised us that all strikes had been declared off and that the men would return to work on Thursday morning. We agreed in return that a committee of employers would meet the representatives of the Carpenters' Union at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. We are to meet the committee of carpenters to take up their grievances, including the question of wages."

The strike of plumbers, steamfitters, electrical workers, plasterers, elevator erectors, and workers in allied trades at the army base at Second Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, did not take place yesterday morning. Instead, all men reported and continued to work peacefully, without any indication of the impending walk-out.

The fact that many discharged and wounded soldiers had been employed to take the places of the striking carpenters and dock builders who walked out in November, said an army officer in charge of the work, is believed to be the reason for the compromise. At the office of the Construction Quartermaster at the base it was said yesterday that appeals had been sent out to all employment agencies to supply soldiers available for work, and that, with few exceptions, all the men employed were ex-soldiers.

GARMENT STRIKE IS WANING.

724 Firms Said to Have Accepted Union's Terms.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, whose members are striking against the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, announced yesterday that 724 dress and waist firms had signed individual agreements with the union, granting the forty-four-hour week, an increase in wages, and other union demands, and that 15,000 workers had thus far been returned to work.

Of those who signed, it was said, 373 were independent manufacturers, 26 were members of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, against which the strike is being waged; 250 were members of the Dress Contract Manufacturers' Association, and the remaining 75 independent shops in Brooklyn, Harlem, and the Bronx. Several thousand dollars in strike benefits was paid out by the union yesterday at 16 West Twenty-first Street, it was announced.

The reserves of the East 120th Street Station were called yesterday afternoon to quell a disturbance in a loft building at 79 East 130th Street. When policemen arrived there they found Thomas Neary, a private decetive employed by the Eisinger Shirtwaist Company, unconscious, after he had been struck on the head with his own revolver. Neary, on regaining consciousness, said he had tried to keep out strikers attempting to enter the factory, and had been assaulted by several men, one of whom took his revolver from him.

The police arrested Jack Ravner, 21 years old, of 82 Avenue D, who said he was a discharged soldier, and Abraham Goldstein, 20, of 2,055 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx, charged with felonious assault on Neary's complaint. The detective was removed to Harlem Hospital.

Eighteen members of the Garment Workers' Union were arraigned before Magistrate Tobias in Jefferson Market Court yesterday on charges of disorderly conduct. The complainant was Jacob Steinbrink, manager of the Max Held Shirtwaist Company, 134 West Thirty-seventh Street. The strikers, seven of them young women, were fined $5 each and warned not to cause disturbances at other factories. The strikers, said Steinbrink, had stopped the factory machinery by turning off the electric power. When ordered from the loft they refused to leave, he said.

UMPIRE IN HARBOR DISPUTE

Will Be Chosen Today, War Labor Board Announces.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—The New York Harbor workers' dispute with the Boat Owners, whose employes recently struck for an eight-hour day and increased wages, will be placed in the hands of an umpire to be chosen tomorrow, it was announced here tonight at the close of an executive session of the War Labor Board.

The dispute referred to resulted in the tying up of all harbor transportation for three days during the strike of 16,000 members of the Marine Affiliation on Jan. 9, 10, and 11 to enforce their demand for a basic eight-hour day and a wage increase of 25 per cent. At the end of three days President Wilson cabled to the National War Labor Board urging intervention. The board came here and then appointed a sub-committee to take evidence.

The umpire will be appointed, it was learned last night, to award a decision that will be acceptable to both the Boat Owners and the Marine Affiliation on the evidence taken by the sub-committee. The Boat Owners' Association has not accepted the jurisdiction of the National War Labor Board. The Marine Affiliation, on the other hand, announced that it would accept any decision.

WHITE HOUSE PICKETS TO MEET WILSON HERE

Militants Prepare for Demonstration When He Arrives—Mrs. Havemeyer Freed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Members of the National Woman's Party are preparing for a demonstration at the dock when President Wilson arrives from France. The militants sent Miss Mildred Morris and Mrs. Lucille Shields to New York today to take charge of the organization of working women and others for the demonstration. According to present plans, a line of women who have served jail sentences for White House picketing and similar demonstrations will stand along the President's path from the steamer to his motor car.

Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, who was sentenced to five days in jail in connection with the demonstration during which the women on Sunday tried to burn the President's effigy in front of the White House, was released from pail today. At the headquarters of the Woman's Party it was announced that Mrs. Havemeyer's release was "effected by her family." Several of the pickets now in jail will be passengers on the Prison Special, which the women will send out from Washington next Saturday night.

Mrs. Havemeyer, who had already given $1,000 for the expense of the Prison Special, today contributed the additional sum of $500.

Before starting for New York today Mrs. Havemeyer said:

"No one doubts that the President could have won one more vote for the amendment Monday, if he had chosen to use his political influence to the full. I am glad to have taken part in the protest against the tactics of the Democratic Party in the Senate. The fact that the amendment has failed to pass when women of the whole Anglo-Saxon world, and even the women of Germany, have been granted suffrage, is a blot of lasting shame on the Democratic Party.

"It is significant that on the day the amendment was defeated twenty-five women were imprisoned for demanding its passage. It is a disgrace that women guilty of no crime should be not only thus arrested and jailed, but should be put into the abandoned workhouse of the jail, which had been unused for many years until last August when other suffragists were held there. It is cold and damp, and no fit place for any prisoner."

VEEDER SAYS LOGAN WAS 'DIAMOND T'

Witness Positive Tumulty Was Not the Mysterious Correspondent of the Packers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—"Diamond T," Washington representative of Swift & Co., who furnished confidential information forecasting Government activities in connection with the meat industry, was identified as Thomas F. Logan by Henry Veeder, counsel for Swift & Co., today before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. Logan recently testified that he represented Swift & Co. and other corporations in Washington and conducted a news agency, but had retired from the Congressional press gallery after going into the service of the packers. "Diamond T" was so-called because his correspondence bore a "T" within a diamond at the top of the page.

Mr. Veeder testified Logan's employment by Swift & Co. was solely for the purpose of advising on matters of publicity. It was a fact, however, he said, that all of Logan's letters were on matters other than publicity and that he always sent gossip or information he thought might be useful. The witness did not know about a dinner Logan was said to have given Edward N. Hurley.

The witness, in response to a question, said he was sure "T" referred to Logan and not to Secretary Tumulty, and denied that he ever had had luncheon in Washington with Mr. Tumulty and Mr. Logan.

Francis J. Heney asked many questions about the "Diamond T" letters. Mr. Veeder said he did not know who the author was until Mr. Logan told him Sunday.

"Did you ever hear," asked Mr. Heney, "how Mr. Logan got C. W. Morse out of jail by a successful feat wherein he wrote how Morse was starving to death, whereupon President Taft let him out of jail?"

"No," replied the witness.

FAVORS U. S. RULE IN TURKEY

Morgenthau Says Two Warships and a Regiment Could Do It.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Mandate control of Turkey by the United States was advocated today by Henry Morgenthau, formerly American Ambassador to Turkey, in speaking at the Great Lakes Congress of the League to Enforce Peace. He said that two battleships and a regiment of marines, backed by the great moral force of the United States, would be sufficient to carry out mandatory rule.

"The Allies must neutralize the Dardanelles," said Mr. Morgenthau. "If the United States will accept any mandate, that over Turkey would be as good as any, and it would insure all nations a fair cnance at Russian trade. Constantinople under American control would become in ten years the fourth city of the world in population and importance."

The delegates adopted a platform which pledged "unrestricted support" to President Wilson in his advocacy for a league for an enduring peace, declared that "Germany must be made to pay the full penalty for every offense which she has committed against international law," and that "no unrepentant, no unregenerate Germany should be admitted to fellowship with free nations in a League of Nations," but must be on probation until she proves her right to communion with free nations.

WILSON FAVORS BUDGET.

Cables Indorsement to Sherley, Who Will Introduce It in Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—With a message from President Wilson to support him, Representative Sherley of Kentucky, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, announced today he would include a rider for a budget system in some appropriation measure yet to be acted on at this session of Congress.

The President sent this cablegram to Mr. Sherley:

"I hear you are again endeavoring to work out a budget system plan. I hope that you will succeed."

Wilson Receives Prince of Wales.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—In the interval between the meeting of the Peace Conference Commission on a Society of Nations and the session of the Supreme Council today President Wilson received the Prince of Wales at the Murat Mansion. The Prince called on the President in company with his staff.

Aeronautical Exposition
Manufacturers Aircraft Association

This exhibit marks an historic page in the miracle of aircraft development.

Each succeeding step in the building of air machinery will be shown.

Side by side the first Langley and the original Wright machines and the Navy's newest Flying Boat, with the record carrying capacity of fifty passengers.

The United States Army and Navy Departments, together with the Manufacturers, will display every type of 'plane built in America during the war, including a complete exhibition illustrating the tremendous strides in aerial ordnance, photography, the use of wireless and other developments.

It will be America's first glimpse of the wonderful collection of war trophies, captured German 'planes exactly as they were brought down behind the Allied lines.

All together it is an exhibit that will bring home and make real to you for the first time much of the air history you have read during the war.

PROPOSE INCOME AND SOFT DRINK TAX

Commission Urges First, Travis Second Way of Making Up Prohibition Loss.

FACE $29,600,000 DEFICIT

Of This $19,000,000 Will Fall on Localities—Other Suggestions for Increasing Revenue.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Controller Eugene M. Travis, chief fiscal officer of the State, while not actually opposing a State income tax, which has been suggested as a means by which the State may retrieve in part the loss in revenue sustained as a result of prohibition, does not believe that it would be practical to impose such a tax at the present time. In a statement prepared for the joint legislative Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, Controller Travis suggests that soft drinks be taxed to make up in part for the loss.

The Controller believes that a tax on non-intoxicating liquors would produce at least $6,000,000 annually. This would equal approximately one-half of the revenue that flowed into the State Treasury during the last fiscal year from the excise tax, but would not make up any part of the revenue derived from the same source by localities. Under the excise law one-half of the proceeds from the tax levied against liquor traffic goes to the State and the other half to the localities where the tax is collected. Controller Travis estimates that a deficit of $10,600,000 in State revenues and $19,000,000 in revenues of localities must be reckoned with by the lawmakers.

Commission for Income Tax.

The State Tax Commission in its annual report to the Legislature, which became public today, comes out flatly for a personal tax at a low rate on incomes, regardless of source, to make up primarily the loss in excise revenues. The report does not embody any suggestion for an exemption on small incomes. It is known that some of the lawmakers now framing tax measures believe that all incomes above $500 of single and above $1,000 of married persons should be taxed, with an exemption of $100 for each child. The Federal income tax law allows an exemption of $1,000 for single and $2,000 for married persons and an exemption of $200 for each child. There is considerable opposition to levying a tax on incomes smaller than those held taxable by the Federal Government, partly on the ground that it would not pay for the cost of collection.

"It is recommended that the income tax be supplemented by a tax at a fixed rate upon tangible personal property and a business tax," the report adds. The report also recommends that the corporation tax law be amended so that all corporations shall be taxed upon their net income, instead of limiting the tax to mercantile and manufacturing corporations, as heretofore, and that the definition of "net income" be made less vague than in the present law.

The commission calls attention to the fact that court actions are pending to test the right of the State to assess upon net incomes without allowing deductions for taxes paid on income and excess profits to the Federal Government. Should these deductions be allowed, it would mean a loss of revenue to the State from this source of from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 annually.

Tax on Business Men.

Controller Travis believes that the present law providing for a 3 per cent. tax on the net income of mercantile and manufacturing corporations should be broadened so as to include partnerships and individuals engaged in commerce and manufacturing. Many corporations subject to the present tax have been dissolved or changed into partnerships to escape paying the tax. The State Controller believes that by extending the scope of the law the State would be the gainer by approximately $12,000,000 annually.

The Controller also favors amendments to the inheritance tax law so as to make it applicable to the personal property of all non-resident decedents, as it was prior to 1911, when the law was amended on the ground that it had the tendency of driving such property into hiding. Controller Travis estimates that the change has cost the State more than $12,000,000 in lost revenues.

The tax on certificates of secured debts, at present permissive, which returned $1,265,000 last year, according to Controller Travis, ought to yield the State at least $4,000,000 annually from $10,000,000,000 of intangible property which so far has failed to contribute anything to the revenues of the State. Mr. Travis also believes that the revenue from the incorporation tax should be doubled by raising the rate to what it is in other States. The revenue from this source, lessened somewhat on account of war conditions, was only $819,365 last year, and in 1917 only $1,217,436. Bills have been introduced to increase the stock transfer tax rate which at 2 cents on each $100 worth of shares sold or transferred yielded more than $5,000,000 last year, but Controller Travis does not urge any change in the law under which this tax is collected.

Pointing out that the State spends approximately $12,000,000 annually on good roads and that the State's share of the motor vehicle tax, which is divided equally with the localities where it is collected, is only $2,000,000, Controller Travis holds that owners of motor cars should contribute more than they do at present to keeping the roads in good condition. He suggests that through the automobile associations they be invited to confer with the lawmakers with a view to bringing about an increase in the revenue from this source.

Want Commuters Assessed.

Wealthy New Jersey and Connecticut commuters who, earning big salaries or deriving large incomes from business in New York City, escape all taxes in this State by making their homes in States adjoining, would be compelled to contribute to the State revenues if suggestions made today by prominent real estate men from the city at a hearing before the Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation are adopted by that body in framing prospective revenue measures.

Walter Lindner, counsel for the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, and Alfred E. Marling, a prominent New York real estate operator and member of the Chamber of Commerce, recommended that such suburbanites be compelled to make some return for the opportunities and the protection they enjoy in this State.

The real estate men submitted a bill to the committee in which provision was made for a tax on all personal incomes of over $1,000 for single and $2,000 for married men at the rate of 2 per cent. where the income was less than $5,000, and 4 per cent. where it exceeded that amount. Exemption was made, however, for income derived from rents or interest on mortgages, this on the ground that real estate was already carrying more than its share of the tax burden. Members of the committee did not take kindly to this exemption.

Others who appeared before the committee were J. F. Zoller of Schnectady, representing the General Electric Company, and President Beech of the State Savings Bank Association. Mr. Beech suggested that if necessary a small tax might be imposed on individual savings banks accounts, but said the bankers were opposed to any tax on the undivided profits of savings banks and to the proposed annual mortgage tax.

PERKINS NOMINATION OUT.

Senate Committee Acts—Cahill for State Fair Commissioner.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Governor Smith's nomination of Miss Frances Perkins as a member of the State Industrial Commission was reported today for the consideration of the Senate by the Finance Committee. The nomination had been held in committee several weeks.

John H. Cahill of Syracuse was nominated a member of the State Fair Commission by Governor Smith. The Governor also sent to the Senate for confirmation the following appointments to membership on the Mohansic Lake Reservation Commission: William Fellowes Morgan and Mrs. Charles L. Guy of New York, and Colonel Willis S. Paine, Mrs. Laura J. Belknap, and John J. Crennan of West Chester.

BIG NAVY WINS IN HOUSE, 194 TO 142

gram came during the debate on the adoption of the rule. Chairman Pou of the Rules Committee, which reported the rule for the restoration of the section eliminated by a point of order yesterday, stoutly defended the action of the committee and criticised Republicans and "little navy men" for seeking to embarrass the President and "play partisan politics."

"There is nothing to the rule except that it makes the legislation in order," said Mr. Pou. "The committee thought the House should have an opportunity to vote on legislation of such vast importance. The President, upholding the aspirations of mankind, made a request for this program in his recent message. He told us this legislation will be helpful to him in the great task he has undertaken. Instead of criticising this man, instead of making his task harder, it seems to me the hour has come when every man should rise above any political consideration and support him in his great effort to gratify the aspirations of mankind for an everlasting peace."

Representative Campbell, ranking Republican member of the Rules Committee, took exception to the statement that the opposition was indulging in partisan politics. He said he could not understand the President's position proclaiming before the Chamber of Deputies for disarmament and sending a "secret and confidential" message to his Secretary of the Navy demanding a big navy.

Kelley Backs the President.

Representative Kelley of Michigan, Republican member of the Naval Affairs, led the fight for adoption of the rule and made a rousing speech exhorting his colleagues to support the President.

"I don't want the President to come back and say he was on the point of getting a reduction of armament," added the speaker; "that he was on the point of bringing into being a tribunal which would adjust the demands of the world and prevent war, but at that critical moment Congress withdrew its support and because of that action he failed. I do not want the President to urge that upon his return."

Opposition to the rule, but support for a big navy, was expressed by Representative Longworth of Ohio. He said he was opposed to the limitation, and that the bill did not attempt to provide "for a bona fide navy." Mr. Longworth said he had read the President's message, but the message had not convinced him of the necessity of voting for the program in its present shape.

Representative Fess, Republican, of Ohio, thought the President's naval plan amounted to a threat.

"It is a form of threat," he said. "It is not an announcement to Germany or to Austria—to our enemies. It is a subtle announcement to the men with whom our President sits about the table and are our friends. It is not an open statement, but it is a statement, not made clear to you, that there is something of a secret matter on which we cannot take the public into our confidence. This is something that we must hold as a club. Over whom? Over our friends and our enemy, and to me it seems the proper thing today is to sit about that table as friends and decide how the war shall end and end at once by signing this treaty."

Mann Views It as Threat.

Speaking against the rule, Minority Leader Mann declared he had heard only two arguments in support of the construction program. First, a cable had been received, he said, from the President. This cable, he added, must not be taken too seriously, and if it was important then the House ought to be familiarized with it.

"I am not inclined to take the President's cablegram too seriously," he said. "There are two ways of looking at it. Navy officials whose duty it is to extend naval power have induced the Secretary of the Navy to ask the President to cable Congress in support of this measure. The President cabled back that it should be adopted.

"It is not his position to determine the appropriation for the navy. That is our responsibility. Now that we have arrived at peace it is time for us to know the reason for the appropriation itself, and not to act merely because some one in the executive department desires it.

"Again it has been suggested in the House, and whispered among members in private, that the President desires this as a threat to force other nations to agree to his policy at the Peace Conference. Certainly if the President has a reason for this great navy, he ought to give it to us. I doubt if this is a threat if it would be a successful one.

"If it is a threat, and directed against Great Britain, (and gentlemen here have said that we must never rely on the navy of Great Britain again,) this bill would leave us where we would depend on the navy of Great Britain, because the President is given power to cancel the authorization at his discretion.

"I hope the President will be successful in his aspirations for a League of Nations. But I do not believe that the proper way to secure peace is for the Congress of the United States to say:

"'We propose to have a navy large enough to lick the world.'

"Reports will immediately go throughout the world that we are to contend with Great Britain for the largest navy, and that those who won the war have begun to quarrel at the Peace Conference. That is the gladdest piece of news that has reached Germany in many a long day."

REPORT I. W. W. PLOT AGAINST PRESIDENT

Man Seized in Cleveland Said to Have Conspired to Attempt Lives of Wilson and McAdoo.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 11.—Pietro Pierre, an alleged I. W. W. leader arrested today in Cleveland by Federal officers, was wanted in connection with an alleged conspiracy against the life of President Wilson and former Secretary W. G. McAdoo, according to local Government agents. Chicago apparently was the place where the plans were made, Federal officers said.

Pierre was released from the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth on Oct. 14, after serving a year and a half for opposition to the selective draft. Soon before his discharge from prison, Pierre is alleged to have told fellow-prisoners that he had been chosen to attack the President and to have added that he would go to Chicago for final instructions at I. W. W. headquarters there.

Friends of Wife He Divorced Object to Appointment.

Special to The New York Times.

RIPON, Wis., Feb. 11.—Friends of the former wife of Dr. George D. Herron, whom he divorced to become a protégé of a wealthy woman, have united in a formal protest against his appointment as an envoy to the Russian conference.

CHURCH PROTEST ON HERRON.

Newark Presbyterians Assert He Tried to Establish Free Love.

The Presbyterian Union of Newark last night adopted resolutions protesting against the appointment of George D. Herron as a representative of the United States to confer with the Bolsheviki.

The resolutions condemn Herron as a man who has "flagrantly violated the laws of God and man," and call upon President Wilson to revoke his appointment. They go into his past history and assert that he endeavored at one time to establish a free-love colony at Metuchen, N. J.

Serving Producer and Consumer

The Livestock Producer Wants
—The highest prices his cattle will bring.
—An assured market 12 months in the year.
—Selling outlets that cover the entire world.

The Meat Consumer Wants
—Meat at the lowest prices it can be bought.
—A stabilized supply, winter and summer alike.
—Distribution that brings the meat fresh, sweet and in prime condition.

These things Armour and Company are able to provide, because the Armour organization has kept pace with international needs.

When Armour began turning waste parts into saleable by-products, the farmer profited because it became possible to pay him on a basis for the whole animal, instead of for just the meat, hide and tallow. And as by-products provide for a large part of the production cost, the consumer pays less for his meat.

When Armour and Company started building refrigerator cars on a large scale, fresh beef, pork and mutton became at once available at all seasons and in all consuming centers. And with Armour branch houses to hold enough to make them independent of railroad uncertainties, and to distribute according to retailers' requirements, stock-growers have the encouragement of sure markets and consumers are assured a steady always-dependable supply.

There is nothing to prevent any packing concerns from building and operating their own refrigerator cars. Nor are they barred from conducting their own branch distributing houses.

The big point is that Armour and Company, realizing that a national business could not be conducted except on a national scale, have built these cars and provided necessary marketing facilities. The system is the outgrowth of necessity, and to render the service which is expected of it, must operate as a whole. It cannot be efficient piece-meal, or under scattered management. The very nature of the business is against that.

Time, and the utmost in co-ordination and efficiency, are first essentials in the successful handling of food-products. There can be only one way to realize the greatest efficiency under such circumstances, and that is to do it as Armour and Company are doing it—with preparation and shipping facilities under one comprehensive management.

BRING DEFIANT REDS HERE TO DEPORT

Advocates of Anarchy and Bolshevism Held on Ellis Island Awaiting Ships.

ATTACK SUPPOSED "SPY"

Soldiers Called to Quell Fight—Seattle Radicals Among Those to be Banished from America.

The first of the radicals whom the Government plans to ship out of the country arrived yesterday morning at Hoboken—fifty-seven men and one woman—and last night were held at Ellis Island by the immigration authorities, awaiting allotment to steamships which are to carry them back to the lands of their birth. In the contingent were disciples of Bolshevism, anarchy, terrorism, and members of the I. W. W. Following the best traditions of their beliefs the disturbers tried "direct action," soon after reaching Hoboken, by attacking an alleged Government spy, and announced they would fight deportation through the courts.

Miss Caroline A. Low, who said she was the I. W. W. attorney in Chicago, said last night that she would sue out writs of habeas corpus for the members of her organization. She had visited Acting Commissioner Byron Uhl at Ellis Island earlier in the day, but when she was unable to produce credentials showing her to be the counsel for the members of the I. W. W. in the detachment, permission was refused her to interview them. Commissioner Uhl informed Miss Low that all of yesterday's arrivals had full legal rights at the time of their conviction, and that he doubted very much whether any of the local Federal Judges would entertain any further petitions in their behalf.

The radicals reached the D., L. & W. terminal in Hoboken shortly before 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The agitators traveled in four tourist Pullman cars, which had carried soldiers to embarkation ports during the war. The cars were attached to regular passenger trains. Long before the scheduled arrival of the agitators the immigration barge William C. Moore tied up at a pier connecting with the terminal, and the Hoboken police reinforced by a number of private police under Chief Edward Beattie of the Lackawanna, picketed the path from train to barge, preventing anybody from approaching.

Apparently, the police had expected a large crowd of sympathizers to be on hand to make a demonstration, but when the train arrived the only spectators were early workbound commuters whose sympathy consisted of boos, groans and hisses. The radicals filed past a line of women and men whose faces showed no sympathy.

The prisoners came from the trains in two groups. The first consisted of about thirty men, exceptionally well dressed and carrying valises. The first group appeared to be made up chiefly of men from the Scandinavian countries. They went along quietly enough until they saw the camera men; then, seemingly scenting a chance for publicity, a big chap dropped his two suitcases, adjusted his flaming red tie, and shouted, "Three cheers for the Bolsheviki."

The effort fell flat. He got his three cheers, but there were gaps in them occasioned by prods from the immigrant guards walking alongside of the marchers. "To hell with America!" cried out another one of the group, but before his comrades could applaud this sentiment they were shoved vigorously on the barge, for the guards had had little sleep on the journey from the Pacific Coast and weren't feeling any too softhearted.

The members of the second contingent, who started from the cars as soon as the others were safely aboard, were not so well dressed and appeared to be of more radical type. In this group was the wife of Merta Peter Williamson, a Finnish agitator ordered out of the country. Mrs. Williamson strode along the pier with a most determined mien, a big, bulging umbrella under her arm, and letting the world know her I. W. W. convictions by a large red bow in her hat.

Cheers for the Bolsheviki.

The agitators in their brief parade to the barge William C. Moore shouted for the Bolsheviki and for the I. W. W. Their enthusiasm worked under a decided handicap and they were quickly hustled on the barge. As soon as the second group got on the boat, trouble began. As the last were going up the gangplank, one of the agitators, peering down from the barred windows of the boat's upper deck, shouted "Here he comes, the Government spy; let's 'get' that guy right now."

When the second contingent reached the second deck they were informed of the discovery of "the spy," and, including Mrs. Williamson with umbrella upraised, rushed at the suspected man. He was down in a moment and was beaten unconscious before the guards and police could interfere. Policeman Robert Parks of Hoboken was hit squarely on the nose and, dazed, went to the terminal drug store for treatment.

Special policemen and immigration agents rushed aboard the boat, but the radicals were at least holding their own when A. D. H. Jackson, Special Agent of the Seattle Immigration Bureau, in charge of the deportation, sent in a hurry call for aid from the army guard on the Hoboken piers. While the fight was gaining in intensity, the solders, twenty men, a Sergeant, and a Lieutenant, arrived. The soldiers had their automatic pistols strapped to their hips. They marched aboard the barge and that ended the fighting. The mere sight of the soldiers was enough, and all "direct action" ceased at once.

The agitators reached Ellis Island at 10 o'clock and under escort of the soldiers marched to the detention rooms. They were placed with other undesirable foreigners awaiting deportation and no unusual restrictions were placed upon them. Shortly after they arrived, Commissioner Uhl and Deputy Commissioner George Baker obtained the pedigrees of all but a few of the arrivals.

List of Those to be Deported.

In giving out the names, Commissioner Uhl said the men would be classified by nationality and in this way sent overseas. So far as he knew, he said, no New York radicals had yet been taken in the Federal net. He said that he understood that many others were destined to arrive at this port in the near future.

MAKE NEW TRAFFIC RULES.

Sweeping Changes in the Regulations of the Police Department.

Sweeping changes in the Police Department rules restricting various classes of traffic to particular streets are announced in a bulletin given out yesterday through the Traffic Court. So much dissatisfaction was caused by the rules announced by the Police Department in its bulletin of Aug. 23, 1918, that a series of conferences was called at Police Headquarters to discuss modifications, so that the charge of "unreasonable regulation" would be avoided.

In the old regulations traffic on most of the avenues was restricted either to passenger or commercial traffic as far north as 125th Street, but in the new regulations there are no restrictions above Fifty-ninth Street, except in Fifth and Park Avenues. Fifth Avenue is restricted to passenger traffic to 125th Street, and Park Avenue is restricted as far north as Ninety-sixth Street. Above Fifty-ninth Street all the other thoroughfares are open to all classes of traffic.

A modification of the hours of enforcement also has been made. Under the old regulations the restrictions were in force day and night, but under the new rules the restrictions are to be observed only from 7 A. M. to 6 P. M. At night all classes of traffic may use all thoroughfares, although the use of the restricted passenger thoroughfares by commercial vehicles is not to be encouraged. The revised list of restrictions follows:

COMMERCIAL VEHICLES ONLY.

First Av.—Houston St. to 59th St.
Third Av.—Fifth St. to 59th St.
Sixth Av.—Third St. to 59th St.
Eighth Av.—Abingdon Square to 23d St.
Tenth Av.—Fourteenth St. to 59th St.
Park Row—Chambers St. to Division St.
Bowery—Grand St. to 5th St.
Centre St.—Pearl St. to Broome St.
West Broadway—Vesey St. to 4th St.
Hudson St.—Chambers St. to 14th St.
Church St., Trinity Place—Fulton St. to Morris St.

PASSENGER VEHICLES ONLY.

Broadway—Bowling Green to Fulton St.; 34th St. to 59th St.
Lafayette St.—Duane St. to Astor Place.
Fourth and Park Avs.—Astor Place to 96th St.
Fifth Av.—Waverley Place to 110th St.
Seventh Av.—31st St. to 59th St.
Vanderbilt Av.—42d St. to 45th St.

RESTORED TO ALL TRAFFIC.

Second Avenue.
Seventh Av.—Greenwich Av. to 31st St., and north of 110th St.
Park Row—Duane St. to Division St.
Bowery—Canal St. to Division St.
Madison Avenue.
Park Av.—North of 96th St.
All other thoroughfares and sections of thoroughfares not specified as restricted.

Privileges under the restrictions are given to all classes of vehicles. If a commercial truck is required to make several stops to deliver or collect merchandise along five blocks in a restricted thoroughafre, it is permitted to travel the entire distance without turning into an intersecting street. Nor do the restrictions apply to daily newspaper wagons, vehicles of the fire, police or other city departments, United States mail wagons, military cars, ambulances, automobiles of licensed physicians; nor to emergency repair wagons of public service corporations.

John Grant Lyman Convicted.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 11.—John Grant Lyman, known internationally under that and other names, was found guilty in the criminal court here today of forgery in connection with the purchase of Liberty bonds. Sentence was suspended pending an appeal. Lyman went under the name of A. O. Brown here. According to the police, he was released from the Federal prison at Atlanta last July.

GLASS SEES BIG TASK IN WAR PROHIBITION

Asks Congress Not to Put the Burden of It on Revenue Bureau.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Secretary Glass is strongly opposed to Congress placing responsibility for enforcement of National prohibition upon the Bureau of Internal Revenue. His views were set forth in a letter today to Representative Carlin, Chairman of the House Judiciary Sub-Committee, which is considering legislation for enforcement for prohibition.

"This bureau," said the letter, "is now, as you know, burdened to the uttermost with the administration of a very comprehensive and technical tax law, which will engage its every facility to administer adequately and equitably. The enforcement of war prohibition has no relation whatever to the collection of the revenue, and a law which is exclusively of a police character would certainly complicate, if it would not endanger, the effective administration of the tax laws."

Denmark Not to Cede Greenland.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The Danish Legation denied today that Denmark was ready to cede Greenland to Canada. The statement issued by the legation says that the Danes, on the contrary, are extending their "dominion" in Greenland, and asserts that when the Danish West Indies, now the Virgin Islands, were ceded to the United States Secretary Lansing went on record as not objecting to the extension of the political and economic interests of Denmark to the whole of Greenland.

Put Strike in War Board's Hands.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The National War Labor Board will intervene to settle the textile strike at Paterson, N. J., under an agreement reached today by representatives of both sides in conference with officials of the Department of Labor. The board will proceed immediately with its investigation, and both employes and employers will abide by its decision. The strikers also will be expected to return to work pending a decision.

SENDS CASE BACK TO RABBIS

Orthodox Jewish Court to Settle Brothers' Dispute.

An appeal from a rabbinical court was heard yesterday in the Court of Chancery by Vice Chancellor John Griffin in Jersey City, who, agreeably to all concerned, sent it back to the rabbinical court for judgment. The members of the rabbinical court, with full black beards and wearing black broadcloth garments and black skull caps, sat together facing the Vice Chancellor and gave close attention. They were Rabbis Charles H. Hirschensohn of Hoboken, Isaac Idelsohn of Jersey City, and Isaac Fiegel of Bayonne.

The litigants, Michael H. Harris of 23 Jewett Avenue and Max Harris of West Hoboken, brothers, have prospered in the plate glass business. Two years ago Michael H. Harris bought sixh apartment houses, 707 to 717 Ocean Avenue, Jersey City, from Dr. Otto Albanesius for $84,000. A few months later Michael sold the houses to Max, and then they formed a parnership in ownership.

Their accounts became involved, and they submitted the case to the rabbis, who directed Michael to pay a specified amount to Max, which Michael did; but it was not satisfactory. Robert S. Hudspeth, for Michael H. Harris, and Abram Levitan reviewed the case yesterday on Max's application for an accounting. Mr. Hudspeth said his client and his client's brother believed the case should be settled by the rabbis, as they are orthodox Jews. If the rabbis fail to effect a settlement, the case will be argued before Vice Chancellor Lewis.

AMERICANS THEIR VICTIMS.

Robbers That Preyed on Soldiers Discovered at Vichy, France.

VICHY, France, Feb. 11.—The police have discovered the headquarters of a gang which has been robbing Americans in this region. Four members of the gang have been arrested, and the police are looking for others.

Connecticut House Votes Dry.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 11.—The Connecticut House of Representatives this afternoon voted in favor of ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment 153 to 96. A week ago the Senate refused to ratify the amendment by a vote of 20 to 14.

MARMON 34

The Closed Car Classic

On Exhibit at Our Showrooms

Art and engineering formed an alliance and the Marmon Closed Carriage came forth. It is Beauty and Luxury put to work in the interest of Comfort and Utility.

Rubay and other noted masters produced the coachwork. And replicas could not be created on other than the Marmon Chassis. Its long, low, unincumbered construction brings the floor-boards so close to the ground that the over-all height of the car is only 79½ inches.

Yet the interior has ample headroom. The doors are wide, the interior commodious and the decorations superbly conceived and carried out.

The Marmon Town Car, 4-Door Family Sedan, Limousine and Landaulet are all that they appear to be—noble in their line and grace, bird-like in acceleration and riding ease—indomitable in energy.

Marmon Closed Cars are 1100 pounds lighter—they even weigh less than open cars of equal size and power but of other manufacture.

You are cordially invited to come and view the Marmon Cars that attracted so much admiration at the recent New York Automobile Show. Here you can examine them leisurely and experience the comfort and riding ease for which they are noted.

The disease germ is more dangerous than the mad dog

If a foaming-mouthed, wild-eyed maniac of a mad dog charged at a crowd of children, you know what you would do.

Every ounce of chivalry in your being would be in the quick spring that would land you between the children and danger.

But how about the unseen menace—more threatening—more fatal—more cruel—than a million mad dogs—the disease germ.

The danger spots in the home—places where germs positively will breed unless these places are regularly disinfected, are garbage cans, cuspidors, toilets, sinks, drains, dark, sunless corners and wherever flies gather or breed.

You can make the danger-places in your home completely germ-proof by the regular use of

for no germ can live in its presence.

Lysol is invaluable for Personal Hygiene.

Lysol is economical; a 50c bottle makes 5 gallons of powerful disinfectant, enough to last for months; a 25c bottle makes 2 gallons. Get a bottle today—use it regularly—you will then make a better fight against disease than disease can make against you.

Remember, there is but one true Lysol—the product made, bottled, signed and sealed by Lehn & Fink.

Lysol Toilet Soap
Contains Lysol, and therefore protects the skin from germ infection. It is refreshingly soothing and healing and helpful for improving the skin. Ask your dealer. If he hasn't it, ask him to order it for you.

Lysol Shaving Cream
Contains Lysol, and kills germs on razor and shaving-brush (where germs abound), guards the tiny cuts from infection, and gives the antiseptic shave. If your dealer hasn't it, ask him to order a supply for you.

DEFENDS SECURITY LEAGUE.

But Parker Admits He Did Not Indorse Some of Its Methods.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Alton B. Parker, Honorary Vice President of the National Security League, testified today before the special House committee investigating its political activities in the last Congressional campaign, that the organization was actuated solely by patriotic motives. Judge Parker said that, while he had little to do with the actual work of the league, he had kept himself well informed regarding its activities and had attended several meetings of the Executive Committee

Questioned as to the Congressional chart circulated by the league, Judge Parker said: "I objected to it, at an executive session of the league on the ground that the league had no right to label the votes on the preparedness measure as 'right' or 'wrong.'"

Judge Parker added that a resolution was presented to prevent circulation of the chart and that he voted in favor of it, but left before the decision on the resolution was reached. Later, he said, he learned it was defeated, 6 to 5. He conceded the chart was unfair to many Congressmen, because it carried only a partial report of their war records, and said he was sorry a mistake like that had happened.

Asked by Representative Walsh of Massachusetts if it was not fair to assume that the league had selected him as Honorary Vice President to give the organization an appearance of being nonpartisan, the witness said probably that was true, but he believed the league really had been nonpartisan at all times and was still. He admitted that his name was used over campaign literature which he had never seen and knew nothing of.

Prisoner Gives Clue to Spies.

OSSINING, Feb. 11.—William Meyer, a Sing Sing prisoner, it was learned from the prison today, has revealed to the police the names of alleged German spies, who were reporting the departure of transports with American troops and other vessels before the armistice was signed. The information he gave was immediately placed in the hands of Federal investigators. Meyer is of German extraction.

C. E. HUGHES QUITS BROOKLYN GREETERS

In Resigning Honorary Post Says He Entirely Sympathizes with Jonas's Action.

20 OTHERS OFF COMMITTEE

Representatives of Two Brooklyn Women's Societies Out Because of Hearst Influence.

Charles E. Hughes, who resigned from the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to the Homecoming Troops because he did not wish to serve with William Randolph Hearst, quit the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee yesterday in protest against the efforts of the Hearst sympathizers to dictate the action of the Executive Committee.

Mr. Hughes was chosen an honorary Vice President when Colonel Roosevelt was asked to become honorary Chairman. His letter to Borough President Riegelmann of Brooklyn read:

"I must ask you to accept my resignation as one of the honorary Vice Presidents of the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee. I accepted this position at the invitation of Nathan S. Jonas, and I entirely sympathize with the action he has taken."

Delaney Refuses to Comment.

John J. Delaney, who was appointed Chairman of the committee when Mr. Jonas resigned because influence was exerted by the Hearst sympathizers through the Borough President to force the cancellation of an invitation to James M. Beck to speak at one of the celebration meetings, said he would not comment upon the resignation of Mr. Hughes. Neither would Borough President Reigelmann comment, although Mr. Hughes is not the first of the honorary members to withdraw. Twenty other resignations were reported yesterday.

Representatives of two women's societies in Brooklyn also notified Borough President Reigelmann of the withdrawal of their delegations from the committee. The members who were withdrawn by Battle Pass Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution were: Mrs. Fred H. Baldwin, Regent; Mrs. D. C. Johnson, Mrs. William H. Dumond, Mrs. Nathaniel Robinson, Mrs. Berton L. Maxfield, and Mrs. Walter M. Barnaby.

The Chiropean, second largest women's club in Brooklyn, also withdrew its members on the committee and sent this notice to Borough President Reigelmann:

"Chiropean has instructed the committee recently appointed as her representatives in the Brooklyn Victory Celebration to withdraw, as the club declines to be associated with any movement dominated by Hearst influence. The resignations are to take effect immediately."

Members of the Chiropean Club who withdrew were Mrs. Julia F. Ring, Chairman of the delegation; Mrs. Eugene J. Grant, Mrs. William Benjamin Hale, Mrs. Oscar Shadbolt, Mrs. George Harman, and Mrs. Ralph Tiebout. Other citizens who resigned yesterday were Edward C. Delafield, the banker; Mrs. Dorothy L. Low, Clarence A. Hebb, Dr. E. Rodney Fiske, Grace Ingraham, Lewis H. Losee, Herman Neaderland, and Laura L. Steele.

Tells of Expenses Under Jonas.

Chairman Delaney of the Victory Committee yesterday issued a statement declaring that the overhead expenses under Mr. Jonas were $10,000 and had reduced the total of the fund from $40,000 to $30,000. He added that he intended to recruit volunteer workers and hire only discharged soldiers when it was necessary to pay employes.

yesterday gave out a series of letters sent by patriotic and civic organizations to the Legislature urging support of the resolution calling for the appointment of a State committee to welcome the soldiers. The organizations sending the letters were the American Rights League, American Relief Legion, Bel Canto Club, Brooklyn Women's War Relief Committee, Congress Club of Kings County, the Treasure and Trinket Fund of the National Special Aid Society, and the Athenaeum Club.

TWO MORE DIVISIONS PREPARE FOR HOME

26th and 35th Are Soon to be Assigned for Convoy—12,000 More Troops on the Way.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—General Pershing notified the War Department to-day that he had ordered the 26th (New England) and 35th (Missouri and Kansas) divisions to prepare for return home. Neither division has been assigned for early convoy, but they probably will be added to the list soon.

Reduction of hospital facilities in France to conform with the continued reduction of army personnel was indicated today by a War Department announcement that a number of base hospitals had been assigned to early convoy. Those included in today's list were Nos. 3, 6, 13, 20, 25, 30, 35, 48, evacuation hospital No. 34 and Mobile hospital No. 1.

Other units assigned to early convoy today were the 139th Field Battalion, Signal Corps; 9th, 11th, 42d and 43d Balloon Companies; 227th Aero Squadron, and Quartermaster Casual Company 5.

Departure from France of seven transports and two warships, carrying approximately 12,000 troops, was announced today by the War Department. They will arrive at New York and Newport News between Feb. 16 and 20.

The transports are the Ortega, Canopic, Rotterdam, Northland, and West Durfee, for New York, and the President Grant and Tiger for Newport News. The battleship Georgia goes to Newport News, and the cruiser St. Louis to New York.

The 164th Infantry complete, practically all of the 162d Infantry and part of the 161st Infantry of the 41st Division, composed of National Guard troops from Washigton, Oregon, Montana, North Dakota and the District of Columbia, are included in the units now en route home.

The President Grant, due on Feb. 20, carries the 164th Infantry complete, and the supply company and Company K of the 162d Infantry, both of the 41st Division, routed to Camp Dix. About four thousand officers and men, in addition to a number of casual officers and more than seven hundred sick and wounded are aboard, with Brigadier Gen. Albert H. Blanding, commanding the 184th Infantry Brigade.

The Northland, due on Feb. 19, is bringing the 2d Anti-Aircraft Machine-gun Battalion for Camp Upton; headquarters of the 3d Battalion and detachments of Batteries E and F, 351st Field Artillery, for Camp Meade; the remainder of Company D, 162d Infantry, for Camp Dix, and a company of New York casuals, with 230 casual officers.

The cruiser St. Louis will reach New York on Feb. 20 with Companies E, F and G, 161st Infantry, 41st Division, for Camp Dix; casual companies for New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio and 20 casual officers, a total of 1,400.

The Canopic is due on Feb. 17 with Companies A, B, C and part of Company D, staff, headquarters and machine-gun company and medical detachment of the 162d Infantry of the 41st Division, composed of 34 officers and 1,201 men, routed to Camp Dix for demobilization. There are in addition about 175 casuals, mostly officers.

The Rotterdam, due on Feb. 16, has on board Companies G, L, K, I and M, the staff and the headquarters company of the 367th Infantry, 92d Division, 51 officers and 1,484 men, routed to Camp Meade; part of Company D, 162d Infantry, for Camp Dix, division headquarters and the headquarters troop of the 92d Division, for Camp Meade, Cement Mill Company 8, for Camp Dix and evacuation hospital 5, New York. There are on the ship also 290 casual officers and 172 wounded or sick officers, including Brigadier Gen. Edward Burr and Brigadier Gen. James B. Erwin.

He should live to be 90

TWO happy children laughing and romping together. Grandfather is just as young in spirit as grandson because he is rich-blooded and red-blooded, and therefore healthy and vigorous.

Why should any man or woman drop hopelessly out of the race of life because the hair is gray and middle age has long since departed? A ripe and lively old age is the reward of keeping the blood healthy and vigorous. Gude's Pepto-Mangan aids in making and keeps the blood rich and pure.

It builds the blood from its foundations, the red cells. Sluggish appetite grows keen. Color returns to wan cheeks. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is easy to digest and exceedingly pleasant to taste. The medical profession prescribes it.

BUILT to command the respect of all truck users, and thus advertise itself over and over again both to the merchant who has been fortunate enough to choose an Atlas—for his business—and to his competitor who sees this wonderful three-quarter-ton truck perform.

By its performance only has the Atlas earned the respect of all who know it. 47% of all Atlas fleets started with a single truck, which in every case repeated itself again and again, winning the Good Will of every man that used it on pure, substantial merit.

ATLAS OVERSIZE
3/4 TON TRUCK

"Oversize" means that the Atlas is big where the average truck is little. Powerful at the particular point where the other truck is weak. And that its built-in superiority is of the kind that will keep each Atlas running when every Atlas competitor has reached its ultimate destination—the scrap heap.

3½-in. by 5-in. 35 H. P. motor, truck type—with 192.4 cubic inch piston displacement. Rear axle of full-ton capacity. Propeller shaft and universal 1½ ton, 2 ton model. Steering gear 1½ ton model. Chassis (118-in. wheel base). Dreadnaught type, armorclad radiator. 50 types of oversize bodies—7 feet, 6 inches back of driver's seat.

$4,900 FOR A VAN MARCKE

Bouguereau's "Young Mother and Child" Brings $3,750—95 Paintings Total $66,557.

Returns for the works of modern artists the second night of the estates sales of ninety-five pictures under the auspices of the American Art Association at the Plaza brought $66,557. A Corot, "Les Jeux du Berger et de la Bergère," brought the highest price, going to the Ralston Galleries for $6,900. "The White Cow and the Herd," Van Marcke, went to John Levy for $4,900, and a second Van Marcke, "Sheep, Cattle, and Landscape," went to the same buyer for $4,200. A Bouguereau, "Young Mother and Child," a dark-haired young woman holding in her arms a nude blond baby, went to Clapp & Graham for $3,750.

"Woodland Worship," the finest of the three Monticellis in the collection, went to C. W. Kraushaar for $1,100. An Inness, "Golden Sunset," went to Scott & Fowles for $3,500, and an Israels panel, "The Newborn," went to Knoedler & Co. for $3,200. The total returns for the sale was $115,397. This was minus a few dollars lost in the resale of three of the first evening's pictures last night.

SAYS FILIPINOS ARE LOYAL.

Governor Harrison Tells of Their Part in the Great War.

Francis Burton Harrison, Governor General of the Philippines, speaking last night at the fourth annual dinner of the Retail Millinery Association of America at the Hotel Astor, referred to the part Filipinos played in the war as proof that the American policy of conciliation was a success.

"During the war," he said, "this race of people was intensely and devotedly loyal to the cause of the United States. They raised a division of Filipino volunteers for Federal service; they presented a destroyer and submarine to the American Navy; they greatly oversubscribed their quota in the Liberty loans and gave generously to the aid of the Red Cross and other war work. All of this is a practical demonstration of high ideals of government.

"A policy of suppression, a policy of exploitation, a vigorous application of the old-time theory of colonial government would have produced the old-time sullenness and discontent. America was criticised, even ridiculed in some quarters for altruism in dealing with this problem. The idea of training a tropical people for independence was thought too idealistic and impractical. Quite the contrary was the result. Once again idealism has been shown to be the moving force in working out the destinies of nations. If you can reach the heart of the people you can lift them forward and upward. That is what America has done in the Philippines."

Harry S. Bernard, President of the Retail Millinery Association, presided at the dinner, which was attended by more than 1,200 members and guests. The latest styles in hats were shown by models.

BUYS OLD COLONIAL HOUSE.

Art Museum to Show Eight Decorated Rooms of Period 1761.

It is hoped in the not far future that there may be a wing in the Metropolitan Museum of Art where in appropriate setting it may house the large quantities of beautiful furniture of which it has notable collections. This hoped-for wing was mentioned yesterday at the museum by Director Edward Robinson in announcing the purchase of a famous old Colonial house in Portsmouth, N. H., known as the Wentworth-Gardner house, the interior of which, eight beautifully decorated rooms, in the style of the period 1761, are to be brought to the museum and will furnish the background needed in a part of the contemplated wing.

This fine old house, situated on the water front, was built by a prosperous New England merchant, Mark Hunking Wentworth, for his youngest son Thomas, upon whose death it was acquired by a Colonel Gardner of local prominence during the Revolution. The house was simply planned, a long hall passing directly through the house on the first and second floors, with two rooms on either side of the hall. There are wainscotings, pilasters and moldings, and the fireplace walls of each of the eight rooms are paneled from floor to ceiling, as is the upper hall. The paneling along the side of the lower flight of stairs is made from a single piece of wood. The house was purchased from Wallace Nutting and was one of a chain of old-time houses belonging to him. The museum explains that it does not approve of dismantling old houses which might remain as historic memorials, but that this house if not taken by the museum would have been purchased by a private buyer who would have transported it to another State for his own use.

In addition to these, which are still in their original place in Portsmouth, the museum has received as a gift a couple of beautiful old Colonial mantelpieces which may be seen in the recent accessions room this month. These were presented to the museum by Francis P. Garvan and were made a few years following the War of 1812. They came from an old house not far from Carlisle, Penn. They are of the Adam model, and the ornament is of the kind introduced by the Adam brothers, made from plaster, resin, and size squeezed into molds of earthenware or boxwood, molded and fastened to the woodwork by means of brads.

The house from which they were taken had evidently some close connection with the history in making at the time, the decorations show. In the centre panel of one is shown the victorious battle of Lake Erie, and it is gay with scrolls and flowers. The central panel of the second mantelpiece would be strange but for its historic significance. There is a sarcophagus with weeping willows on either side, with birds of peace in the branches. An American eagle originally surmounted the sarcophagus, and the design is a variation of the decoration shown on the tomb of Washington. Upon the sarcophagus can be seen the words, "To the Memory of Departed Heroes." The name of the designer can also be made out by use of a glass.

The interesting exhibit of the work of manufacturers and designers in the museum may be seen until Feb. 16, when it will be removed. The Isaac Fletcher collection in the exhibition room will remain until March 4. An interesting loan exhibition, to open April 7, will be one of the paintings of Gustave Courbet, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of his birth. It will last six weeks. An exhibition of posters made by children in the elementary schools was opened on Monday, and will continue until March 1.

In the February number of the Museum Bulletin there will appear an open letter from the President of the Museum, Robert de Forest, telling of the value of the big free concerts which have been given at the Museum through the generosity of a friend of the institution and of the desirability of continuing this line of art effort. He tells of the interest, as shown by the attendance, there being 781 visitors at the first of six concerts and a rapid increase at each one following, until at the sixth and last 7,066 persons listened to the music. Mr. de Forest says that $1,000 will pay for a concert, $4,000 for a series of four and $100,000 would endow a series in perpetuity. "The Museum is no beggar," says Mr. de Forest in conclusion, "but it owes it to its friends the knowledge of such an opportunity. It should not be the perquisite of the Trustees. Who responds? Reply to the Secretary."

Director Edward Robinson also writes of the deep appreciation of the audiences, in which were all classes of people, among them many music teachers and music students. Money has already been given since the writing of the letters for another series of four concerts, to be given on Saturday evenings, beginning March 8.

POPULATION OF FRANCE CUT 750,000 IN 4 YEARS

This Diminution, Which Is Outside of War Losses, Is Chiefly Due to Low Birth Rate.

PARIS, Feb. 11, (Associated Press.)—The civilian population of France in four years has been decreased by considerably over three-quarters of a million, without including the deaths in occupied Northern France or the losses due directly to the war.

Official statistics show that in 1913 the births outnumbered the deaths by 17,000. But this slight excess disappeared in the following year, since which time the deaths have outnumbered the births—in 1914 by more than 50,000, and in 1915, 1916, and 1917 by nearly 300,000 in each year. The total excess of deaths over births for these four years is given as 883,160.

Births, which numbered approximately 600,000 in 1913, dropped to 315,000 in 1916, and 343,000 in 1917, while the deaths increased, but not in comparable proportions, so that the total decrease in population was due to the great diminution in births, and not to any great increase in deaths.

The statistics cover seventy-seven departments, excluding the eleven invaded departments and not including 1,400,000 persons killed in the war.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Society of American Singers today at the Park Theatre has a holiday matinee of "Robin Hood," and so great is the demand that for the rest of the engagement there will be regular Wednesday matinees.

A rehearsal of Catalani's "Loreley" will take place this morning at 11 at the Lexington, the first of the Chicago company's many productions here to have a tryout in private before its premiere.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan attended a performance of Maeterlinck's play "Pelleas et Melisande," at the French Theatre last evening.

Otto H. Kahn was among the guests at a concert of the Greenwich House Music School pupils last evening at the Cosmopolitan Club.

OPERA

By James Gibbons Huneker

Mary Garden as Cleopatre.

"Cleopatre," opera in four acts, music by Jules Massenet, book by Louis Payen, was sung in French for the first time here last night at the Lexington Theatre by the Chicago Opera Association, with the following cast:

Marc Antoine	Alfred Maguenat
Spakos	Charles Fontaine
Ennius	Gustave Huberdeau
Amnhes	Constantin Nicolay
Severus	Desire Defrere
L'Esclave	John Leemans
Cleopatre	Mary Garden
Octavie	Annie Fitziu
Charmion	Marie Pruzan
Adamos	Vallya Karelli

Conductor—Marcel Charlier.
Incidental dances by Andreas Pavley, Serge Oukrainsky, and Corps de Ballet.

Though this was the first hearing of the work in New York, it has been presented before Chicago audiences a season ago when the impersonation of the supersubtle serpent of old Nile by Mary Garden caused much comment, critical and otherwise. The libretto states that the conception of M. Payen radically differs from Shakespeare's tragedy—a rather superfluous remark. It does considerably differ, the principal difference being that Shakespeare wrote great poetry as well as great drama.

Payen's attempt resolves itself into a series of tableaux, the characterization generalized, his verse respectably tepid. In a word, not the Queen that Shakespeare drew. Of this Cleopatre you dare not say: "Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale her infinite variety." She is more germane to that Queen shown us in the sumptuous prose of Theophile Gautier's "Une Nuit de Cleopatre" than the imperial courtesan who turned the head of Antony and stirred the pulse of Julius Caesar to the supreme tune of Shakespeare's music.

There is plenty of action, picturesque episodes, and at least one brutal scene. Of love and the talk of love there is no end. Yet it is all not convincing. Moving pictures. You think of Gérôme, of Le Nouy, of the hundred and one painters who have celebrated on canvas this seductive creature of old Egypt. "For her own person, it beggar'd all description: she did lie in her pavilion, cloth-of-gold of tissue, o'er-picturing that Venus where we see the fancy out-work nature."

"Cleopatre" last night was Massenet and Lady Duff-Gordon. Brackish-sweet, it was the ultimate expression of musical impotence. Clever craftsman Massenet could turn out martial music and amorous, the clangor of trumpets and voluptuous, dizzy dance measures. But here it is generally bosh. Languid, enervating, it attained a feeble climax in the ballet of the penultimate act. Ambiguous shapes and attitudes crowded the scene. Two dancers slipped and fell, but the recovery was so swift that the tumbled ensemble seemed a veritable climax. Cleopatre cynically regarded this daring symbolism, though Marc-Antoine seemed rather shocked. And he should have been. Musically speaking, nothing happened in Act I.; less followed in Act II., while Act III. was a glittering triumph of vacuity. In the last act the asp played protagonist. As its name did not figure on the program, it probably died from envy, or else inanition, doubtless humming Will Shakespeare's mournful lay, "I am dying, Egypt, dying."

But the Cleopatre! A youthful Sphinx, her entrance on the great burnished barge was an evocation. As she faced Antoine on his throne so must have looked Sheba's Queen before the majesty of Solomon. It would have been trying on the nerves of the most pudic potentate from Herod down. A saucy lad, in a later scene, Cleopatre got in a mix-up at an early Egyptian boozing ken. An extraordinary apparition, a fantastic faun of Aubrey Beardsley caught the roving riggish eye of the disguised Queen. She encouraged the advances of the anonymous animal. An Adonis à rebours. Pavley was this delicate monster and his subtle rhythms made Cleopatre shiver. Here the music was too prudish.

Stravinsky or Richard Strauss would have given the screw another enharmonic wrench. Act III. saw the Queen attired at once so sonorously and exquisitely, that the vast audience gasped with admiration. It is the tavern scene that will save the tawdry work. It is already town talk and there are rumors of its sensationalism at midnight. The anatomical wigwagging of the two golden lads set the lobby buzzing. "Cleopatre" is doomed to packed houses in the future. Nothing succeeds like true spirituality.

Mary Garden was Cleopatre, as she was Melisande and Thais. It is not a rôle that taxes her resources or her personal pulchritude. All she did was to look beautiful and turn on the full voltage of her blandishments. Men went to the ground before that dynamic yet veiled glance like soldiers facing a machine gun. It is uncanny the emotion she projects across the footlights and with such simple but cerebral means.

That she would have been burned at the stake a few centuries ago, this lovely witch, is no conjecture. Her nose is not "tip-tilted like the petal of a flower," as Cleopatra's is said to have been; nevertheless, she is the tawny Egyptian. And she has never spoken so eloquently as in this parlando part. Perhaps the most poignant criticism was carelessly uttered by a big policeman who had strayed in during the garden scene. "Some Queen," he said. And the definitive words had been spoken. Fie on naughty professional opinions after that memorial phrase!

The general performance was mediocre. Maguenet excepted. A warrior and the great lover, he looked every inch Marc Antoine—a Gallic Marc, be it understood. He was not in the best of voice, but what he sang was admirably expressed. Miss Fitziu was brilliant in her first scene, but later was rather shaky and, of course, her hearers promptly seized the opportunity of making a demonstration. But the best regulated audiences sometimes do the wrong thing. Miss Fitziu was much better in "Isabeau."

There were tumultuous curtain calls for Miss Garden, Miss Fitziu, for Maguenet and Fontaine. Also for Mary Garden solo. She was really wonderful. Theda Bara will be forgotten. In a box sat beautiful Olive Fremstad, the great Isolde, and her singing thoughts must have been profound, for the air was vibrating with little unborn tonal productions clamoring for utterance. There was not much chance last night for them in the chaos of queer and throaty vocal noises.

JOHN GALSWORTHY ARRIVES.

Author Says England Is Undergoing a Period of Reconstruction.

John Galsworthy, author and playwright, who arrived yesterday on the Carmania from England to attend the celebration of the centenary of James Russell Lowell at the invitation of President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia, said that England was undergoing a period of reconstruction which would last for some time.

While the output of literature had increased during the war, he said, the drama had been seriously hampered. He has a play which was put on in London last year, called "Foundations." He described it a slight comedy. Apart from the James Russell Lowell celebration Mr. Galsworthy said he had not formed any definite plans regarding his stay in America, but he might deliver a few addresses.

PLAY "POEM OF ECSTASY."

Philadelphia Orchestra Gives Matinee Concert—Letz Quartet.

The Philadelphia Orchestra gave the fourth and last but one of its matinée concerts in New York this season before a large audience yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall. Familiarity breeds respect for the big band under Mr. Stokowski, and frequent hearing has removed much of the feeling of propaganda, of musical problems and posturings, now that these musicians come not as strangers but as friends. The high light of yesterday's concert was Scriabin's "Poem of Ecstasy."

Here was the last neo-Scythian (save Prokofieff) surveying a musical cataclysm of all before "Tristan," like Macaulay's New Zealander on London Bridge viewing the ruins of St. Paul's. The work was played with a grasp of forces that fairly brushed volcanic fires into rainbows. Olga Samaroff had the solo number, Brahms's pianoforte concerto in B flat, rather over-refined for vigorous Brahms, and conducted by the player's husband from a score instead of memory, as is oftener his custom. There was also Beethoven's overture, "Leonore," No. 3, at start of the matinée.

The Letz Quartet last evening in Aeolian Hall gave its second concert of the year, with Louis Svecenski, viola of the Kneisels, assisting in the quintet, Op. 111, of Brahms, the intimate, musical, yet manly Brahms. For prelude there was Haydn's D-minor quartet, No. 76 of the Paris edition, and in conclusion the G minor, Op. 27, of Grieg.

Beryl Rubinstein, a young pianist of famous name, appeared last night before the Humanitarian Society in Carnegie Hall.

CHICAGO OPERAS NEXT WEEK

"Carmen," "Crispino," "Dinorah," "Fedora," "Werther" in Repertoire.

The Chicago Opera Association yesterday announced its fourth week at the Lexington, including again but one repetition, Mary Garden in "Thais" next Wednesday night. She will also appear Saturday night, Feb. 22, for the first time at popular prices, with Fontaine and Baklanoff in "Carmen." That will be Mr. Campanini's twenty-fourth production here in one month.

Mme. Galli-Curci will sing next Monday in "Crispino," with Trevisan, Claessens, Stracciari, Arimondi, and others, including William Rogerson, a new tenor. The prima donna will sing on Thursday week in "Dinorah," with the cast heard at her début last year, except Virgilio Lazzari, the new bass, and Conductor Campanini.

Rosa Raisa is unable to rejoin the company after a recent operation, but "Trovatore" will be produced as planned next Tuesday, with Dolci, Peralta, Van Gordon, Rimini, Lazzari, led by Polacco. The Friday opera is "Fedora," with Dolci and Dorothy Jardon, a young American soprano, as well as Frank St. Leger, Stracciari, and Huberdeau.

John O'Sullivan will sing "Werther" at the Saturday matinée, Washington's Birthday, with Pavloska, Sharlow, Maguenat, Huberdeau, and others, led by Hasselmans. The week opens with the usual concert at the Hippodrome.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

Secretary GLASS asks for greater discretion regarding the Victory Loan than Secretary MCADOO had regarding the Liberty loans, and greater perhaps than any finance minister ever had. It is clear that he contemplates making the fifth loan the vehicle for refunding. That is the inference from his proposal that Congress give him a free hand regarding the rate of interest upon any bonds maturing not later than ten years from their date, and authorizing prepayment at any premium he may fix. The second 4s, the second 4¼s, and the third 4¼s, a total of nearly eight billions, fall within that classification. A somewhat similar amount of longer term, earlier issued, and more fully tax exempt bonds apparently are to be left undisturbed. As all bonds now show a discount, a provision for a premium seems premature. But it is the custom of the United States to prepay its bonds, and the premium exacted for the privilege has sometimes been exorbitant. As the authorized aggregate is to be $25,000,000,000, the bonds for which the Secretary does not presently ask these powers are likely to run to their longer maturities, the optional period being 1932-1947. Present interest, therefore, centres in the refunded and newly issued Victory bonds.

The Secretary alone knows what his policy is, for the details are not given, and doubtless will not be settled until market conditions become known. Be those conditions what they may, the Secretary would be justified in making his terms whatever will most cheaply restore something like par to the issues now at a discount of nearly two years' interest from the recent issue price, and within 3 points or so of the 10 per cent. margin on which billions of them are carried in bank loans. It is undesirable that loans should be called or more margin be asked on loans on Federal bonds. It would cost the country more than the added interest which might be necessary to restore the par theory to which the Treasury is pledged. To be sure, no Government bonds now command par except by accident and for short periods. But our bond buyers—some thirty millions of them—have been taught that a discount is an indication of deteriorated credit, and the result is that it is necessary to create credit so extravagantly good that a premium will keep the bonds above par. The theory is costly, but reeducation now is difficult.

The privileges which are designed apparently to correct the discounts now current are confined to "subscribers." That discrimination between original subscribers and owners by purchase at a discount is justified. The sales in the market free the Treasury from obligation to the subscribers, and the purchasers at a discount take their own risks. Original subscribers who hold their bonds will play the Treasury no market tricks, and events have shown that the Treasury cannot sustain the market par theory for all bonds. Neither is it under any obligation toward in-and-out traders. The par theory cannot be pressed so far. But it does not appear that the subscribers are to be privileged also regarding the sinking fund purchases. A sufficient reason is that it is to the interest of the country that sinking fund purchases shall be made as cheaply as possible. The discount which impedes loan flotations helps loan retirements. Good business has been done in this line recently, although the totals are not published.

The Secretary alone knows the needs or uses of ten billions of interest-bearing "noncirculating" Treasury notes. If they are not to circulate they must be made non-negotiable, for even bonds circulate to such an extent that the Treasury has rebuked the practice of using them for cash substitutes. There is no lack of circulation of any sort, and there are better sorts than Treasury notes. The exemption of War Savings certificates from income surtaxes is not a great matter, unless the demand from income surtax payers should be greater than expected. But the more exemptions the less their worth. There is no deficiency of exempt issues, and if they were fewer the discount on them would be less. The Secretary asks authority also to finance trade as well as the Treasury. That is the interpretation of request for authority to buy bonds of foreign countries after the termination of the war, and for authority for the War Finance Corporation to assist private traders in the same manner.

There is more in the bill, but this suffices to show that it is little less than a request for full authority. That even the complete text does not disclose the plan fully is indicated by the Secretary's saying that he is sure the committees of both houses will want to discuss the subject with him. They could hardly be expected to adopt the bill without further explanation, and debates might instruct the country, under other conditions. But what opportunity is there for debate when Congress is at its fag end, with a crush of business before this was introduced? Secretary MCADOO made such good use of his discretion, and Secretary GLASS's experience has been so wide and his record so good, that it is possible to hope for even better results on this greater scale. But where everything is left to discretion all depends upon discretion, and about unused discretion no opinion can prudently be given.

NOT SERIOUS.

We should be concerned for the success of the Peace Conference at Paris if the negotiations did not develop tiffs and differences. They are an indication that the statesmen engaged in the work have definite opinions, that they have formed plans. Naturally they do not hold the same opinions, they have not formed the same plans. It is the business of statesmanship to reach international agreements by well-considered conciliations.

Peace conferences always breed rows. Czar ALEXANDER was continually threatening to withdraw from the Congress of Vienna. He scolded the Emperor of Austria about METTERNICH, demanded that he be reproved and curbed. CASTLEREAGH was much objected to, and many titled personages were glad when he went home. Upon HARDENBERG, STEIN, and VON HUMBOLDT many black looks were cast because of the truly Prussian piggishness of their desire for the annexation of the greater part of Saxony. Vials of wrath were continually poured upon the head of TALLEYRAND, who triumphed over them all. At one time during the progress of the Conference at Paris, in 1898, the Spanish Commissioners packed up, declaring they would return at once to Madrid. The United States soothed their agitation by agreeing to pay to Spain $20,000,000, given, not in payment for the Philippines, as some have supposed, but to oil the creaking machinery of the negotiations. Count WITTE at Portsmouth, knowing that Japan could not long continue the war, that she must have peace, made threats of withdrawal from the Conference a part of his tactics, and thereby won many points for Russia, insomuch that the final treaty was looked upon as a triumph for him and his Government.

The reported threat or hint that the Conference may be transferred to some neutral capital because of the attitude of certain French officials and the tone of the French press is not to be taken seriously. Premier CLEMENCEAU's interview expressed agreement with the proposals of the United States and Great Britain rather than dissent. The brilliant writers of the French press may now and then ruffle the sensibilities of the members of the Conference, but that would be a poor reason for clearing out of Paris. France has needs as well as views, she has suffered much by the war, she has been impoverished. She wants reparation. But it is probable that she will be able to secure a larger sum from Germany under Mr. WILSON's plan than under the possibly sterner measures she may now favor. If Germany is to pay, she must be permitted to earn money for the payment. For another thing, France does not want to be put to the cost of maintaining a large army for defense against a possibly re-established and still hostile Germany. CLEMENCEAU gratefully takes note of Mr. WILSON's assuring words on that point, and the establishment of the League of Nations should remove the danger and quiet her fears.

But the Conference ought to conclude a peace with Germany at the earliest possible moment. From delay in making peace danger is to be feared more than from any other source.

OUR NEGRO SOLDIERS.

In the Revolutionary War, in the War of 1812, in the Mexican and civil wars, and in the war with Spain, the American negro soldier always distinguished himself by bravery, fortitude, and loyalty, and, properly led, he has compared well with the white soldier. When more than 4,000 negro soldiers who had fought in France returned to the United States on Sunday the story of their gallantry in Flanders, in Champagne, and in the Argonne Forest was an old story retold. It would not be fair, of course, to compare the performance of the 92d Division with that of the 1st and 2d Regular Divisions, the 77th, the 27th, the 30th, or the 28th. These divisions, including National Guardsmen and National Army troops, saw more intense and more critical fighting, and their losses were, in consequence, greater; but in what the negro soldiers were called upon to do, whether individuals or units be considered, there was the same valor and invincible spirit. In the Champagne the 369th Regiment, attached to the 161st Division of the French Army, commanded by the Lion of the Argonne, one-armed General GOURAUD, showed its mettle in 191 days of campaigning. Says Major L'ESPERANCE:

> The heaviest fighting was on Sept. 26, when we went into action with twenty officers and 700 men in our battalion in the morning, and at the close we had seven officers and 150 men left. Our boys advanced steadily like seasoned veterans, and never lost a foot of ground they had taken or let a prisoner escape.

These negro soldiers had gone straight from a training camp near St. Nazaire to the battlefield. They had never been under fire before, and General GOURAUD was not the man to spare them. The honor fell to the 369th to be the first American contingent to reach the Rhine, at Blovelsheim, on Nov. 18, after a forced march from Thann, in Alsace. This "black regiment," a description that GEORGE H. BOKER immortalized in the most stirring of civil war verse, was identical with the old 15th New York, a regiment organized, in the face of opposition that now seems puerile, not long before the great war. It is worthy of note that most of the regimental officers of the 369th were negroes, although it used to be said that negroes must be led by white men to stand the ordeal of fire and to advance steadily. But the 369th stopped the Germans, who learned by bitter experience to class them with the dreaded French Colonials from Africa.

The old 15th should not, however, be singled out as meritorious beyond other negro regiments. The 370th, of whose 123 officers only three were white, and which was commanded by Colonel T. A. ROBERTS, a cavalryman of the Regular Army, also made a fine record. "I have been commended," says Colonel ROBERTS, "for the fighting qualities and general bearing of "the men, who were actually over "the Belgian border when the armistice was signed. One of my battalions was the most advanced unit "of the French Army with which we "were co-operating at the time."

The negro soldiers who returned home the other day have a great many decorations, French as well as American, to prove their title to the designation of first-class fighting men. The 1st Battalion of the 367th Infantry, "Buffaloes," enjoys the distinction of having won the Croix de Guerre for heroism in the drive on Metz, in which it received its baptism of fire. According to their opportunities, the American negro troops in France never failed to share the glory of battle with the French, or with their white American comrades. In all that makes the soldier, bravery, intelligence, endurance, and, particularly, good nature under hardship and privation, the negro soldier excels. He is never downhearted, and usually he is gay and full of humor. No American army would be complete without the familiar and historic negro troops.

THE SEAT OF POWER.

That propugnaculum of the Constitution, the Anti-Saloon League, has favored the Legislature with a bill for the enforcement of that prohibition which it has compelled this State to favor. There are little details of search, little encroachments upon foolish rights of person and property, so regarded, that a New Yorker of ancient and uninstructed days might well object to in this bill. The good, the trained, the observant contemporary citizen will object to nothing in it except that it does not come from a source as constitutionally formal as it is morally august.

The Anti-Saloon League is the maker of our laws, the director and interpreter of our Constitution, so far as we are permitted still to indulge in one. Why not recognize too obvious facts? Why not supplant a Legislature which is but the echo of the league, by the authentic, majestic, sole, and unaccountable boss of the State of New York, the Anti-Saloon League?

A LOST OPPORTUNITY.

CATHERINE BRESHKOVSKY, who ought to know something about the Russian Revolution, says that "our "greatest, deepest, most immediate "need is the creation of conditions "under which the Russian people will "be able to convoke an all-Russian "Constituent Assembly. Russia will "never be quiet and satisfied" until that is done. A year ago, she says, the allies of Russia and the proved friends of the Russian people could have made this possible, but "the opportunity was lost."

The opportunity was lost partly because certain elements of public opinion in England and still more in America were persuaded that it would be illiberal to oppose the Bolshevist reign of terror, and partly because our Government feared the influence of Japan in an interallied expedition in Siberia. The action that was taken achieved the apparently impossible by bringing about almost all the evil results of all the courses that could have been taken. By seeming to make war against the Bolsheviki we incurred their hatred and the hatred of their sympathizers in other countries; by hitting softly we did no good to the greater part of Russia, and such districts as we did save from Bolshevist terrorism we are now about to give up. The Archangel expedition is very far from being successful, in the military or political sense; while not all the stories that have been told about it need to be believed, the mere fact that at last accounts there were only 1,200 Russians in the allied army shows that it made no great appeal to Russian sentiment. The Siberian expedition was kept weak for fear of Japan, and according to rumor is soon to be withdrawn, leaving our Russian friends defenseless. If there is anything in the rumor that the Omsk Government, thus deserted, will appeal to Japan alone, those who thought Japan would be too strong in an expedition of all the Allies may take what comfort they can from seeing Japan doing the whole work without any allied co-operation. It is hard to see what else they can do about it, for certainly the League of Nations is not going to begin by coercing the Russians into acceptance of Bolshevist rule.

SUFFRAGE FOR POLITICS.

With all respect to the poetical expressions of Mrs. CATT that the nation is "dishonored," and so on, by the temporary failure of the Senate to recommend the Suffrage Amendment to the Legislatures, the woman minority has won. Its triumph is but postponed. The high considerations of right that interject themselves every time into these sacred considerations of politics need not longer concern us. The thing is put practically, to a practical generation. The Democrats have blundered politically. The farther-seeing Republicans in the next Congress will take advantage of that mistake. To all the mysterious unknown world of "women," they will open, by the submission of the Federal Amendment, that opportunity of politics that some women wish.

The essentiality of the whole "movement," the gradual conquering by a small minority of the public, the degradation of an agitation, fifty years ago altruistic and genuine, couldn't be expressed better. Nobody cares whether it is to the advantage of the national polity to have woman suffrage or not. The point is: Who saw it first, Democrats or Republicans?

Millions of women on whom this privilege—for it is no "right"—has been foisted have yet to utter their opinion upon a change in their relations to the State as to which they have not been consulted. "Women" will do or think so and so. That is the assumption of the brave politicians of the Senate. Women! There is a multitude of women not represented and not vocal by the leaders of a minority.

The jelly-backed politicians will amuse themselves, according to their wont, with this great change in the fundamental law. Is it right? Is it wrong? Is it desirable? Foolish questions. Should each State determine for itself the political status of its women? Idiot inquiries. Was the Democratic or the Republican Party most congenial to the great "reform"? How many votes are there in it?

This is all, this is all that anything, apparently, amounts to. Even in the Southern States, which, before the passage of the Prohibition Amendment, might have been regarded by the unwary as the last stand of State rights, there was no united opposition. Their votes were divided. Their utmost opposition was but a trifle. They are not sincere or earnest about it. It is a matter of political finesse. The future of States and of a nation that regard these deep-lying problems as pawns of politics may well call for some thought.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Uncertainty Promptly Dissipated.

On the eve of the "general strike" in Seattle, the local labor paper, to which was intrusted the task of expressing the hopes, opinions, and determinations of the men who were gayly ordering their followers into idleness, contained an editorial article of which what is now seen to have been the most important passage read: "We are undertaking the most tremendous move ever made by labor in this country, which will lead no one knows where." The writer of the article evidently liked this expression, for he repeated it a few lines further along: "If the strike continues labor may feel led to avoid public suffering by reopening more and more activities under its own management, and that is why we say that we are starting on a road that leads no one knows where."

No previous occasion can be recalled when the starters of a "tremendous move" confessed thus frankly, or confessed at all, for that matter, their own utter ignorance of the destination at which its participants would arrive. But what the strike leaders did not know the estimable Mayor of Seattle promptly and correctly told them. Mr. HANSON's name is not of Mayflower provenience, and his biographers do not claim that his is one of America's "old families," but he has demonstrated that his assimilation of American ideas is complete, and his treatment of "revolution" has excited enthusiastic approval all over the country from everybody who still thinks those ideas, on the whole, preferable to the ideas promulgated by Messrs. LENINE and TROTZKY.

Not being of the "parlor Socialist" type, Mr. HANSON has not been attracted to Bolshevism, and he is convinced that the United States can get along fairly well for a while longer without a Soviet Government. Evidently, also, he is not coddling any "vote," real or imaginary, with a view to re-election, and the result of the measures promptly taken by him was that, as in good American dialect he put it, "the revolution didn't even reach first base."

He Demands More Than Victory.

Proof of what a thoroughgoing and, as it were, continuous person the Mayor of Seattle is came from him after the "tremendous move" had arrived at a sudden quietude. He does not hold it enough that the general strike has failed, nor is he inclined to ignore the immediate past just because to do so would be for him a means of avoiding the trouble of taking action.

Instead, he announces that the men who "without reason, without cause" endeavored to overthrow the city government are not to be forgiven until they have demonstrated a decided change of mind, and until even those who by inactivity or lack of courage were indirectly responsible for the strike have been deposed from the positions they showed themselves incompetent to fill. His vigorous phrase is that "union labor must clean house," by which he means that it must cease to heed the dictates of its deadly enemy, the I. W. W.

They Don't Want Tourists Yet.

No country, in the recent past of "before the war" that now seems so remote, was more attractive than Italy to foreign visitors, and in none, probably, did so many people depend in part or whole for livelihood on the money spent by the peaceful army of strangers. Multitudes of Italians therefore must be awaiting with more than impatience for the resumption of the tide of tourist travel. That, however, is not to come soon, for the Italian Railway Directorate has issued a warning to all foreigners that not until the end of next year will it be judicious for anybody to come to Italy whose business is not of a more essential and necessary sort than sight-seeing.

In other words, the tourists are advised to keep away until the Italian railways have recovered from the confusion into which they were thrown by the war. Whether this prohibition, or inhibition, applies to tourists of the sort that traveled in automobiles owned by themselves or hired is not stated. They had come to form a class of considerable size, and their expenditures were large enough to make them welcome wherever they went. But as they are not told that they are wanted, probably they, too, should defer their accustomed visits for the present.

Proposing to Make a Mistake.

Undeterred by the prompt and vigorous protest against the abolition of service stripes that came, as soon as they heard of the plan, from the soldiers who are or have been abroad, the House Committee on Military Affairs has put in the Army Appropriation bill a section wholly doing away with these highly valued decorations.

In this very drastic action there is to be suspected an element of revenge or punishment directed against the men who objected to wearing white chevrons. Yet those men never asked more than that they should not be obliged to advertise the ill luck that kept them at home. They were quite willing that the performance of foreign service should be designated by a distinctive mark, and those who have earned that mark will make every effort to keep it.

Some of them are talking about wearing their gold chevrons, no matter what the War Department rules on the subject. But that, of course, is not really meant, or at any rate the thought of doing it will pass away with further deliberation on the soldier's duty to obey and the penalties of disobedience. The Federal legislators, however, would do well to think twice and even three times before they create another grievance for the Americans who have served abroad. The men are already quite sufficiently supplied with causes of complaint.

A Staten Island Subway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Five years ago George McAneny, then Chairman of the Transit Committee of the Board of Estimate, told a delegation of 300 Staten Islanders that the state of the city's finances prevented the building of a subway to Staten Island, but that the city ought to be able to connect Richmond Borough with the rest of the city in from six to eight years.

The people of Staten Island feel that the time has arrived for the city to undertake this enterprise, and with this in mind we have organized a Staten Island Subway Committee, with the slogan, "A subway to and through Staten Island."

We are quite convinced that Staten Island offers more than it asks. Not only have we paid over $3,000,000 into the City Treasury to help pay for the subways that are developing the other boroughs, but that do not touch Richmond, but we believe that we are offering the only real solution of the city's present financial plight.

The city's borrowing capacity is strictly limited by its assessed valuations and its income is measured by the same valuations. Increase these valuations and the city will have power to borrow money for schools, piers, and other public improvements, and will have revenues to meet necessary expenses of government without increasing the tax rates. The assessments cannot be increased in the other boroughs and the tax rate cannot be made higher. But the assessments can be increased in Staten Island and the taxes to relieve real estate in the other boroughs can be collected there, if the city will give to the vast areas of Richmond Borough the added values that will come with a "subway to and through Staten Island."

SAMUEL ECKSTEIN.

Tompkinsville, S. I., Feb. 8, 1919.

LINCOLN—A RETROSPECT.

Time onward moves in swift and silent flight
Through skies of storm or sunlit azure hue
And brings new prospects and occasions new;
Each opening scene and landscape hold our sight
Until the past is oft forgotten quite.
Yet sometimes comes a day when in review
We see the stages we have journeyed through,
Like traveler pausing on a mountain height.

And such a time and place have come today
As now we backward turn unto the Past;
To one great name new honors now we pay,
For his is one whose fame has grown so vast
No land on earth presents to it a bar—
One of the greatest in Time's calendar!

Born 'neath the light of glowing Southern stars,
And nurtured on the Western prairies green,
Whose vastness passed into his soul serene
And freed it from all littleness that mars,
'Twas his to break for aye the iron bars
That held a race in bondage, servile, mean!
And freedom's champion in him was seen,
Who vanquished wrong, but fell beneath its scars!

O Lincoln! high in thee was shrined a soul
Brave, tender, loving, true, serene, and strong,
With a heroic will 'neath stern control,
Valiant and dauntless still against all wrong!
Our land you made one of real liberty,
And nations yet unborn will reverence thee!

READY TO PASS TAX BILL TODAY

Simmons Intimates Big Interests Joined in Propaganda to Defeat Measure.

STORM OVER CAMPAIGN TAX

Thomas Alleges Bipartisan Plot to Eliminate Provision—Defeat of Postal Zone Reform.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Final action on the War Revenue bill was delayed today in the Senate by an acrid debate in which Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, intimated that a propaganda had been organized by some of the big corporate interests to defeat the measure, and Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Colorado, brought forward again the question of placing a tax of 100 per cent. on campaign contributions in excess of $500, alleging that what amounted to a plot had been entered into secretly by a number of Republican and Democratic Senators to exclude such a provision from the bill and that they had succeeded.

The fact that the House conferees had demanded the rejection of the Senate proposal to abolish the present zone system for second class mail matter also featured the debate. Senator Simmons said the attitude of the House conferees in conference had at times amounted to coercion, and joined with Senator Penrose in asserting that, while the direct threat had not been made, the Senate conferees had been given to understand that insistence on the part of the Senate conferees for lower second class postage rates would mean the defeat of all efforts to pass a new revenue law.

"The old zone system," said Mr. Simmons, "was restored in conference under pressure which amounted almost to coercion. We had two votes in the Senate, both of which showed a majority of the Senators opposed to it. From the very beginning, however, the House was just as much wedded to the system. The matter was up for discussion almost every day, and from the very beginning we were given to understand that the zone system had to remain, and that, whatever else happened, there could be no reform in this matter."

Passage Vote Reconsidered.

A move which might have resulted in shutting off all debate was taken immediately after the reading of the conference report on the bill. With Senator McKellar in the chair, a request was made from the Democratic side for the calling of a quorum. The roll call was taken, the quorum secured, and a motion put to a viva voce vote by Mr. McKellar that the bill be adopted. Before Mr. Simmons could object the vote was taken and the bill declared adopted. Mr. Simmons, however, asked for and obtained unanimous consent to reconsider.

Senator Penrose, who had charge for the Republican side, and Senator Smoot both protested against any effort to rush matters. Mr. Simmons abandoned an effort to get a night session when it became apparent that a quorum would not be present, and at 5 o'clock a recess was declared until tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. The chances are that a vote will be taken some time tomorrow, and that the bill will be adopted, but developments overnight may change this situation. Senators who raised objections, both Republicans and Democrats, indicated that they would vote for the adoption of the measure.

Mr. Simmons, in his opening address, said that the conference report was in effect a victory for the Senate conferees, just as Mr. Kitchin, in his statement to the House, claimed a victory, in principle of taxation at least, for the House conferees. A great part of Mr. Simmons's statement was confined to assertions that the propaganda which he alleged had been organized to defeat the bill was possible only because the business interests did not understand the provisions of the legislation and had depended upon perfunctory reports in the newspapers.

He said that, should the bill be defeated and the present law continued in effect, large corporations, as a result of the lack of provisions in the present law concerning amortisation, obsolescence and the shrinkage of inventories, would find themselves no better off, despite the lower tax rates.

Tax on Campaign Contributions.

Senator Thomas brought up the matter of a tax on campaign contributions after protesting against the provision taxing the salaries of the President and the Federal Justices, which he held to be unconstitutional. Mr. Simmons had reported that an ugly state of mind had been exhibited by some of the conference members over the question of campaign contributions, and that the Senate conferees had refused to concur in the proposal to assess the 100 per cent. tax only on contributions in the future. A poll had then been taken among the Republican and Democratic Senators as to their attitude, Mr. Simmons said, and it showed that its elimination from the bill was desired. The conferees had feared endless delay and perhaps the defeat of the bill if it was retained in the form approved by the House conferees, and it was rejected.

Upon being questioned, Mr. Simmons said that Senator Swanson of Virginia took the poll on the Democratic side of the Senate, but did not name the Republican who had made a canvass among the Senators of the Republican faith.

Mr. Thomas said he had felt from the first that the proposed 100 per cent. tax on campaign contributions would be killed by the conferees, despite the fact that a majority of the Senators last September had voted to include it in the proposed revenue law. The proposed tax, which he fathered, he said, would prevent the collection of huge campaign funds, and he had heard that the Chairman of the Republican National Committee had come to Washington, while the matter was being discussed by the conferees, to fight it. He had also heard, he said, that the Democratic leaders of the Senate were opposed to it.

"By joint Republican and Democratic action this amendment, which I believe would go far to purify elections in America, has been slaughtered," said Mr. Thomas.

Tilt Over Profits Taxes.

Senator Simmons got into a tilt with Senators Kellogg and Smoot, Republicans, over the fact that the 8 per cent. war profits tax for the taxable year 1919 had been extended only to contracts with the Government made between April 6, 1917, when America entered the war, and Nov. 11, 1918, when the armistice was signed.

Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Smoot believed that if such a tax was to be imposed during the next year on Government contracts it should be imposed also on private contracts, on which, they held, profits were sometimes made in excess of the profits obtained from Government contracts. To this Mr. Simmons did not agree.

Mr. Simmons intimated that many corporate interests holding war contracts had conducted an organized effort through propaganda to defeat the proposed legislation. Those who were fighting the legislation, he said, were doing so under a misapprehension and had overlooked the true meaning of the relief provisions. He said that these men were writing to Senators and using other means in an attempt to obstruct passage of the bill.

INSTALMENT PLAN CUTS TAX

Balance Lent on Call an Economy to Big Taxpayers.

Wall Street discovered yesterday that a considerable economy could be effected by paying large income taxes on the installment plan. According to the regulations providing for the payment of the tax, each person having a taxable income must make a return of the amount he computes his tax to be on or before March 15. On that date also he may pay the full amount of the tax, or he may pay the first installment of one-quarter of the full amount, paying the balance, if he elects so to do, in three other equal installments on June 15, Sept. 15, and Dec. 15. But if the tax amounts to what Wall Street regards as real money, one-quarter of it may be paid on March 15 and the balance may be lent on call, or in any other way, for the next three months, and the taxpayer pocket the interest.

On June 15 the second installment, or half the tax, is paid and the other half may be put out at interest for the three months ended Sept. 15. On that date the third installment, or three-quarters of the tax, is paid and the balance of the tax may be put out at interest for the three months ending Dec. 15. It was said by the head of one of the big Wall Street banking houses yesterday that it could be assumed that money thus lent would bring 6 per cent.

If the income tax of a corporation, copartnership, or individual is $100,000, and assuming that 6 per cent. could be realized on the money, paying the tax on the installment plan would work out as follows: On March 15 the taxpayer turns into the office of the Internal Revenue Collector of his district $25,000. On the same day he lends the balance of the tax, $75,000, for three months at 6 per cent. On June 15, he collects the principal and the interest, amounting to $1,125. He then pays to the Revenue Collector the second installment of $25,000, and lends the balance of the tax, or $50,000, for the three months ended Sept. 15, getting an interest return of $750. On Sept. 15 he will have paid three-quarters of the tax, or $75,000, lending on the same day $25,000, on which he will receive an interest return of $375, which will end his interest profits, because he will have to pay the balance of the tax on Dec. 15. But in the course of the three quarters, the payer, on the installment plan, of an income tax of $100,000, will have netted in interest $2,250.

By the same procedure a corporation, copartnership, or individual, with a taxable income of $50,000, will receive an interest return of $1,125; one with a taxable income of $200,000 would net $4,500; one with an income of $500,000, $11,250, and one with a million-dollar taxable income, $22,500. This, of course, is on the assumption that only the normal tax would be collected on incomes of the amounts mentioned. But, even after the payment of the 6 per cent. portion of the tax, the 12 per cent. portion and the surtax the individual would make money by paying the tax on the installment plan, and so would many corporations and copartnerships.

It was said yesterday by one of the revenue collecting experts that there was no doubt that the Department of Internal Revenue would hold that persons with small taxable incomes might make deductions for reasonable expenses incurred in the prosecution of their business or profession. For instance, a man whose business or profession requires him to make daily rounds of the city in which he lives, thus entailing the payment of an unusual amount in car fares, or in case of great haste taxicab fares, would be entitled to deduct from his taxable income the amounts so paid. If the Internal Revenue Department so holds, it will materially reduce the taxable incomes of a large class of solicitors and agents.

A corporation, with an income tax due last June, sent a check yesterday to William H. Edwards, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second New York District, for $2[illegible]3,515.39, which included the amount of the tax when due, a 5 per cent. penalty, and interest charges at the rate of 1 per cent. a month for the time the tax was overdue. Accountants in the Collector's office found that the taxpayer had overpaid to the amount of $8,982.91. The mistake was made, Collector Edwards explained, through the mistaken notion of the taxpayer that, where the penalty is imposed, the penalty is subject also to the monthly interest charge of 1 per cent. That, he said, is not true, although it is a mistake that is frequently made.

WILLIAMS INQUIRY SECRET.

Senate Committee Reverses Itself Upon Demand of Bankers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Plans for open hearings on the renomination of John Skelton Williams as Controller of the Currency were abandoned today by the Senate Banking Committee over protests of Mr. Williams's friends, after the first witness, Wade Cooper, President of the Union Savings Bank of Washington, had begun a statement to the effect that the Controller was attempting to "terrify" the bankers of the country to prevent them from appearing in opposition to his confirmation.

Senator McLean, of Connecticut, Republican, insisted that the doors be closed, declaring there was a general feeling among certain bankers that if they appeared before the committee "there will be reprisals." He said he wanted to get at the facts, and the best way was to hold executive sessions.

Senator Hollis, of New Hampshire, Democrat, urged that the open hearings be continued, saying that Mr. Williams "wanted the full light of day on this whole thing," and that the fight against confirmation was getting tremendously magnified. Mr. Williams himself was present and told the committee he did not oppose open sessions.

The committee, which had voted 5 to 4 for open hearings, reversed its action by a similar vote on motion of Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, Republican.

Mr. Cooper told the committee he would prefer, because of the interests of clients of his banks, to make his statement behind closed doors.

REJOINS ON FORCED LABOR.

Jouhaux Tells of German Wrongs in a Discussion at Berne.

BERNE, Feb. 10.—The International Trades Union Congress, which has been meeting here simultaneously with the International Socialist Conference, adjourned today after deciding to meet again in May at a place to be selected later.

The last question discussed was a demand by Herr Schn[illegible]berger, a German delegate, to know whether the French and English delegates were prepared to condemn the employment of German prisoners on forced labor and the maintenance of the blockade.

Leon Jouhaux, a French delegate and President of the French Labor Federation, in reply, said that it was impossible to admit the principle of forced labor or forced famine. However, he added, the deportations by the Germans from Belgium and Northern France and the treatment of Russian prisoners after the treaty of Brest-Litovsk made it difficult for his party to intervene with the French Government.

TURKISH TRIALS BEGIN.

Governor of Diarbekir First to be Arraigned for Massacres.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The trial of those responsible for the Armenian massacres by the Turks has begun in Constantinople. The leader of the Turkish officials being tried at present is Keimal Bey, Governor of Diarbekir.

The prosecutor, in opening the trial, said it was necessary to punish the authors of the massacres which had filled the whole world with a feeling of horror.

DR. BUTLER ASSAILS WILSON'S POLICIES

Says American People Are Tired of Rhetoric and Demand Plain Speaking.

RAPS BOLSHEVIST PARLEY

War Won Despite Incapacity of Many in Official Power, He Declares at Paterson.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 11.—Addressing the guests at the Lincoln Day dinner held here tonight under the auspices of the Republican County Committee of Passaic County, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, criticised the Wilson Administration and the proceedings of the American delegates at the Peace Conference. Dr. Butler said the recent congressional elections indicated that a large majority of the American people looked to the Republican Party for leadership.

"The handwriting is on the wall," said Dr. Butler. "The next President of the United States will be a Republican, and he will have behind him a united Republican Party, eager to solve the new questions in a spirit of justice and of human sympathy, and determined to protect the foundations of the American Republic against all enemies, whether they be the Central Powers and their allies without, or the anarchists, Bolsheviki and enemies of liberty and social order within."

The speaker declared the American people were tired of politics given over to rhetoric and phrase-making, and that they demand plain speaking and not fine words, definite policies and not platitudes. Turning to a discussion of the war, he said:

Won Despite Incapacity.

"The decisive part played in the final stage of the war by the fighting forces of America on land and on sea, was directly due to the resourcefulness, the capacity, the intelligence, and the patriotism of the American people, and was in spite of the shortcomings, the extravagance, the quarrels, and the incapacity of many of those who were in conspicuous posts of official power and responsibility."

The future world position of America, Dr. Butler asserted, must be that of brother and friend, not that of guardian or attempted ruler. He said that the country will have enough to do in minding its own business, that the Republican Party will insist that the new organization of the world be "a society of nations and not a society without nations," adding:

"It will strive constantly to strengthen and to protect the integrity and the freedom of action of America in order that America, tied down by no vain and empty formulas, may have more to give in service to other peoples and in cooperation with them. The Republican Party will insist that the fruits of the war be not lost or traded away; that insidious German propaganda be not listened to, and that the manifest attempts to create discord between America, on the one hand, and France, Great Britain, and Italy, as well as with the new nations of the Czechoslovaks and the Poles, on the other, shall not be permitted to succeed. We do not propose that a war which has been won by arms shall be lost by words.

Disappointment Among Republicans.

"There is grave disappointment among Republicans that the American delegation to the Peace Conference was not made more representative of the international knowledge, the international experience, and the international statesmanship of our country. There is grave disappointment, too, that the terms of peace with the Central Powers were not quickly and speedily arrived at, announced and enforced, as they might easily have been in accordance with the convincing formula uttered by the statesmen of France early in the war, namely: Reparation, restitution, security.

A contrary course has been followed and the results are already seen to be unhappy, he said.

"The fulsome adulation and flattery of the newspaper dispatches, so repugnant to right-thinking Americans, reveal little and conceal much. These dispatches contradict each other not only on successive days but on the same day, and no one in America, despite the loud protestations of open diplomacy, has any clear or accurate idea of what the American delegation is pressing upon the Peace Conference or how it is being received. Just as the autocratic and criminal government of the Bolsheviki in Russia seemed to be tottering to its fall, its leaders, with their hands still dripping with the blood of their victims, were actually invited to confer with representatives of free and liberty-loving peoples!

"To desert the people of Russia now is an act of astounding folly and ingratitude. The only gainers will be the Germans. To strain at gnats like Huerta and William of Hohenzollern, and to swallow camels like Lenine and Trotzky is a curious proceeding.

Assails Herron Appointment.

"But once a conference had been determined upon, surely there could have been found among the 100,000,000 of Americans some man or woman of honor, of untarnished reputation and with a record for public service who could have borne the credentials of the Government of the United States without soiling or discrediting them. But the appointment actually made has affronted our decent citizenship and aggrived the moral and religious sentiment of the country.

"We saw one journalistic adulator sent, without official commission but with high authority, to muddle our affairs with Mexico, and we saw him later turn up among the most active friends and agents of our Teuton enemies. We were told in explanation that, although without previous training or public experience, he had received this important commission as a reward for having written in flattering terms of the President and his policies.

"It appears that this new appointee also has busied himself with his pen, and that apparently just because he has published a crude and fulsome eulogy of the President's personality and public conduct he has been selected to represent the people of the United States.

"We have become accustomed during these last six years to the President's fondness for surrounding himself with intellectual and political midgets, but we have hitherto been spared anything so shocking as this appointment.

Turning to discussion of domestic problems, Dr. Butler said we are "drifting at home without executive or legislative leadership, in waters filled with rocks and floating mines."

"There is no reason save mental and political laziness and inertia for dragging out over five years a solution of the railway problem, or for allowing the industrial situation to continue to develop domestic wars which are already disastrous. Under pressure of the necessities of war we turned our Government for the time being into an autocracy and a bureaucracy Russia of the Czars might well have envied.

"Congress became a rubber stamp, and public discussion of public policies practically disappeared. As war measures all these were defensible. We had to help to win the war, to win it quickly, and to win it completely. This has been done and we have now to return our Government to its proper functions and to restore freedom to the individual and to business."

WILL HONOR LINCOLN IN VICTORY SERVICES

Martyred President's Birthday Anniversary to be Widely Observed Here.

BIG SING IN BRYANT PARK

Soldiers, Sailors, and Boy and Girl Scouts to Join in Some of Celebrations.

The one hundred and tenth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln will be observed more widely in New York today, perhaps, than for some years. As has been the case on all recent holidays, the winning of the war will give to the exercises commemorating the martyred President a tinge of rejoicing that so many of the ideals for which his life stood seem about to be realized in world-wide application.

Similarities of character and in devotion to public duty between Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt have been pointed out by many speakers who have talked of the Colonel's death and many of those who will take part in the Lincoln anniversary services will pay tribute to Colonel Roosevelt as well. Soldiers and sailors are to be specially welcomed at the various patriotic exercises and in some instances the celebration will take the form of entertainment for them exclusively.

Under the auspices of the War Camp Community Service it is hoped to have the largest community sing yet arranged in this city in Bryant Park this afternoon. Five thousand Boy Scouts will gather there with their own band and that from the U. S. S. Recruit and many older men in uniform are expected to join with them. In addition to the songs, the boys will stage a ceremony representing the merging of various nationalities into America.

Wounded officers of the American and allied services participated last night in a Lincoln's Birthday dance and supper in the Hotel Plaza for the benefit of Lafayette House, the Red Cross convalescent home at 112 West Fifty-ninth Street.

Mrs. Vincent Astor and Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt have arranged a program of music and vaudeville at the Y. M. C. A. Victory Hut in Battery Park, starting at 6:30 o'clock this evening. There will be a band concert, followed by a program of variety acts.

The League of Foreign Born Citizens will give a unique entertainment at its Yorkville Branch, 407 East Seventy-third Street, the musical features being followed by a playlet in English, acted by members of the naturalization class.

William H. Van Benschoten will talk on Theodore Roosevelt at a Lincoln celebration at the Jefferson Park Italian Methodist Church this evening. Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts will participate in the exercises.

Many Lincoln Day meetings will be held throughout the country under the auspices of the National Security League. In addition to celebrations organized by the league through its branches, various gatherings under other auspices will be addressed by speakers furnished by the league's Speakers' Bureau.

The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis will talk for the Security League at a Lincoln mass meeting in Rochester, N. Y. Among the meetings in this city to be addressed by league speakers are: Barnard College, in co-operation with the Y. M. C. A. War Council, Jonas Lippman, editor of The Voice of Alsace-Lorraine; Jewish Centre, 131 East Eighty-sixth Street, E. C. Baldwin; Educational Alliance, East Broadway, Joseph T. Cashman; Public School 109, Brooklyn, Dr. George Egbert.

The Women's Republican Club luncheon at 2 o'clock this afternoon will be divided in its patriotic features between commemoration of Lincoln and tributes to Colonel Roosevelt. James M. Beck, Judge John R. Davies, and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., will be among the speakers. Mrs. Roosevelt will talk about American canteen work in France.

LEAVENWORTH INQUIRY ON.

Gen. Williams Investigating Trouble at Disciplinary Barracks.

Special to The New York Times.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Feb. 11.—A secret investigation under the apparent supervision of Secretary Baker is under way at the disciplinary barracks here. Grievances of the military prisoners, including conscientious objectors, the cause of the recent fire in the Quartermaster's depot, and insubordination of the prisoners are to be investigated.

Brig. Gen. H. O. Williams of the Inspector General's Department, is here in charge of the investigation. The proceedings are behind closed doors, and General Williams refuses to tell the purpose of his visit.

General Williams is the officer who was sent to Camp Funston under War Department orders to investigate the charges of mistreatment of religious objectors in connection with the discharge of Majors White and Taussig.

The Army Prison Strike
AT FORT LEAVENWORTH.

Industrial unrest penetrated the stone walls of the United States Disciplinary Barracks the week before last.

A dramatic story of the demands of the 2,300 prisoners, the spread of the strike, and the success of democratic, non-military methods in preventing a bloody result.

COMPLAINS OF ENGLEKEN.

Benet Says Former Federal Official Can Be Proved Disloyal.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Ex-United States Senator Benet of South Carolina appeared before the Senate Committee on Propaganda this morning and made a request in his own and ex-Governor Manning's name that an investigation be made by the committee of the activities of J. F. H. von Engleken, ex-President of the Farm Loan Bank of Columbia, S. C. Von Engleken is an American citizen well known in Washington, and is married into a prominent family. He has denied that he has ever been guilty of disloyalty or pro-Germanism, and Secretary of War Baker has stated that an investigation exonerated him of suspicion along those lines.

"This matter," said Senator Benet to the committee, "came up in May or June last, when Governor Manning and the South Carolina Council of National Defense notified the Government that von Engleken was under suspicion of disloyalty and pro-Germanism. He was then President of the Farm Loan Bank in Columbia. On Nov. 16 last we were informed that Secretary McAdoo informed the President that he thought it would be an act of justice to write von Engleken a letter saying that there was nothing against his record. Such a letter, I am informed, was written.

"The Governor and myself feel that von Engleken is disloyal and that we can prove it by affidavits, and we think that this committee should find out what influences, if any, were responsible for the course taken in the matter. After our complaint was filed, von Engleken was taken from Columbia and given a much more responsible position in another part of the country as General Agent of Farm Loan Banks.

"The affidavits in question are that von Engleken justified the sinking of the Lusitania, claimed we entered the war at the behest of Morgan and Rockefeller, who forced Wilson to make war, denounced the stories of German atrocities as false, justified the sinking of any and all ships, no matter who was on board, and was violent and profane in discussing the case of the murdered English nurse, Miss Cavell. I am also informed that he refused to aid the Red Cross. Governor Manning will appear before you whenever called. So will I and Mr. Coker, head of our Council of Defense."

The committee voted to ask the Secretary of the Treasury for the records in the case. It is said that von Engleken, who is now in the North, has been asked to appear before the committee.

JELLICOE TELLS SECRETS.

Kitchener's Ship Sunk by Mine, Admiral's Book Discloses.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A book written by Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, the former commander of the British Grand Fleet, which will appear tomorrow, gives the cause of the sinking of the British cruiser Hampshire, on which Lord Kitchener lost his life. Admiral Jellicoe explains that the Hampshire struck a German moored mine, which had been laid by a submarine.

The book contains revelations of British unpreparedness at the beginning of the war. The Grand Fleet had to run out of harbor several times because submarines were reported inside.

Admiral Jellicoe says he avoided night action with his big ships off Jutland because the British searchlights and fire controls were defective. He recommends a greater superiority of all classes of vessels than in 1914.

Walsh as Public Works Deputy.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—The appointment of Edward S. Walsh of Brooklyn as Deputy Superintendent of Public Works was announced today. Mr. Walsh is Chairman of Canal Committees of several commercial organizations, including the New York Board of Trade and Transportation. The salary is $3,500 a year.

Engagements.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. O'Connor of 326 West Seventy-first Street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Adele O'Connor, to William Kimbel Mehlbach, son of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Mehlbach and the late William C. C. Mehlbach.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Reading of Weehawken, N. J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Isabel Malvina Reading, to Lieutenant David Neilson Bulloch, U. S. A. Lieutenant Bulloch is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. William Bulloch of Englishtown, N. J., and is a graduate of Rutgers College.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cunneen of New Rochelle, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marie Cecelia Cunneen, to Sergeant Edward A. New, who is with the American Expeditionary Forces in France. Miss Cunneen is a niece of the late John C. Cunneen, formerly Attorney General of this State.

Miss Riker to Wed Lieut. W. S. Davis

The engagement is announced of Miss Frances Townsend Riker, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Riker of 206 Madison Avenue, and a graddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Townsend, to Lieutenant William Shippen Davis, U. S. A., F. A., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Howland Davis of 204 Madison Avenue, and a brother of Lieutenant Howland S. Davis and Lieutenant Wendell Davis. Miss Riker made her début several years ago, and is a member of the Junior League. She is a niece of Mrs. J. Amory Haskell, John J. Riker, Mrs. James Remsen Strong, and Andrew L. Riker. Miss Audrey Riker is her sister.

Lieut. Earle Marries Miss Lowndes.

Lieutenant Edward Meade Earle, Air Service, U. S. A., formerly Professor of Economics at Columbia, a son of Mrs. Helen M. Earle of 410 West 115th Street, and Miss Beatrice Lowndes of Mount Vernon, N. Y., were married at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, by the Rev. Paul Kemp of Haverstraw. The bride was attended by Miss Dorothy Mullett of Mount Vernon, and René Wormser was the best man. Lieutenant Earle and his bride have gone to California on their wedding trip.

Betrothed to Lieut. Drew, Aviator.

Lieutenant Charles W. Drew of the 13th Aero Squadron, who was captured by the Germans last September near Metz, is engaged to Miss Bessie May Baldwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell V. Baldwin of West Orange, N. J., who have just made the announcement. Lieutenant Drew was captured after being wounded and narrowly escaping death, as his plane fell more than 4,000 feet before he recovered consciousness, after which he made a safe landing.

FOUR TRANSPORTS BRING 11,000 TROOPS

Leviathan Here with 9,000, Including 2,132 Wounded and 6,000 Negro Soldiers.

MANY NURSES ARE BACK

Major General Rogers, Quartermaster General, and Other High Officers Return.

Four transports arrived yesterday from France with 11,000 troops, 110 nurses, and nearly 100 naval officers from the sea plane bases on the other side.

The police boat Patrol with the Welcome Committee on board was kept busy from early morning, when the Italian transport Duca Degli Abruzzi hove in sight with 1,400 troops on board, until nearly sunset, when the giant United States transport Leviathan steamed through Quarantine to Hoboken, where she docked with more than 9,000 officers and men on her decks, including about 6,000 negro troops belonging to the 371st and 372d Infantry Regiments, and the headquarters and medical detachments and Companies H, I, K, L, and M of the 368th Regiment.

They were greeted by friends who went down the bay to meet them on the steamboat Correction. The Leviathan also brought 2,132 sick and wounded. Only the casual officers were permitted to land from the transport last night. Three of the colored soldiers died on the voyage of pneumonia.

Among the senior officers on board was Major Gen. Peter E. Traub, who commanded the 41st Division. He was accompanied by his staff of thirty-four officers and sixty-eight men, and said that the rest of the division was on the high seas now and would probably go to Camp Dix. General Traub said the 41st Division probably contained more men wearing wound stripes and decorations than any other division in the service.

Other Generals on board were Major Gen. H. W. Rogers, Quartermaster General of the United States Army; Brig. Gen. John F. Madden, and Lieut. Gen. Emile M. A. Taufflieb of the French Army, who has come here to see his wife, who was an American. There were also the 82d Infantry Brigade Headquarters of three officers and sixteen men under Brig. Gen. Edward Vollraith, and the 163d Infantry Headquarters of nine officers and 250 men.

Local Nurses Return.

The Duca Degli Abruzzi had 1,648 troops from Marseilles, including the complete personnel of the 46th Regiment of United States Coast Artillery, forty-nine officers and 1,372 men, 150 casuals and a detachment of the 164th Field Hospital. The Passadena, from Bordeaux, had one officer and twenty-three men of Casualty Company 25, and eight casual officers.

On the transport Metapan from Bordeaux were several casual officers and nurses. One of their units was bombed twice and had been cited for bravery under fire. The nurses were from the Presbyterian Hospital unit in France and went abroad in May, 1917, when they established a base hospital at Etretat with 3,000 beds.

In July last year twenty-two of the nurses were taken from the unit and attached to the 42d Division of the First Army, with which they saw service at Château-Thierry, St. Mihiel, Champagne, and Argonne Forest. They were shelled out of their hospital at Château-Thierry on July 15, when two of the patients were killed.

Negro Regiment Cited.

The 371st and 372d Regiments (colored) of the 93d Division, who arrived on the Leviathan, were brigaded with the French in battles at Avrecourt, Verdun, and in the Champagne during the September offensive. The 371st captured forty-seven machine guns, eight trench engines, three 77s, a munition depot, and a quantity of stores, and shot down three German planes between Sept. 28 and Oct. 6. Later the regiment went into the Vosges.

It was honored with a citation from the French high command, the colors were decorated with the Croix de Guerre. Eighty-nine crosses of war were given the regiment and twenty-one D. S. C.'s.

There were only ten severely wounded men on the Leviathan, among them Private James Palmquist of Austin, Texas, who had lost both legs. He said that tomorrow was his birthday and added that he received his injuries in the Argonne from heavy machine gun fire. There were a number of men from the old 69th Regiment who had been wounded and whose homes are in New York or vicinity.

CONFER ON DEMOBILIZATION

Col. McAndrews Explains Situation to Governor's Commission.

The Governor's Reconstruction Commission yesterday continued its investigation into the problem of demobilization. Colonel T. R. McAndrews of the Operations Division of the General Staff, who is in charge of the Overseas Demobilization and Troop Movement Section, explained the obstacles in the way of making any drastic changes in the present procedure. He made several suggestions, however, which may bring some relief. It may be possible, he said, with enabling legislation, to give the men nontransferable warrants to their homes and thus obviate the possibility of the tickets being sold. In the Spring, he added, several tent camps which are unavailable now may be opened and thus provide demobilization points nearer to the men's homes. Finally, the Colonel wishes to have any cases of men being demobilized at camps other than those nearest home reported to him immediately for action.

According to Colonel McAndrews, any discharged soldiers in New York, whose homes are at a distance, and are thus crowding the labor market here unnecessarily, are here for one of three reasons: They have come back from distant demobilization camps, or they originally enlisted in New York, or they have been demobilized contrary to orders.

He also gave the following information:

"While strict orders have been given to demobilize men only at the camp nearest to the men's homes, it is a fact that in New England and in the far West there are comparatively few camps, while in the South there are a number which are not being used to any extent. Some of the camps in the West have been turned over to the Medical Corps and cannot be used for demobilization. Moreover, tent camps, such as Ethan Allen, in New York State, cannot be put to use until the weather moderates. During February and March the number of men returning from France will diminish, owing to the lack of shipping facilities. However, 360,000 will pass through New York during that time.

"There are almost insuperable obstacles in the way of demobilization through draft boards. Two methods have been proposed. Men might be sent to the demobilization camps to be examined and discharged there. They could then be sent to the local draft board to be paid off. This would be clearly illegal. The other method would be to send the man directly from the debarkation camp to the draft board, there to be examined and discharged. This would involve the boarding and lodging of the soldier, the maintenance of a medical staff, and the maintenance of an office staff which would make the securing of adequate accommodations almost impossible and the overhead expense prohibitive. Furthermore, it would be practically impossible to get the people to do the work under the present circumstances."

So many different reports have been given the Reconstruction Commission as to the actual unemployment situation in New York that the commission has determined, with the help of the military authorities, to make an investigation which will reveal the facts. The commission states that its inquiry into the situation in Buffalo shows that city is prepared to spend $18,000,000 for public works immediately, and that of this amount $8,000,000 will go for schools.

The Committee on Food Production and Distribution will meet at Ithaca tomorrow, this being Farmers' Week.

AGAINST 'SERVICE BUTTONS'

Camp Dix Paper Hopes All Unauthorized Emblems Will Be Forbidden.

The Camp Dix Times, a weekly newspaper edited and published by the men stationed at Camp Dix, N. J., in a leading editorial this week, protests against a movement started by a newspaper in New York for the distribution of service buttons to men discharged from the army and the navy, which are to be worn on their civilian clothes and which will indicate the length and the nature of their service. This paper asked The Camp Dix Times to further the movement, and in reply the soldiers' paper says:

"There is the button for six months' overseas service. This is an enameled red, white, and blue effect, with a gold chevron and the letters A. E. F. If fortune kept you in the stirring scenes of home cantonments, you are entitled to a similar button, minus the gold chevron, and the letters U. S. A. substituted for A. E. F. A similar scheme with inverted chevrons is carried out for sailors.

"This paper cannot condemn too strongly the perpetuating of invidious distinctions among ex-soldiers. To the plea of the enterprising New York newspaper for 'all the publicity possible in connection with these chevron buttons,' we urge all our readers steadfastly to ignore upon discharge all these unauthorized insignia, and in this case 'stigma.'

"It is greatly to be hoped that a grateful Government will legislate all such unauthorized buttons off the lapels of America's citizen soldiers. If we are to wear any token of our service, may it be some common symbol. Let it not attempt to evaluate service rendered, nor brand the unfortunate for the rest of their natural lives."

CUNARD DIRECTOR RETURNS

Sir Ashley Sparks Says Great Britain and U. S. Share the Seas.

Sir Ashley Sparks, director and general manager of the Cunard Line in the United States and Canada, returned yesterday on the liner Carmania from a visit to England, where he said he had rid himself of his Government appointment as head of the British Ministry of Shipping and also conferred with the Directors on the plans for developing the passenger and freight trade of the company in all parts of the world.

In regard to the return of American troops, he said that it is the policy of the British Government to give every possible berth to American soldiers; but the fact must not be lost sight of that over here there is only one problem, whereas in England every dominion and ally is looking for troopships. Practically no passenger ships were built during the war, while the number destroyed by submarines was very large, he said.

"My view," Sir Ashley continued, "which is supported by shipping men on the other side, is that all transportation on the sea is now a joint affair of Great Britain and the United States and will be worked out in that spirit. We recognize the United States as the other person on the sea. The recent drop in freight rates all over the world is all in the interest of a normal resumption of international commerce.

"For the Cunard Line we have mapped out a ten-year agreement, and the type of ship to be built in future will be that of an improved Tuscania and Franconia.

"The one dark cloud abroad is the attitude of labor, which is rather disposed to make trouble and in fact to do anything but work. But this is a natural reaction from the strenuous times they have been through, and the many strikes are said not to have the support of the labor leaders, but to be the result of certain disaffected persons working in the interest of Bolshevism. The authorities seem to have decided not to interfere until it is seen what their leaders can do with the men."

TANK SHIP IN DISTRESS.

The J. M. Guffey, Off Cape Race, Sends Call for Help.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 11.—A wireless call saying the American oil tank steamship J. M. Guffey was taking water in the forehold and was sending out S O S calls was intercepted here today. The vessel was off Cape Race. The tanker, which is owned by the Gulf Refining Company, sailed from Inverness, Scotland, on Jan. 24 for Hampton Roads, Va.

The message also said that the Guffey's steering gear was disabled. The position given, latitude 48.35 North, longitude 48.15 West, would place the tanker over 200 miles southeast of Cape Race.

No further word had been received today from the American tank steamer Communipaw, reported in trouble last night. The American coast guard steamer Tallapoosa was sent from here to the assistance of the Communipaw.

Robert Pringle, Grain Operator.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 11.—Robert Pringle, a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, died today at Altadena, near Pasadena, Cal. No man in the grain trade ever had more friends than "Bob" Pringle. He was a favorite on the Board of Trade and at the Chicago Athletic Association, where he spent most of his time.

He made $1,000,000 in corn more than ten years ago and sank much of it in Alaska mines and other Western ventures, but in the last five years he retrieved his fortune. It was nothing for him to buy or sell 1,000,000 bushels of corn at a time, with only one word or a motion of his hand.

Mr. Pringle was born in Seaforth, Ont., in 1836. He came to Chicago in 1881.

REAR ADMIRAL HOOD DIES IN ANNAPOLIS

Retired Veteran Was a Lieutenant on the Battleship Maine When Blown Up.

URGED LARGE NAVY IN 1913

As Member of General Board He Set Forth Policy Which He Considered Would Guarantee Peace.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 11.—Rear Admiral John Hood, U. S. A., retired, died at the Naval Hospital here today of Bright's disease. Admiral Hood had made his home in Annapolis since his retirement.

Admiral Hood was born in Florence, Ala., fifty-nine years ago, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1879 with second honors in his class. He was commissioned a midshipman June 10, 1890, and was promoted from one rank to another until he became a Rear Admiral Aug. 29, 1916. He was wrecked with the Kearsarge Feb. 21, 1894, and was a Lieutenant on the Maine when she was blown up Feb. 15, 1898. Admiral Hood commanded the Hawk during the Spanish-American war, carried information of the arrival of the Spanish squadron off Santiago to the commander of the Flying Squadron at Cienfuegos, and delivered orders for him to proceed to Santiago, May 23, 1898.

Admiral Hood made the survey for the Pacific cable in 1899-1900 and prepared the data and charts by which the cable was laid. He was Commander of the Elcano in Chinese waters during the Russo-Japanese war, 1903-5, and was Commander of the Tacoma in 1907-9, regulating Haitian and Central American revolutions and elections. Admiral Hood was Commander of the ships at the Naval Academy in 1909-10; commander of the Rhode Island of the Atlantic Fleet in 1910-11, and the Delaware in 1911-12, and won the battle efficiency pennant. From 1912 to 1915 he was a member of the General Board of the navy. In 1915-16 he was Commander of the Texas, winning the battle efficiency pennant and gunnery trophy for the year, and received the "Red E" for excellence in engineering efficiency.

Admiral Hood favored a large navy as a practical guarantee of peace, and in May, 1913, in an article written for the Navy League, while a member of the General Board of the navy, he set forth the policy which he considered would guarantee peace in so far as foreign conflict was concerned. He suggested a fleet of forty-eight first line battleships and an efficient number of destroyers, airplanes, and auxiliaries to reinforce the main fleet.

Francis A. Houston.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—Francis A. Houston, formerly Vice President of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, died last night at his home in Concord. Mr. Houston entered the employ of the company thirty-three years ago as counsel and later became general manager and treasurer. Mr. Houston was 60 years old.

Obituary Notes.

CHARLES E. L. DE VINE, for twenty-eight years employed by the Ward Steamship Company, died on Monday at his home, 255 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, aged 62 years. Mr. De Vine was born in New Zealand, and was a son of General Charles L. De Vine of the British Army.

Dr. GEORGE W. SALTER, a Brooklyn physician and formerly active in the work of the Independence League, was found dead in his office, 376 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, his death apparently being due to heart disease. He was 68 years old.

Mrs. JENNIE V. DONOHUE, active in church and charitable work in Forest Hills and wife of Edward J. Donohue, chief clerk of the marine division of the New York Customs Service, died on Monday.
